THIS is one of the greatest religious paintings of the century, as it is one of the most wonderful creations of the genius of Gustave Dore. He was a painter of the French school, although his unequalled originality and weird fancy made it impossible for him strictly to belong to any school. The scene represents Christ descending the steps leading from the official tribunal of the Roman Government of Jerusalem after his condemnation. The figure of the Savior, erect and commanding, is the centre of attraction. Dore's aspiration turned towards religious subjects, and he became so fascinated with the delineation of the Savior's face that he painted it fifty times; and in no effort of his genius has the heavenly radiance which emanates from the figure of Christ been so apparent as in this sublime and elevated picture. The gaping crowd, some of them friends, others attracted by excitement; the leering Jews pressing forward with uplifted hands; the poor and wretched who adored him expressing the most profound sorrow; the sick whom he had healed and those who still craved his divine help all pressing forward to get one last glance at him, while the Roman soldiers with spears and shields driving them back, are graphically displayed in this wonderful picture. The infinite love and pity on His sacred face, as painted with the inspiration of Dore's pencil, is something beyond all description. The reproduction is a photo etching, engraved with the greatest care, preserving all the beautiful softness and value of the original, and has been pronounced by Art critics to be equal in execution to the marked proofs sold by subscription only, for $100 each, in the Dore Gallery, London.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

HOME CIRCLE.

THE CLEAR PEARL.

BY WILLIAM C. WILKINSON.

Each heart is shrouded many-fold from all
Save her own introspections, and the pure
All-seeing. Nothing intercepts that sight,
Watching the innermost deeps; but clouds of sin,
The false reflexes of her self-deceit.
The uncertain shapes of passions, and the arts
Of Satan have some power to warp and sway
The heart's self-judgments; yet, the wish being strong,
The interior eye can pierce these shroudings, search
The heart of the heart, and know the last intent.

Oh, happy they who, searching so, discern,
In the still depths of spirit, the clear pearl
Of a true thought to do the will of God.

Good Night.

There is a tender sweetness about some of our common phrases of affectionate greeting, simple and unobtrusive as they are, which falls like dew upon the heart. Good night! The little one lisps it as, gowned in white, with shining face and hands, and prayers said, she toddles off to bed. Sisters and brothers exchange the wish, parents and children, friends and friends.

Familiar use has robbed it of its significance to some of us; we repeat it automatically without much thought. But consider. We are as voyagers, putting off from time to time upon an unexplored sea. Our barks of life set sail and go onward into the darkness, and we, asleep on our pillows, take no such care as we do when awake and journeying by daylight. Of the perils of the night, whatever they may be, we take no heed. An unsleeping vigilance watches over us, but it is the vigilance of one stronger and wiser than we, who is the Eternal Good. Good and God spring from the same root, are the same in meaning. "Goodby" is only "God be with you." "Good night" is really "God night," or "God guard the night."

It would be a churlish household in which these gentle forms of speech were ignored or did not exist. Alike the happy and the sorrowful, day by day, may say "Good night."—Harper's Bazar.

Baby-Minded.

Dr. Cuyler says to young men: "Don't ask to be everlastingly amused; it is the sign of a baby-mind when a young man cares for nothing but fun and frolic." If this be so, there must be a large number of "baby-minds" in our churches. Why else this asking by young and old people in the church to be "everlastingly amused?" "Where were you last Sabbath?" "Oh, our sermons are so uninteresting I went elsewhere." "Where were you last prayer meeting night?" "Oh, our meetings are so dull that I went where they have more life." What is this but a demand for spiritual amusement? The preacher, the official brethren, and other members must get up something to keep you amused or you will soon absent yourself. Your "baby-mind" can not content itself in its own church unless it is "everlastingly amused."

Why don't you provide some religious amusement for your pastor, your official brethren, and the other members? Start a psalm, tell your experience, lead in prayer, do all you can to make things lively and happy and attractive in your own church, and then neither you nor anybody else will feel like absenting yourself; perhaps if you provide a little religious amusement yourself, you will not need to depend so much on others for it. Let each contribute his part toward happiness in the church.

The Source of Strength.

My mother's habit was every day, immediately after breakfast, to withdraw for an hour to her own room, and to spend that hour in reading the Bible, in meditation and prayer. From that hour, as from a pure fountain, she drew the strength and sweetness which enabled her to fulfill all her duties, and to remain unruffled by all the worries and pettishnesses which are so often the intolerable trial of narrow neighborhoods. As I think of her life, and of all it had to bear, I see the absolute triumph of Christian grace in the lovely ideal of a Christian lady. I never saw her temper disturbed; I never heard her speak one word of anger, of calumny, or of idle gossip; I never observed in her any sign of a single sentiment unbecoming to a soul which had drunk of the river of the water of life, and which had fed upon manna in the barren wilderness. The world is the better for the passage of such souls across its surface. They may seem to be as much forgotten as the drops of rain which fall into the barren sea, but each drop adds to the volume of refreshful and purifying waters. "The healing of the world is in its nameless saints. A single star seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars break up the night and make it beautiful."—Farrar.

The Supreme Love.

Separated unto Jesus! Not unto a doctrine, nor an experience, nor a company of holy people, nor even unto holiness, but unto Jesus himself. Dead and hidden to all but Christ! The heart closed to all but the "Beloved." Dead to all else because so gloriously alive to Jesus! The crystalline purity of such an experience is beyond expression. If heretofore the heart was dead indeed unto sin by faith's reckonings, now it is slain by love. The holy deadness to the opinions of others is unconstrained and natural, because of the jubilant delight in the smile of Christ, that eclipses all the smiles and frowns of men. Such a one sees no man save "Jesus only." He even forgets to scrutinize himself. The joyous bride of the Heavenly King does not think to search her motives to see that they are all love, so spontaneous is her heart's devotion. And the world is left so far behind that she has forgotten to notice her separation therefrom. Separation unto Christ make holiness natural.—Divine Life.

Between the Lights.

There is an hour, dear to many a house-mother, and beloved of many a little group of happy children—an hour between daylight and dark—too early for gas or lamps, too late for sewing or studying, but neither too late nor too early for gathering around the fire and talking over the day. The meeting-place is perhaps the mother's room, perhaps the library; it is, at all events, a room in the heart of the home, open only to the family, and not to strangers; a room to which guests sometimes come, but come by privilege, not by right.

Here, when school is over, the big boy runs in with his cheery, robust air of out-of-doors, and here, in the slowly falling dusk, he forgets that he is almost a man, and is again his mother's darling, petted, caressed, confided in, and confiding. The mother who prizes her opportunities aright never lets her big boys drift away from her. She appreciates their constant need of her tenderness and her wisdom, and feels that whoever in her little kingdom may be neglected, her son on the threshold of life must not miss her gentle and guiding hand. In the hour between the lights this mother has pleasant talks with her sons, getting glimpses of life from their outlook, uplifting them to her own point of view.

Between the lights another and younger mother cuddles her little one in her arms, sings to him, or tells him stories. Very likely she clusters three or four merry, wide-awake little beings, Edith, Fannie, Helen, Charley, around her knee, and while they rest after the play that engaged them earlier, she remembers for their benefit marvelous legendary tales from Homer, from Virgil, from the folk-lore of Germany and Sweden, finishing up with the ever new, ever delightful stories from the Bible, which, heard a hundred times, grow dearer with every repetition.

It will soon be time for papa's ringing step to be heard on the pavement, for his latch-key to turn in the door. But then the pause between the lights will be past. When papa comes home, light and music and a chorus of welcomes are in order, and the children must hurry to greet him, while mama, in the background, accords him the dearest glance, and says the sweetest word.

One can never utter it too often, that true word of Ruskin's, of all modern men the nearest in character to the prophets of old, that "home is the place of peace, the shelter not only from all injury, but from all terror, doubt, and division. In so far as it is not this, it is not home; it is only a part of the outer world which you have roofed over and lighted a fire in. But so far as it is a sacred place, a vestal temple, a temple of the hearth watched over by household gods, before whose faces none may come but those whom they can receive with love—so far as it is this, and roof and fire are types only of a nobler shade and light, so far it vindicates the name and fulfills the praise of home. And wherever a true wife comes, this home is always around her."

Between the lights! The streets resound with the hurrying tramp of the homeward-thronging crowd. The boats at every ferry are packed with pale, tired men, wistfully setting their faces each away from the factory, the shop, the office, to the door at the opening of which the children will run, and the wife smile, and the baby clap rosy palms.

Under orders all day, there is one spot where man is king, yet subject. He does not need to rule, for his wife rules for him and maintains the sweet order of things with reference to his comfort and delight. Between the lights every suburban railway, every horse car, every rushing elevated train, carries men home to the dear ones for whom they toil so unselfishly that home may be beautiful and attractive.

For thousands of people, women as well as men, the morning and the evening are, so to speak, two distinct days, in one of which they live a public, in the other a private life. Every shop-girl behind the counter, every little cash-girl and boy, every street car conductor and driver, every member of that immense company of people who render service smaller or greater in degree to the body politic, has a world and a life of his or her own, and awaits the hour of relief and reward which in due time comes to those who toil.

Between the lights is sometimes set apart as a hallowed interspace by those who love to think of the whole round world as "bound by gold chains around the feet of God." Away on the other side of the globe there is a friend whose letters are eagerly longed for, and whose absence makes our daily joy imperfect. The friend is a traveler, a soldier, a sailor, an explorer, a missionary, one whom duty or pleasure keeps out of sight, but not out of mind.

Often when no intercourse is possible or anticipated, when even written messages are few and infrequent, the dear one is linked with the most sacred experiences of the heart, because prayed for daily "between the lights."

Happy hour! sweet home hour! Let no fretfulness mar its charm, no melancholy cloud it; let it be the hithest hour in the twenty-four in that kingdom whereof woman is queen.—Harper's Bazar.

"Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

This hymn has been heard in general use for over a hundred years. It has been called "the best poetical expression of the sentiment of Christian brotherhood in the English language." It was written in 1772 by the Rev. John Fawcett, an English Baptist, of Yorkshire. At the age of sixteen he heard Mr. Whitfield preach, and under that sermon he was converted. He went into the ministry of the Baptist Church, and with such zeal and far-reaching sympathy as gave him blessed results.

After serving a little Yorkshire Church for seven years he was called to an important church in London. He preached his farewell sermon, packed his goods in wagons and was ready to go. His loving people gathered about him, and "men, women and children clung around him and his family in perfect agony of soul." Greatly affected by these expressions of sorrow, Dr. Fawcett and his wife sat down on one of the packing-cases and wept bitterly.

"Nor I, either," said the good man; "nor will we go. Unload the wagons and put everything in place where it was before."

The decision was hailed with tears of joy, and a letter of explanation was sent to London. He then took again his Yorkshire work, receiving a salary of less than two hundred dollars a year. He wrote the hymn as a memorial of this experience.—Christian Witness

Pleasure is pursued where it seems most renounced, and aimed at even in self-denial. All voluntary poverty, all the discipline of penance, and the mortifications of religion are undertaken upon this view. A good man is contented with hard usage at present, that he may take his pleasure in the other world. In short, to dispute the goodness of pleasure is to deny experiment, and contradict sensation, which is the highest evidence.—Robert Hall

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

JANE AND ELIZA.

Jane Taylor wrote the following poem, nearly ninety years ago, for the children in England. I wonder if there are any such children in this generation here in America. What do you think about it?

There were two little girls neither handsome nor plain;
One's name was Eliza, the other's was Jane.
There were both of one height, as I've heard people say;
They were both of one age, I believe, to a day.

'Twas fancied by some, who but slightly had seen them,
That scarcely a difference was there between them;
But no one for long in this notion persisted,
So great a distinction there really existed.

Eliza knew well that she could not be pleasing
While fretting and fuming, while sulky or teasing,
And, therefore, in company artfully tried—
Not to break her head habits, but only to hide.

So when she was out, with much labor and pain,
She contrived to look almost as pleasant as Jane;
But then you might see that in forcing a smile,
Her mouth was uneasy and ached all the while.

And in spite of her care, it would sometimes befall
That some cross event happened to ruin it all;
And because it might chance that her share was the worst,
Her temper broke loose and her dimples dispersed.

But Jane, who had nothing she wanted to hide,
And, therefore, these troublesome arts never tried,
Had none of the care and fatigue of conceiving,
But her face always showed what her good heart was feeling.

At home or abroad there was peace in her smile,
A cheerful good nature that needed no guile.
And Eliza worked hard, but could never obtain
The affection that freely was given to Jane.

To Japan.

ON THE PACIFIC.

The Empress of Japan is a floating palace to a passenger with a first-class ticket. The dining-room is for rich viands and an occasional concert; the library for reading, writing or lounging; the deck for an occasional game of cricket, sitting and gazing at the sunset, or walking and talking with companions from the ends of the earth. The smoking-room and card-table have a place. But if he be in his berth asleep at midnight, perhaps the great fog-horn will awaken and remind him that he is at the mercy of the waves and the mariner, unless, like Bishop Key, he puts his case directly into the hands of Providence.

Excepting the servants, who were Chinese, and a gambling lot of Chinese passengers in their end of the ship, nearly all on board were English-speaking. Few children were along. I made the acquaintance of one little boy whose father is a custom's officer in Shanghai. He had been in Ireland a year, and went to school there a little. His talk, in the main, was about fine sleeping cars of America and the great hand-stand at Shanghai. American children, who have a good home and regular school, ought to feel greatly blessed.

For thirteen days the ocean presented to the view only one distant ship, a few whales, sea gulls, and flying-fish. At the end of that time the beautiful islands of Japan and peerless Fuji San came in sight.

And, now, with my next letter, you may imagine yourself in Matsuyame, which is a fair sample of a native city.

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Bright Boys Wanted.

BY REV. JESSE S. GILREAT, A. M.

Going down the street one day, this is the sign I saw in a store window: "Bright boys wanted." It set me thinking, and I said to myself, "Yes, that is it exactly." Bright boys are wanted everywhere; boys with honest hearts, willing hands, swift feet, and clean mouths; boys that are not thin and pale from cigarette smoking; that have never seen the inside of a saloon, and who are willing to begin at the bottom round of the ladder and work their way up. Such boys are wanted everywhere. Schools and seminaries want them for pupils. Merchants want them in their employ. They are wanted in every honest trade and calling. "What are boys good for any way?" said a gentleman to a little fellow, and promptly came the reply, "To make men of."

It is a terrible fact that the saloon wants boys, boys to make drunkards of. A boy had a strange dream. He dreamed that the leading merchant in the town in which he lived came to him and said, "My boy, I am getting old and feeble. I want you to come and take my store." Then the physician came to him and said, "I want you to take charge of my practice, for I must soon retire." The judge who lived in the town then said, "My son, you must occupy my place upon the bench." Last came the town drunkard and said, "I must soon die and go down to a dishonored grave. I wish that you should take my place." The boy awoke in a fright, and pondered well the meaning of his strange dream. Thus do good and evil, the church and the saloon, Christ and Satan strive for the possession of our boys.

Bright boys are wanted to prepare themselves for the Christian ministry. The day has gone by, if there ever was such a day, when the stolid, 'goody-goody' boy was deemed ideal timber to make a minister of. It requires brains as well as piety to be a preacher of the gospel. It is so with every other profession and calling. Bright boys are wanted to make lawyers, doctors, merchants, and engineers out of. If bright boys are in such demand, it may be well to inquire what are the things that tend to make boys bright. Good books and papers will wonderfully help in this direction. A taste for reading of the right kind is worth a great deal to any boy or young man. "Read and you will know" was the constant reply of a very busy mother to a boy who was always asking questions. The boy followed his mother's advice, and became one of the wise and learned men of his generation. He who has mastered the art of reading has in his possession the key to all knowledge. Good company helps to make boys bright. Try and associate with those who are wiser than yourself. Solomon says: "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise, but a companion of fools shall be destroyed."—Epworth Herald.

THE BIBLE.

BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

The great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy.
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand.
Samuel and numerous Kings appear,
Whose Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra and Nehemiah now,
Esther, the beauteous mourner, shew.
Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms.
Ecclesiastes thou comes on,
And the sweet Songs of Solomon.
Isaiah, Jeremiah, then
With Lamentations take the pen.
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres,
Swell Joel, Amos, Obadiah's.
Next Jonah, Micah, Nahum come,
And lofty Habakkuk finds room;
While Zephaniah, Haggai cells,
Rapt Zechariah builds his walls,
And Malachi with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Matthew, Mark, and Luke and John,
Acts of Apostles follow on;
The Romans and Corinthians learn,
Galatians with Ephesians turn.
Philippians and Colossians next,
With Thessalonians have the text.
To Timothy the truth is shown,
To Titus and to Philemon.
The Hebrews has Paul's parting words,
When James, the brother of our Lord,
And Peter and beloved John
Take up the strain and hear it on.
Jude's solemn words great things reveal,
And Revelation sets the seal.

MR. EDITOR: As I have seen but a few letters in the ADVOCATE lately, I thought I would write one. I went all the little cousins to write one, because the editor gives us a column to fill, and we ought to try and fill it. I am not going to school now, but think I will start soon. My teacher's name is Mr. George Lee. Mr. S. P. Richardson is the superintendent of our Sunday-school. Mr. W. M. Sullivan is our preacher again for this year, and we all like him very much. My papa is still clerk at the union store in the town of Franklinton. I must come to a close for this time by asking a question: Where is the word "palm-tree" found in the Bible? I remain, as ever,

Your unknown friend, MATTIE SYLVEST.

Gorman, La.

MR. EDITOR: As there are so many nice letters from the little cousins, I thought I would write one. I never see any letters from this part of the country. I am a little girl eight years old. I have two brothers and one sister all younger than myself. I go to school to Prof. Harden. He is a good teacher. I like him very much. He has a fine school. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and grandma is my teacher. She has a very large class of little girls and boys. We have preaching once a month. Our preacher is Bro. R. S. Collier. We all like him very much. For fear I will weary you with my first letter, I will close, hoping this will not reach the waste-basket.

Slang Words and Phrases.

"Dun" is a word now whose meaning is known to everyone who understands the English language. About the beginning of the century a constable in England named John Dun became celebrated as a first-class collector of bad accounts. When others would fail to collect a bad debt, Dun would be sure to get it out of the debtor. It soon passed into a current phrase that when a person owed money and did not pay when asked, he would have to be "Dunned." Hence it soon became common in such cases to say, "You will have to Dun So-and-so if you wish to collect your money." Until the nomination of Franklin Pierce for the presidency the word "outsider" was unknown. The Committee on Credentials came in to make its report, and could not get into the hall because of the crowd of people who were not members of the convention. The chairmen of the convention asked if the committee were ready to report, and the chairman of the committee answered, "Yes, Mr. Chairman; but the committee is unable to get inside on account of the crowd and pressure of the outsiders." The newspaper reporters took up the word and used it. "You are a daisy," is used by Dickens in David Copperfield, in the sense of calling a person daisy in a way to express admiration, and at the same time to laugh at one's credulity. Steerforth says to young Copperfield, "David, my daisy, you are so innocent of the world! Let me call you my daisy, as it is so refreshing to find one in these corrupt days so innocent and unsophisticated. My dear Copperfield, the daisies of the field are not fresher than you." "Too thin" was given currency by the Hon. Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia, in the United States Congress, in 1870. Some members has made a reply to Mr. Stephens, and the latter had his chair wheeled out into the aisle, and said, in that shrill, piping voice which always commanded silence, "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's arguments are gratuitous assertions made up of whole cloth. And cloth, sir, so gauzy and thin that it will not hold water. It is entirely too thin, sir."—Christian at Work.

Had Philosophy on Her Side.

"Spell toes," said the mother, who was teaching her little daughter, seven years old, to spell.

"T-o-z-e," answered the child.

"No, dear, that's not right. T-o-e-s spells toes."

"I know it, but you can not go by the sound."

Then, in order to enforce this proposition, the mother called on her daughter to spell froze.

"F-r-o-e-s," said the child.

"No, you're wrong again. This time we do use the z and spell the word i-r-o-z-e."

"Huh!" grunted the child.

"Now, spell rose," said the mother.

The child hesitated. Finally she said: "I don't know whether to say r-o-z-e or r-o-e-s, and really I don't know that either way would be right."

"Spell it r-o-s-e," said the mother, "though there is another word pronounced just like it that's spelled r-o-e-s. That word is the name of the spawn of fishes."

The poor little child looked very miserable.

"Just one more word," said the mother. "Tell me how you spell blows."

"Well," said the child, who had had quite enough nonsense, as she viewed it, from her mother, and had suddenly made up her mind to pay back in kind, "I spell it three ways. I spell it b-l-o-s-e for breakfast, b-l-o-e-e for dinner, and b-l-o-z-e for supper."

"I spell it b-l-o-w-s all the time," said the mother.

The child said nothing for a minute or two. Then, looking up, she solemnly remarked: "I think, mama, that the English language was made for persons very, very well educated."—Interior.

CURES:

LA GRIPPE.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunningham, editor Sunday-school literature M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me the second time last Spring. One bottle of Germeteur relieved me as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

RHEUMATISM.

New Orleans, August 20, 1892.

We are happy to testify to the value of King's Royal Germeteur, which we have found most efficacious in all rheumatic affections.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

BLOOD POISON.

Old Sore, Reported by Newspaper.

The many friends of H. H. Bigg, our former townsman, will be glad to hear that the old chronic sore on his leg, that gave him so much trouble, is entirely well. He says that Royal Germeteur did the work.—News, Owen, Kentucky.

CATARRH.

Rev. Dr. Hawthorne's Experience with Germeteur.

I am free from Catarrh. I believe that I could get a certificate to this effect from any competent physician. I have used no medicine within the last six months except King's Royal Germeteur. My health is better than it has been in 30 years.

DYSPEPSIA.

A daughter of Mr. M. E. Abbey, of Atlanta, Ga., was cured of a long standing case of dyspepsia after using all manner of remedies.

THE LITTLE ILLS OF LIFE.

Nothing will relieve burns, carbuncles, boils, chilblains, eczema and cutaneous irritations of all kinds, like Germeteur externally applied every two minutes until relief is obtained.

LINCOLN—Sister ELIZABETH LINCOLN, daugh...er of John and Elizabeth Toomer, was born ...ear Charleston, S. C., Oct. 1, 1822. In her in...ncy her mother was taken from her by the ...and of death. When she was about two years ...f age her father moved to the vicinity of Co...lumbus, Miss. In her early womanhood, April ...8, 1837, she was happily married to Mr. Nim...od McGuire. They resided in the counties of ...Winston, Madison, Harrison and Hancock, ...Miss., for several years. At Pearlington Mr. ...McGuire established a large lumber business. ...While residing at Pearlington, Miss., in 1854, ...he united with the Methodist Church. In the ...year 1859 they moved to Ouachita parish, La., ...and settled at Trenton. On March 27, 1862, she ...was called to widowhood by the death of her ...husband. Several years after his death she ...was again happily married to Mr. Josiah Lin...coln. After a few short years she was called to ...widowhood again. Sister Lincoln departed ...this life Nov. 3, 1892, having lived her three...score and ten years.

Sister Lincoln was a true wife and a tender, ...loving mother. The graces of the Divine ...Spirit were seen and exemplified in her life ...in an unusual degree. She was especially ...characterized as a sympathizing, forbearing ...and forgiving Christian. Truly her life was a ...demonstration of God's power to save from sin. ...She sleeps in Christ, and is awaiting the call of ...God to take part in the first resurrection, and ...enter into the full fruition of heavenly rest. ...She leaves two daughters and several grand...children in the happy knowledge that their ...loss is her eternal gain. HER PASTOR.

Monroe, La.

JONES—WILLIE GRAYSON, daughter of Wil...liam L. and Bessie C. Jones, was born in Black ...Hawk, Miss., July 19, 1883, and died here Feb. ...9, 1893.

Though brief, and for us terminating all too ...soon, hers was a beautiful life. In infancy she ...was baptized by Bishop Galloway, and before ...she could articulate learned to lisp the Savior's ...name. As she grew older she received the ...most careful religious training at the hands of ...her affectionate mother and grandmother, and ...at the early age of seven became a member of ...the church. Young she was, but that she was ...a Christian I have not the slightest doubt. Un...till seized by the fatal malady that caused ...her death, she was an unusually healthy and ...vivacious child. In the month of April—nearly ...a year ago—her affliction began. Continuous, ...and attended from its incipiency by much suf...fering, she bore it with a patience and fortitude ...like surprising and heroic. Never did she ...complain. Through it all scarcely a murmur ...escaped her lips. Gradually wasting away, ...growing weaker every hour, the long-expected ...end was as quiet and peaceful as the close of a ...cloudless Summer day. Farewell, sweet child! ...You have not lived in vain. Those of us who ...knew you are better for your having been. ...Prompted by a fond affection, we would fain ...have kept you with us; but we know that be...yond conception you have profited by the ...translation. For to the prepared death is not ...loss, but gain; not abandonment, but realiza...tion; not a minister of vengeance awakening ...terror, but an angel of peace bringing deliver...ance. R. A. MEEK.

Valden, Miss.

WARE—Miss BETTIE LUELLA. Each flower ...has its own season, its morning and its evening, ...its sunshine and its showers, its mission and its ...glory. As with the flowers, so with God's dear ...children. The tender bud which forms the ...subject of this sketch had its bright morning ...on Nov. 29, 1875, and its peaceful evening on ...Dec. 22, 1892, spending the entire day of its ...beautiful existence in Attala county, Miss., and ...mainly in the little town of Sallis, so well ...known for its generous hospitality.

Bettie was a pure, sweet girl, possessing in a ...very high degree the lamb-like spirit of her ...precile mother, Mrs. Martha Ware, always ...pleasant and sweetly sincere. She gave her ...tender heart to God while her beautiful locks ...were yet fresh with the dews of childhood, and ...at once attached herself to the M. E. Church, ...South, in which she ever lived a child of God, ...and from which she entered the church triumph...ant to live forever.

Her last lingering moments were measured ...by strains of sweet music from her own pure ...heart. Her illness was of short duration. The ...messenger came in haste and would not be de...tained, although implored by loving hearts ...and skilled physicians.

"Sister, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the Summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening
When it floats among the trees."

WATTS AGNES HARVEY, daughter of Walter ...and Serena Watts, died Jan. 29, 1893, aged six...teen months. The affections of the fond parents ...were placed on their baby, but God saw fit to ...remove the precious flower from earth and ...transplanted it in heaven.

May God, in his goodness, bring papa and ...mama to enjoy a sweet reunion in the sweet ...by-and-by with little Agnes!

HER GRANDMA.

HUTCHISON—BASCOM BRICE HUTCHISON was born in Claiborne county, Miss., June 6, 1849; died Dec. 11, 1892. He was married Feb. 19, 1878; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1876.

Bro. Hutchison was truly a man of God, and, though his sufferings were great, he ever had the grace to say, "Thy will be done." He leaves behind him a devoted Christian wife and six children to mourn his loss. Bro. Hutchison has been an invalid for several years, not confined to the house at all times, but scarcely able to attend to business. He spent much of his time in religious meetings and in preparation for his transit from this to a better and happier life above; and even now it makes the writer's heart rejoice when he thinks of the times of rejoicing he has had with that Christian family. His home was the preacher's home, and it makes me sad indeed when I remember that we can meet him there no more. We must bid him adieu for the present, we can meet on earth no more, but we hope to strike hands on the other shore, where we will part no more from those we love.

May the everlasting arms encircle the loved ones he leaves behind, until one by one they, too, shall pass over the river, and with him who has gone before rest under the shade of the trees! G. A. GUICE.

HILTON—MARTHA JANE HILTON, wife of Henry Hilton, was born April 18, 1863, and died Jan. 10, 1893. She was married to H. B. Hilton, Dec. 24, 1878, with whom she lived happy until the Master said, "Come up higher," where she will patiently wait for the husband and six orphan children she leaves behind. She was received into the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen, and remained a faithful and devoted member to the time of her death. She loved her pastors, always occupied her place in church when not unavoidably prevented. She was a loving wife and devoted mother.

Sister Hilton was born and raised in Claiborne county, Miss., where she leaves many friends to mourn her loss. May he who is father to the fatherless be also a mother to the motherless, and may the shadow of his wings ever rest over the husband and six helpless children she leaves behind! G. A. GUICE.

NESOM—Died, Mrs. ANGELINE NESOM (nee Mullins), at her home in St. Helena parish, La., Feb. 3, 1893. Sister Nesom was born July 28, 1832; was married to B. B. Nesom, July 7, 1853, whom she survived fifteen years; joined the Baptist Church in 1858, and "remained faithful to her trust even unto death."

She was a faithful wife until her husband's death; was a kind and loving mother both to her own children and her step-children, giving them the benefit of her maternal counsel until she conquered her last enemy, "death." Of her own children, she leaves four daughters, all of whom are professing Christians, and one son, besides many other relatives and friends to finish life without her.

At the time of her death she was a member of Shiloh Baptist Church, St. Helena parish. May the Lord bind up the broken hearts!

REV. E. D. SCHILLING.

BOYD—Mrs. MARY BOYD (nee Ward) was born in Rankin county, Miss., Feb. 10, 1872; was married to Columbus Boyd, Feb. 7, 1889, with whom she lived happily until her death, which occurred at her home, Jan. 9, 1893.

Sister Boyd gave her heart to God and united with the M. E. Church, South, about six years ago. She lived a devoted Christian life, and died in the full triumphs of a living faith, her only regret was having to leave her dear ones behind. May God bless the bereaved ones, and especially the two little motherless children! May the blessed Jesus fold the dear lambs to his breast! Grieve not, dear ones, for the one that is gone, for she has left this world of sorrow and has gone home to her Savior, and is now "at the beautiful gates waiting and watching for you." PAUL D. HARDINO, P. C.

Pelahatchie, Miss.

WARMACK—The third day of November, 1892, the Lord Jesus plucked a beautiful little flower from the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Warmack, on Yazoo river, in the person of their little daughter NELLIE. Little Nellie was born Sept. 30, 1882, and at the age of five years, she, a healthy and charming babe, making the home bright by her presence, was seized by disease which placed her in a helpless condition, and till her death she was the constant care of her loving mother and grandmother.

Father and mother, be faithful; your little daughter is in a realm where sickness and pain are unknown and where the "flowers bloom forever." God comfort your home, and in his own good time take those left to be an unbroken family in heaven. F.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacrox, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1082 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Acoording to the Haytian press, the late elections in the black republic were a simple farce. Hippolyte, the President, named his own official candidates for congress in every legislative district, and, by the rigid application of his shotgun policy at the polls, procured their "election."

Let us take heed; for mercy is like a rainbow which God set in the clouds to remember mankind; we must never look for it after night, and it shines not in the other world. If we refuse mercy here, we shall have justice to eternity. —Bishop Taylor.

Learning gives us a fuller conviction of the imperfections of our nature; which, one would think, might dispose us to modesty: for the more a man knows, the more he discovers his ignorance.—Collier.

"The World in the Church," by Rev. John T. Sawyer, D. D.

WHAT IS SAID OF THIS EXCELLENT BOOK.

"It is good to the use of edifying. I wish that all our people would read it and learn the unchangeable attitude of our church."—Bishop A. W. Wilson.

"I am glad you wrote it. I wish it were in every Methodist family. It ought to do a great deal of good."—Bishop A. G. Haygood.

"I loaned my copy to a venerable minister who has been preaching nearly seventy years. He read it at a sitting, and, on handing it back, pronounced it very good, and rejoiced that its publication betokened a return to the old paths."—Rev. D. Morton, D. D., Church Extension Secretary.

"It contains seventeen chapters, everyone of which is worthy to be read."—Rev. E. E. Hoss, D. D., Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate.

"The author puts his case very strongly and readably, and quotes a good many strong words from various prominent members of the church."—New Orleans Picayune.

"It is worthy."—Wesleyan.

"A timely contribution to the literature of spiritual religion. It ought to be widely read."—Epworth Methodist.

"In seventeen well-digested chapters Dr. Sawyer has vigorously covered the whole ground and left little more to be said from the standpoint of Methodism and of evangelical Christianity."—Rev. John J. Tigert, D. D.

"It is a valuable contribution to the literature on the subject of which it treats. May 'The World in the Church' promote the cause of the church in the world, but not of it."—Rev. William V. Tudor, D. D.

"It should have a wide circulation and extensive sale."—Birmingham Methodist.

"We recommend it."—The Way of Faith.

"A great deal of good will come to the church if that pamphlet is widely circulated and read. It ought to end some controversies. Many a preacher would be better armed for the pastorate if he would read it."—Rev. W. A. Candler, D. D., President of Emory College.

"A splendid pamphlet."—Tennessee Methodist.

"It should be read by every Christian in the land."—Episcopal Methodist.

"The reading of this book, pondering the facts presented, weighing the Scriptures quoted, ought, and, no doubt, will, touch a chord in many who have grown worldly minded, induce them to return to the old paths, and henceforth live a more devoted and consecrated life."—Central Methodist.

"It is clear, strong and vigorous."—Memphis Christian Advocate.

"It is a strong presentation of the dangers to the church from the strong tide of worldliness which is setting toward it, and he proves by quoting from many writers in our own and other churches that he is no alarmist."—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"This little book is 'straight goods' from beginning to end. Dr. Sawyer is not dyspeptic. He only furnishes the facts, and leaves the reader to take care of his own digestion."—Rev. Claude L. Chilton.

"The author is earnest and his soul is full of fire. Every Methodist ought to read his burning words."—Messiah's Herald.

"Preachers should sow it broadcast over their charges, and Epworth Leagues make it a text-book."—Rev. T. K. Faunt Le Roy.

"This is good reading any day in the week, and we would be glad to see it in every Methodist home. To read it and catch its spirit would add so much to the peace and power of the church."—Rev. Geo. Needham, Editor Rocky Mountain Methodist.

"An admirable book for pastors to place in the hands of their young people, and older ones, too, who exhibit worldly tendencies."—Rev. Dr. S. K. Cox, Editor of Roanoke Methodist.

"Dr. Sawyer has put forth a strong arm to 'rescue the perishing.' Himself an original and forceful writer, burning with ministerial solicitude, he brings to his aid the utterances of the great and good, the living and dead; ringing out an alarm that should touch the heart of the church, and call her effectually to the old paths."—Rev. Thos. J. Dunoan.

"A vigorous pamphlet, fortified by church deliverances and citations from Scripture, and selections from the writings of able men of his denomination, and written from the standpoint of a Methodist of the unalterable Wesleyan brand!"—Rev. R. Q. Mallard, D. D., Editor S. W. Presbyterian.

"The book was read with glowing interest. It ought to be in every home in all this wide land."—Gilderoy.

"Whoever has God's work at heart will be encouraged by this book to turn his back on all Christian half-doing and hollowness, and to work earnestly for the salvation of his soul. Get the book."—Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D. D., Editor Familien Freund.

"It is well that Dr. Sawyer has written on this old theme; well that he has been apeolfic in his charges, and their location."—Rev. Franklin N. Parker.

"No clearer, stronger treatment of the subject has ever been made. Dr. Sawyer writes out of his heart and experience, and his book will awaken to thought and activity where it is most needed."—Rev. Wm. Wimberly, Editor of Oklahoma Christian Advocate.

"It is a most timely publication. As never before, the church is in conflict with the spirit of worldliness. Like a strong man, it has crossed the threshold of the church, and disputes the possession of her most spiritual things. This little book is receiving general commendation for its brave and sober treatment of this matter. Everywhere such correction as it suggests, and the spirit of the gospel and Methodism afford, should be tried."—Rev. M. B. DuBose, D. D., Editor Pacific Methodist Advocate.

"It is needed and is suited to our times. Dr. Sawyer has done his work well."—Florida Christian Advocate.

"The World in the Church" can be had from F. D. Van Valkenburgh, No. 106 Camp street, New Orleans, La. It costs twenty-five cents, and, upon receipt of that amount, Van Valkenburgh will mail it to any address.

When I see the heavenly sun buried under earth in the evening of the day, and in the morning to find a resurrection to his glory, why (think I) may not the sons of heaven, buried in the earth, in the evening of their days, expect the morning of their glorious resurrection? Each night is but the past day's funeral, and the morning his resurrection; why then should our funeral sleep be other than our sleep at night? Why should we not as well awake to our resurrection, as in the morning? I see night is rather an intermission of day than a deprivation, and death rather borrows our life of us than robs us of it. Since, then, the glory of the sun finds a resurrection, why should not the sons of glory.—Warwick.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Excellent exhibits of Louisiana cotton and rice for the Chicago Fair are now assured, and steps are also being taken to prepare a suitable sugar exhibit.

Sentences were passed on the men convicted of poisoning non-union workmen at Homestead, Pa. Two men were sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, one to five years' imprisonment and the other to three years'.

A terrible cyclone passed through the southwestern portion of Clark county, Miss., on March 3, and destroyed nearly everything within its path. Paohuta, Marion and Toomsuba were the greatest sufferers. Many churches, stores and residences were wrecked. It is reported that two children were killed.

Steps are being taken in New York to have a botanic garden for that city, which shall rival the famous gardens of the old world capitals. The New York Botanic Garden Association has been incorporated for that end, having Cornelius Vanderbilt for president, and a number of New York's heaviest capitalists among its members.

The Kansas Legislature, composed of a Populite Senate and Republican House, has passed, by a large majority, a bill providing that there shall be submitted to the people at the next general election a proposition to confer the elective franchise on woman. The vote in the House stood 94 to 7, and in the Senate 28 to 5. It has gone to the governor for his signature.

Mr. Cleveland was, on March 4, successfully inaugurated as President of the United States. Forty thousand people marched in an imposing military and civic parade. The governors of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Louisiana and Wisconsin participated in the national ceremonies.

Avoyelles parish, La., was visited last week by a terrible cyclone, which left death and destruction in its wake. Its general course was from west to northwest. Never in the history of this parish has such destruction been seen. Its path presents a scene which baffles description. Scattered timber and uprooted trees now mark the place where once large residences stood. Two persons were killed and about fifty were wounded.

Steps are being taken in New York to have a botanic garden for that city, which shall rival the famous gardens of the old world capitals. The New York Botanic Garden Association has been incorporated for that end, having Cornelius Vanderbilt for president, and a number of New York's heaviest capitalists among its members.

It looks as though New York were really going to build a monument to Gen. Grant after all. Contracts for the granite work were awarded last week and call for the completion of the monument in 1895. Besides being a memorial to the General, the monument is to be made to serve as a repository of the autographs of all the surviving veterans of the war. The G. A. R. will set itself the task of collecting the signatures on parchment.

FOREIGN.

Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour have for two weeks had their agents travelling through Ireland and collecting statistics, which will be produced by these two unionist leaders at the great anti-home rule demonstration in Albert Hall, on March 15.

Advices received from the province of Astrachan, in southwestern Russia, adjoining the Caspian Sea, are to the effect that a strange epidemic of a character as yet unrecognized is killing thousands of people in the trans-Caspian region. It was partly by this route that cholera entered Russia last year.

A serious collision involving the probable loss of a number of lives occurred on March 3 in the English Channel. A vessel called the Cacique was sunk by an unknown steamer. Ten of the survivors have landed at Dover in a boat, and it is stated that thirteen others are missing, and it is feared have been lost.

In western Russia and eastern Germany enormous loss of property from flood is reported. In Hungary, also, the rivers are overflowing their banks, submerging villages and sweeping away thousands of cattle. The small river Raab has swollen to three times its usual size and has wrecked some 300 houses in the city of Raab and the surrounding districts. More than 50,000 acres of agriculture land have been laid waste.

The programme of the cholera conference, to be held at Dresden, is still the subject of communication between the governments that will be represented. The questions to be discussed will require the presence of scientists. Measures will be considered defining suspected or infected districts, forming a quarantine system, the disinfection of goods and passengers, frontier regulations, the inspection of railways and the navigation of rivers.

The Mormon colonists who arrived in Mexico some months ago have been received rather coldly by the Mexicans generally, to a degree that many refuse to sell the Mormons such things as they are obliged to buy. Religious prejudice is largely the motive for the attitude of the natives, but also because the Mormons brought with them nearly everything needed by them, buying as little from the natives as possible, which created a decided prejudice against the new comers.

The people of Sandgate, county Kent, England, were aroused, on March 4, by the rocking of the houses and loud rumblings underground. Walls split, ceilings fell, foundations sank and roofs fell. As the inhabitants fled to the streets they found large rents in the ground and were almost overcome by noxious vapors. Everybody supposed the town was being shaken by an earthquake, and as the rumblings continued hundreds fled in a panic to the nearest towns. Many cottages had been wrecked completely and the better built houses had been cracked and thrown out of plumb, so that they could not be occupied with safety.

Antipodal Theologies.

A writer, Mr. Seward, in Christian Thought, recently fancied himself in the dark region of the lost. After a stay of some duration, ascending, freighted with a fine volume of Hadesian Theology, he summarizes its contents, which are identical with his experience and observation there.

Among other things learned from the active inhabitants of Tartarus, he tells of the deep despair on part of Satan occasioned by the advent, life and work of Christ on earth. This despair was of so profound a nature as to cause a period of sulky inertia in the arch-enemy. His cheerfulness was not at all restored until, by the recital of experiments tried, Dissimulus, a satellite, made it clear to him that arrangements could be brought about on the earth which would go far toward neutralizing the effects of the divine work. This arrangement consisted in developing the spirit of variance and discussion in matter of doctrine—in giving more attention to the Epistles of Paul and others than to the life and words of our blessed Savior. Sects, denominations, creeds, let there rise many of these—let them lock shields, for horns, and lustily hack and gore. In fine, any and every diversion from the person and unifying influence of Christ himself was a matter to evoke applause in Hades and bring back the cheers to the satanic cheek.

Roused to effort at learning of success already achieved in this direction, Satan gave special orders that discussion of doctrine, of anything in the warmth and mists of which the person and work of Christ is eclipsed, should be eagerly encouraged and developed; and to the accomplishment of these things he engaged the best of the infernal talent.

The fancy of the writer is widefringed, and its results ingeniously stated, in this readable and startling speculation as to diabolic theology. Fancy, shaped and colored by fact, arrests the present step and invites to consideration of present surroundings, propos to—nothing, let us say.

I am one who, in health, stands upon heights, and, with clear eyes, sees the splendid sweeps of human capacity, and humanity happily cultivating its fields, harvesting its crops, painting its landscapes, studying its libraries. God has never seemed cheerful and wise to invert the longnette, and thus make the actors into pigmies, doing little things, small in everything accomplished. I would always rather hunt elephants than ephemeræ, admire Bacilians than bacteria.

But there are conditions in the church, universally existing, thriving, developing, which cause hesitation and reflection, even to a wholesome optimist. To say these conditions are chronic does not imply that the physician (minister) is to strap his case and depart, saying nothing can be done. This can not be the case. There are chronic conditions in the church, for they can be healed. No physicians can close the medicine-case, for the business of the minister is to keep open the dispensary and constantly apply the remedies. The evils are removable one way or other. Here the touch of a hand drives the spirit forth; there is one whose expulsion must be the result of prayer and fasting. Applications are to vary as widespread as the distance suggested between the finger touch and the wrestling prayer.

It may be asked, Why not now catalogue these "conditions" which have caused this writing and jostled an optimist into the place of the pessimist? But to what end? Every preacher knows of conditions in his charge which cramp the free vigor of a church and check its movement forward. They do not need cataloguing in cold type; they are written deeply within the heart.

What is a more pathetic disclosure than this, often stated in the church papers: "My people is an excellent people; but it needs educating along certain lines."

"Needs educating." Yes; but his predecessor and his predecessor's predecessor have each made the same statement, and each undertaken the "education" aforesaid, with the same people. It would appear amusing to see this honestly, self-confident remark so often repeated, were it not for the sad disclosure that it makes of the abortive effort of others going before. It would seem amusing, this implied purpose of a new pastor to do all neglected and necessary "educating," if the same words sent in by the next new pastor did not discover the effort of the other to have been a failure.

No; there is no need to catalogue conditions which are eating away the spiritual prosperity of my charge and of yours. I have been pastor of your charge; you have served mine. My first letter to the paper may have stated the old trite saying: "My people is in much superior, but—needs educating upon Christian giving, various applications of the Golden Rule," etc. And this was said of the charge you served last, concerning which you had said similar words, and set to work to remedy the matters requiring "education."

The moral of it all lies here: The ministry recognizes and confesses conditions in its charges which "need"—stating it mildly—"education."

With the light of Mr. Seward's discoveries spread across them, we may find that these matters, so pestilent, concerning which we are about resigned to leave them as necessary, if heavy, ballast these "poiuts," as we say, on which our people need "educating," are no more and no less than articles of the Hadesian theology. All of them clear-cut and intelligently numbered by the agencies having them in hand. They form portion of the satanic Confession of Faith; their force measured, their influences accurately gauged, their values fully recorded.

It is not improbable that we are striving feebly, if striving at all, against conditions which constitute the doctrine of the damned, the cream of the devilish scheme inserted and running parallel with the precious teachings of the Man of Galilee in the church. And it is absolutely sure that the Lord we serve will furnish unto each, on proper demand, means with which to dissever the two intertangled theologies; munitions with which to destroy these fruits of evil in the church, against which our people "needs to be educated."

Bishop Haygood's Removal.

MR. EDITOR: The accompanying note from Bishop Haygood will bring no surprise to those who have witnessed the terrible struggle for life which has been going on in his home in this city for the past two years. Indeed, some of us saw that it must come to this long before he did, so intent was he upon staying at his post.

I am glad thus to witness, in behalf of a brave man and a patient, devoted preacher's wife, that they have made an honest effort, and only quit the field when to remain would seem to invite disaster.

Our disappointment is great, our loss greater, but our love for them greatest of all. Under the circumstances we would not have them remain, but send them back to Georgia in the hope that the conditions which nourished that beautiful life so long may be used of God to perpetuate it through many years to come.

Your brother,

W. B. STRADLEY.

1952 Lovelace Ave., Los Angeles, Cal., March 2, 1893.

My Dear Brother: In the early part of 1891 we had correspondence which issued in my removal to this city. We reached Los Angeles the last week in June of that year, with our hearts set on ending our days here, hoping to be useful on this coast.

As you know, my wife was sick in the Fall after our coming. Carrying her in my arms to the carriage, I took her to Georgia via the City of Mexico. Returning January, 1892, with a number of noble young preachers to reinforce our work, she seemed to be well again. She was taken sick again in February, and from that time till August she could not walk alone, nor stand upon her feet. This Winter she has suffered again, and is helpless most of the time.

Dr. Colbourn, who has had her case in hand from the beginning, says to me: "Your wife can not get well here; she can not live here. Take her back where she lived so long and had health. Make a thorough test. If she gets well, do not bring her back."

This section, so salubrious for most people, is bad for her. She was born into the itinerancy, and for nearly thirty-four years has cheered me in all my work—murmuring never. Her needs are now law.

People at our age do not move for the fun of it. I take her to Oxford, Ga., and for a time she will be cared for in the home of Dr. W. W. Evans—in the house where I first saw her in 1857.

The going is a bitter disappointment to me, as is my inability to do what my brethren have asked in matter of sorrow. No plan made for personal work in the State have I been able to carry out; but I have done what I could, and am content.

I am more than ever sure of the usefulness and absolute need of our church on this coast. Henceforth, what is possible to me in forwarding its work, I will gladly do.

What must be done in such a case as ours were better done quickly. We start March 9, and should reach Oxford in four days, where my postoffice will be.

For the kindness of our people here, who have furnished us a delightful home, and who have treated us as if we were their blood-kin, we will ever be grateful. I am disappointed in nothing except the breakdown of my wife's health.

We leave a son and daughter—with her two little girls—here. Our children love our church, which they joined before they were ten years old. May our church be a blessing to them!

Your brother,

ATTICUS G. HAYGOOD.

Must We Lose Our Children?

BY BISHOP J. C. KEENER.

One of the first things I remember about church-going is the being asleep in Light Street Church, Baltimore, during a love-feast, with my head on my mother's lap. It was a nice place, and, I doubt not, a sweet sleep. It was a proper place; I was where I ought to have been, and my mother had brought me along on the strength of her ticket. This was rather more than going to church, because only members were admitted. All boys like to get in where most boys are kept out. Dr. Bunting, when twelve years old, was refused by the old brother who kept the door, though he came with his mother. "Jabez," he said, "you have been coming in here for a long time on your mother's ticket, but you are now old enough to have one of your own." His mother said to him, when she came home, "I do not know what you think of it, Jabez, but to me it seems an awful thing, that, after having been carried there, you should now be excluded by your own fault." In long years after, the Doctor said, in giving his experience: "Many attribute their conversion to having attended a love-feast; I owe mine to having been shut out of one." The Discipline of the church as well as its doctrine helped to mold that great man.

Certainly a boy asleep in a church is a more hopeful sight than the same boy not in church, but elsewhere on the Lord's day. Sleepy boys, oftentimes, hear more and remember more than sleepy, or even wide-awake men. Children are pre-eminently fitted for hearing the Word. Their eyes are mature, so are their ears. They learn a language much sooner than grown persons; even babes of two or three years learn the Chinese. So they are mature in understanding spiritual things; they fear to die; they often have great sorrow of life; they are glad to hear of the "land far off, where the King sits in his beauty." They often repent, and are truly converted in a very few hours.

Their religion is always old; they know its essence to be the love of Christ, who died in their stead, and who opens to them the gates of life. A large proportion of them never see manhood or womanhood; they die early. Therefore the gospel is specially suited to the young. Many of the most effective ministers of Christ have been brought to him at seven or eight years of age.

The young constitute a large proportion of a Christian congregation; therefore it is that young men are so effective in bringing sinners to God. The young sympathize with the young; they, in fact, preach to more than by and by, when they are older, and the number of sympathizing hearers has lessened. If by any misfortune this young element is eliminated from a congregation, it greatly lessens the effectiveness of the preacher, and the chances for a revival. Often the work of the Spirit begins with the boys and the girls, then spreads to the young people, and, at length, to the mature and aged. The Lord often pleads with the old by the young. I have noticed that some of these itinerant revivalists are shrewd enough to go where there are schools, and they can count on a large number of young people being in the audience.

Some ministers think it no great thing to move the young, but try to move the Squire or the Doctor or the Judge, who, by the by, sit up in a target like way, as much as to say, "I give you leave if you can." The preacher fires away, but loads with buckshot all the time; wastes his powder and brings down nothing. What he needs to has—that is, plenty of birdshot, and there are birdies enough easily reached. They are few sights more chilling to a man of God than a congregation composed exclusively of mature persons; a most unnatural state of things; a dreary, dry, stiff mass of fixed prejudices, finished histories, and ruminating frames. The Savior seated, counted, and fed five thousand, "besides women and children." The grown people heard, saw, ate, and were filled, but believed not, though they had seen so many miracles. The Christian Church sprang from the young of those days. As with the throng that came out of Egypt with Moses, only their children survived the forty years of unbelief and desert.

It is a strange winnowing that sifts out of the Ecclesia all the children, and most of the youth. By the by a modern invention. Who could have thought in the days of Summerfield that the Sabbath-school would ever prove a serious hindrance to church-going? They used to march us all several squares to the house of God, and seat us securely in the gallery. The ranks were not broken. Now, sixty years after, at the hour of church, the entire body of children rise up and leave the house. The school hit rally "breaks up." They may be seen wending their way back home from the church, while parents and friends are wending their way toward it. Certainly a sad sight. But will parents be content to sit in church while their young people are they know not where?

When do these young people hear the gospel? Certainly the rosy atmosphere of the Sabbath-school is a poor substitute for the authority and reverent silence of the house of God. Of all things sacred, nothing is better calculated to impress a child than the services of a congregation on the Sabbath. It does more than all familiar home-work and school-lecturing to bring the young heart into line, and in accord with the faith of Christ. When the preacher stands up before a whole congregation to read the Word and to lift up his hands in prayer; when all sit motionless, and show their sense of the weighty things spoken by a man who, for the while, is the mouthpiece of Jehovah, the soft, impressible minds of the young are filled with the nearness of heaven and of God.

Parents can not do without this powerful aid in disciplining their children. The fear of God, the truth of God, the sacraments of God, the servants of God are alone impressively displayed in the house of God. The children there see that their parents reverence God, and they reverence him, too. God can hold your children when you can not. They fear death and seek life as well as you. If only they can have a chance, by being carried to his house and laid at his altar. A child should never be able to remember a time when it did not go to church. These children are God's, and may not be deprived of all the pleasures and glories which attend upon his service. The promises are rich in blessings, and constitute the main wealth of the young. They have a goodly heritage, for "the blessing of the Lord it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." When the dear young people are left without guidance, by the death of precious parents, God has promised to shelter and feed them, and to "guide them by his counsel." No poor man can afford to deprive his children of the knowledge of these mercies.

The habit of staying away from church is easily acquired. We should learn early the value of the rest which the holy day brings to the mind and heart, as well as to the muscle of man. The observance of the Lord's day brings all within the most refining atmosphere one can possibly breathe. It is a school of the highest thought and speech; it both opens and fills the mind with elevating themes, which of all are best calculated to bring out the good there may be in us. The Sabbath-school does its work, but only its part. Both its work and that of the congregation are needed to properly impress the young with divine things. But who could believe it? Our Methodism, on the Sabbath, consists of one million of grown people going toward church, and half a million of children going away from it. It will not require a soothsayer to interpret this flight of birds. A gentleman who had built, out of his own means, several large churches, asked me "why so few young people were found at preaching." I answered: "Because for ten years we have been teaching them to stay away. It only requires ten years in this country to shape public sentiment."

What is the remedy? Well, anything—where nothing is worse than the evil itself—for destroying the life of a church. Among many suggestions, there is probably none better than that of changing the schools to Sabbath afternoon. Then parents can take their children to church, and between the preaching and the afternoon there will come the dinner hour, and ample time for rest to both parents and children. This has been tried in Wilmington, N. C., and in Georgetown, Tex., with marked success. Our preachers, from Dan to Beersheba, should preach that our people must not farm out the religious training of their children to any school; that they must see that their children go to church as regularly as they go themselves. The Discipline places children in the charge of the preacher. He must inquire into their attendance upon public worship, and see that they are taught in the Sunday-school, and not merely amused. He has the Sabbath-school teachers as aids in this great work, to whom he should teach the Bible in a weekly class, as well as by preaching. He should have an eye especially to the conversion of children, and ask the aid of the Holy Spirit in this great work—"Suffer the little children to come unto me." Methodism lassos the old and trains the young; has the one refrain: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Memphis, Tenn., March 4: "I have just returned home from Texas, where I had the pleasure of assisting in three meetings. First with Bro. Ben H. Bounds, at Chico, where the Lord blessed us greatly. Quite a number joined the church. Next, I went to Alvord, where the Lord converted fifty souls, or more, and thirty-six were added to us. W. F. Ayers is pastor. Then to St. Jo, where more than a hundred were happily saved, and fifty-one received into our church. Bro. G. S. Sexton is doing a wonderful work at this last place. More anon."

Rev. R. I. Allen, Hashuqua, Miss., March 3: "Our first quarterly meeting for Mashulaville circuit was held at Hashuqua Church on Wednesday, March 1. Rev. T. C. Wier, our presiding elder, preached twice, and held the Quarterly Conference. He said some helpful words to our stewards, of whom there were a good attendance. Our outlook is hopeful. We desire revivals all round, and all-round revivals—in finances, church building, and general improvement, as well as the periodical protracted meeting. The pastor has been on the work for only six weeks, but is already well enough acquainted with the people to like them well."

Rev. R. B. Downer, Pearlington charge: "Pearlington and Logtown, Miss., two pretty towns on the banks of Pearl river, about ten or twelve miles from salt water, is the location of my charge. The membership is small—about 160. The destruction of the church-building by fire last year, and sale of the parsonage to help build a new church structure, has placed extra burdens upon this people perplexing to bear. Then to have sent, as pastor for 1893, a man with family (when they had been promised a single man), was like 'adding the last feather.' Well, we came; was kindly received; have been amply provided for, besides 'a pounding.' We worship in the unfinished church structure until the treasury is sufficiently replenished to add the top stone. I find I have been mistaken about the financial ability of this charge. Outside of, perhaps, but two members, everybody works for daily bread, with no bank account for a rainy day. I am trying to do solid work; have no use for 'untempered mortar.' Old Satan has a firm grip on things, and I do not expect a victory without many battles. I feel that we have passed zero, and the mercury is ascending. We expect our District Conference to be held here about May, and I am cleaning up and preparing for a sin-consuming, Holy Ghost revival. If I ever stood in need of prayer, it is now. Rev. H. E. Partridge, P. E., touched this work Monday and Tuesday last, and left hallowed impressions with all who heard him preach. Jesus is very near; my hand rests in his; my people are following."

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Caseyville, Miss., March 2: "My first quarterly meeting was held Feb. 27, at Lebanon. Bro. Woodward was with us in fine spirits. He preached once for us. We all enjoyed his sermon, and feel that we have been made stronger by it. Only two of my churches were represented at the quarterly meeting, to wit: Lebanon and Blue Hill. Mizpah had no representative, and we were very much disappointed, because their stewards promised to be there, and, of course, we expected them. Lebanon and Blue Hill have made a much better start than they did last year. Some of you have heard, I know, this expression made in prayer: 'O God, give us an experience long to be remembered and never to be forgotten.' If you will permit me to give you a bit of my experience, I will do it. I think that the prayer for an experience long to be remembered was answered last Monday, but not in the way it was expected. Bro. Woodward and I started for Caseyville after the quarterly meeting, and just about that time it commenced raining. It was sure enough rain. We traveled on, though, without getting very wet until we came to a little branch, and there we stopped. After looking around a little, I thought I would take my pony from the buggy, and ride across and see if it was too deep to try to carry the buggy across. So I started, and when I got about half way, my pony commenced swimming, and she struck the current, and it commenced to carry her down stream, and just about that time something happened, and my pony went under, head and ears, and then I thought that I could get out by myself; so I left the pony and pulled for the shore. After the pony and I got out, we were on one side of the branch, and Bro. Woodward and buggy on the other. I had either to cross that branch there, or go two miles and a half up the branch, in order to get to Bro. Woodward; so I preferred the latter. It was rather rough, but I can thank God for it now, because I have been shown a place where I can start an appointment in a community where there are no churches, and, consequently, no preaching; therefore, our rough experience may prove a blessing both to us and also to others. I hope and pray that it will. Pray for me and my work."

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, Macon, Miss., March 8: "Macon station observed the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial, and redeemed her pastor's pledge by paying $25 on the mission debt. The attendance was not large at any time; but I was impressed, that good was done to those that did attend. The responsive services, as furnished by Dr. John by order of the Mission Board, contains more missionary information than I have ever seen in the same space. All our people ought to have it and study it. I am impressed that we ought to have every year a week for stations and four weeks for circuits set apart for the purpose of studying the cause of missions. Let it embrace such season of the year as will suit the people best to attend. Our people need information upon the subject. I can not believe that a truly converted person will withhold his contributions to the cause if he is properly informed. In our towns, so far as my observation goes, the Methodists give more, per capita, to missions than any other church in this country; but in many of the rural districts, where we have many members, they give but little. This brings the average down, so that we make a poor show per capita. Let the light be turned on in these rural districts, and in the course of a few years our contributions will be brought up to something like what they ought to be. Will not a week each year in stations and four weeks in circuits, devoted to the study of missions, sowing down, at the same time, each neighborhood with such literature as our Publishing House might furnish upon the subject, contribute largely to this end? On Feb. 25 and 26 Dr. T. C. Wier, our presiding elder, was with us, and held the first Quarterly Conference. Reports were encouraging, upon the whole. The effects of the wonderful work of grace that we enjoyed here last July still abide, as seen in a more healthy state of spiritual life in the church, deeper piety in many of the members, continuing of many of the great number of family altars erected at that time, increased influence of the church upon the community. The financial showing is encouraging; the best report made at the first Quarterly Conference, to my knowledge, for the last four years. On Sunday, Feb. 26, we buried from the Methodist Church Sister R. A. E. Beauchamps. She died at her sister's, Miss Mary Callaway, in the I. and C. College, Columbus, Miss., Feb. 25, 1893. She was brought here to be buried beside her husband, Judge Beauchamps, who died here about three years ago. Judge and Sister Beauchamps both lived in this community for a half century. Sister Beauchamps was a daughter of Bro. Elisha Callaway, one of the old itinerants who planted the church in this country. She had been a member of this church for about fifty years. The church never had better friends than she and Judge Beauchamps, or stronger supporters. Their impress is plainly seen upon this community and church for the past fifty years. She was greatly loved, and is greatly missed here. Her health failed for several years before her death, so that she was not able to go in and out in active Christian work as formerly; but she suffered the will of God beautifully, and died as she had lived—in full triumph of Christian faith."

OLD HYMNS.

BY EMILY S. STRYKER.

Sing o'er again the good old hymns
We sang in years gone by,
When father in his old arm-chair
Sank praise to God, Most High.
When mother led "Old Hundred" called
And on the Sabbath air
Rang out the chorus, loud and full,
Before we knelt in prayer.

How often in the dear old church,
While in the high-backed pew,
We heard the choir sing the tunes
Which in those days were new.
Many who then joined in the song
Sleep low beneath the sod;
Their labors done, their trials o'er,
Their souls have gone to God.

"See Israel's Gentle Shepherd stands
With all engaging charms;
Hark how he calls the tender lambs,
And folds them in his arms."
When little children oft we sang
This hymn in thoughtless play,
And now the words refresh my heart,
Though years have passed away.

"O thou whose tender mercy hears Contrition's humble sigh,"
"When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the sky."
"There is a land of pure delight
Where saints immortal reign."
"I know that my Redeemer lives,"
And I shall rise again.

"O Rock of Ages, cleft for me,"
I'll hide within thy shade;
Dear "Jesus, Lover of my soul,"
I'll ever seek thine aid
Till "High in yonder realms of light"
I'll join with saints above,
And sing the everlasting song
Of Christ's redeeming love.

"Glory to thee, my God, this night,"
We sang at evening praise.
"Time like an ever flowing stream,"
Was one of the old lays.
With modern hymns they may seem quaint,
Unworthy to be told,
To me they're "sweet as Sharon's rose;"
"More precious than fine gold."

'Tis but a little while his saints
Will sing his praises here;
But if in faith we upward look,
Our hearts need have no fear.
"Jerusalem, my happy home,
Name ever dear to me;"
Jerusalem, my waiting soul
Looks forth with joy toward thee.

And while "on Jordan's banks I stand,
And cast a wishful eye
To Canaan's fair and happy land,
Where my possessions lie."
"Why thus impatient to be gone?
Such wishes breathe no more!"
Soon "shall my disimprisoned soul
Behold him and adore!"

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow,"
We sang with holy joy.
"Praise him, all creatures here below,"
This is our best employ.
"Praise him above, ye heavenly host,"
For trials that are o'er;
"Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,"
Give thanks for evermore.

Phillips Brooks.

Eminence will always be worthy of study. A more commanding figure than that of the late Bishop Phillips Brooks has not crossed the scene of American life in our day. "A kingly man. A king among men. A ruling spirit in the realm of the soul." "There has not arisen a man more worthy of the reverent appellation, prophet and priest."

It may be doubted whether any event that has come to pass within the memory of men still living has so stirred the city of Boston to its very center as the death of this distinguished man—calling forth a cry of bereavement, anguish, loss, from the hearts of the people. He died at six o'clock in the morning. Every daily paper issued a special edition to announce the sad fact. Within two days of his death over four hundred telegrams of condolence were received from America and across both oceans that bound this continent. Twenty thousand people participated in the funeral service in Copeland Square. Congregational and Baptist Churches held memorial services for the great Protestant Episcopal Bishop. One Boston journal, in its issue of Jan. 27, devotes thirty-seven closely printed columns to the subject of this study. Almost every guild, cult, society, trade and calling, and clergymen of all shades of thought and of every denomination, have taken a part in enshrining his memory, and each has brought its leaflet to be woven into the chaplet of his fame. So universal a lamentation has not hitherto testified to the love and esteem in which were held any of the great and good who, in their death, have impoverished life.

Phillips Brooks was a man of many abilities and adaptations; but he concentrated all his magnificent physical, intellectual and motive powers in the calling of a Christian minister, and further narrowed his sphere of intellectual production to that of a preacher. Graduated at Harvard in 1853, then twenty years of age, and at Alexandria Theological Seminary, Va., three years later—well qualified by both rare native endowments and thorough cultivation for scholarly and literary work, he has produced besides a prosy chapter in the Memorial History of Boston, one lecture on "Milton's View of Education," a review article on Dean Stanley, and two pieces in verse, as far as I am aware, nothing except sermons, and addresses that are so much like his sermons in purpose, movement, form and matter, that they would have needed no change to be available for service in the pulpit. He was much in demand on many platforms, and, as a rule, responded readily to all calls for such service; but even his after-dinner speeches, with the addition of suitable texts and a few modifications, would have answered for his next Sunday morning sermons at Trinity. His "Yale Lectures on Preaching" are esteemed, beyond all question, the finest that have been delivered on the Lyman Beecher foundation.

It is as a preacher that we may best study our subject. And here, first of all, stands out that wonderful and unique personality. He may not have been better than many other men; he was not gifted above many others as scholar, thinker, rhetorician; what then was it that from the very beginning of his public life drew to him, and for more than a generation held with growing tenacity, the ear and heart of the most highly cultivated and the most practical people? What was it about the man that could almost stop the wheels of commerce at mid-day in New York City during the Lenten lectures in 1890, and crowd to its utmost capacity—aisles, choir stalls, chancel rail, pulpit steps—old Trinity with a packed and breathless throng of millionaires and mechanics, Christians, infidels, heretics and orthodox, who for the hour, usually devoted to refreshing the animal man, listened spellbound to the holy gospel of God our Savior? It was the power of a personality. Phillips Brooks was a representative man in many of the elements that constitute humanity. His earlier ministry was also remarkable. The following is a description of Mr. Brooks' preaching while at Trinity Church, Philadelphia, his first parish:

"Phillips Brooks stood impassive, almost statuesque in imperturbable tranquility, rattling off in a monotone so swiftly as to tease and half-baffle the most watchful ear, swallow-flights of thought, feeling, philosophy, poetry, piety, biblical learning, sociological wisdom, trenchant criticism, in no syllogistic order of sequence, but plainly the legitimate fruition of his theme, held together by a blood tie of spiritual kinship, striding, lifting along through the spaces and recesses of the inner world, until the great throng, in painful, half-breathed, eager silence, seemed beside themselves with a preternatural ecstacy."

He was not only occasionally a great preacher, but was always great. He had no "off days." His practice was to preach three times Sunday during the greater part of the year. He had little sympathy with that delicateness in which some preachers indulge, and that exhausted itself in one sermon a Sunday. It was not an unusual thing for him to preach twelve or fifteen times a week during his brief episcopate. With all he never neglected the enormous work of his pastorate or the details of the episcopate, but was faithful and prompt in the discharge of every duty. To the poor, the sick, the sorrowing, he was a minister of light. His correspondence was tremendous, yet no one failed to receive a neatly and carefully written autograph letter in reply to any inquiry or other matter about which he had been appealed to. Where he found time to write his wonderful sermons nobody knows. He was a greatly overworked man, but he loved work; it was a passion with him, and his joy in seeing the spiritual results of his work gradually developing was like that of the artist over the growth of his picture, or the scientist in the discovery of laws, but greater.

Turning to the printed sermons, of which we have five volumes, we can not find in them the whole secret of Bishop Brooks' greatness, although, like the man himself, they exercise over us a strange power from the very first. We see at once that, like Frederick W. Robertson (whom he estimated as the greatest preacher of modern times), he has the prophet's eye; and, although he does not express himself in the forms of poetry, he has the poet's soul. He has the instincts of the scholar and the philosopher; although this is felt rather than seen in any direct results of research and criticism. He makes no citations, except occasionally from the Bible, and then only to throw light upon them, not as proofs or illustrations of his themes. He does not use formal exegesis; he never indulges in reminiscences or personal experiences; but the sermons seem full, like a sponge, and dripping with biblical and scientific knowledge, literary treasures and richest results of profound experimental knowledge of the things that he would teach others. His diction is the chastest—no law of the language is violated—he is master of the technique of rhetoric; but here again he has no use for the formal and mechanical. Now and then the poesy of his mind appears in passages of great beauty and power. He is always so accurate in position and use of words that there can never be any doubt as to his meaning. He has perspicuity, that principal trait of all eloquence, in a high degree. Not only is he clear, he is luminous. He not only makes plain whatever he wishes to say, but pours a flood of light upon his subject. He does not often illustrate special thoughts on points in his sermons, and yet he illustrates throughout. The whole sermon is illustration, or, perhaps, one might say, he does not illustrate, but illuminates; yet now and then flashes of illustrative parable or metaphor show that he has the faculty of identification in a very high degree of development. This, from Sermon I, Vol. V., is the type of his illustrations: "I take a plant whose home is in the tropics, but which has grown to stunted life amid the granite of Vermont. I carry it and set it where its nature essentially belongs. Does it not know the warm earth, and does not the warm earth know it? Do not the palm trees, and the sky which it sees through their broad leaves, and the warmer stars which glorify the sky at night, speak to the amazed, but satisfied heart of the poor plant in tones which it understands? And when a soul is set there where its nature always has belonged, in the obedience of God, in the dear love of Christ, does it not know the new life which embraces it?"

Like Robertson, he relieved difficulties, saw when other men groped, expressed for them what they vaguely felt, so that they could see clearly what was before obscure. Like Robertson, he made people think, because he thought out their own thoughts for them. Those who heard him, those who read him, caught the glow of his own irradiscent mind and fell in with the ecstacy of thought. He justifies their instincts in terms of reason. He was a full-orbed man, and all the strong things that make men a kind he felt as bonds of oneness with his fellow-men. He had insight. He understood his own heart, hence the human heart. Robertson relieves difficulties in religious truth as it appears in forms exterior to ourselves, in the Bible, the creed, and the forms of worship, the canons of the church of God; Brooks sees and relieves the difficulties as they are in the relation of subjective factors. His earnest, most natural sphere is in the depths of the human heart. He loves to touch the hidden springs of faith that satisfy honest doubt by discovering to the enquirer the living Christ and the true Christianity in contrast with the idols of dogmatism. He held

"There is more faith in honest doubt, Believe me, than in half the creeds."

The spiritual world was near him. He lived, wrote, and spoke in a clear consciousness of the Unseen, the Eternal, the Divine. The sense of the spiritual bears down upon one whenever under the influence of the man or his works. He finds that in men which responds to God, just as the eye responds to light, and which unfolds into the new man, the spiritual life under the Light of the world just as the seed unfolds the plant responsive to the wooing of the sun.

Saying nothing now of his broad catholicity, his fleckless sincerity, his genuine, unbounded charity in thought and deed, his deep humility, which put self always in the background, should not pass unnoticed. He was without self-consciousness. He never thought whether he was preaching well or ill. His message gushed from him like a river of living waters. There was a sense of fullness in all that he wrote or said. You can always identify the genuine production of Phillips Brooks by the rush, the roar, the surge, with which his great thoughts come pushing to the light of expression. There was no effort at self-concealment, like that of the evangelist who always said in his prayer before the sermon, "Lord, hide me behind the cross." Bishop Brooks simply did not think of himself at all. But for us who desire to be, like this great brother departed, most truly "the friend and elder of all those who would live in the Spirit," the most practical and helpful thing we can learn from a study of Bishop Brooks as a preacher and minister of the gospel is his profound respect for the human soul. His preaching, and his mission work, the whole personality of the man, exhibit a perfect confidence in the redeemableness of man. The value of the soul! No man, only the Son of God himself, ever set a higher value upon the human soul than he. By the value of the soul he meant all its possibilities for Christliness and the assimilation of the divine nature. This is the "secret that eludes the mind, but haunts the heart; that defies intellectual analysis, but reveals itself to intuition." He saw the higher, the God-related self in every son of man. He appealed to it. Men of all classes and conditions heard him—the millionaire, the pauper, the scholar and the unlettered man, the proud society woman, and the convict. He found them at the depths of their nature; there was an awakening wherever he moved. He had learned this lesson from the Incarnation—that in every human being, however low, however distant from God, however materialistic in its whole habit of thought, there was that that, under the influence of the divine life, might be transformed into an angel of light. Religion was not with him something strange and adventitious, but the true manhood, the real nature recovered—like the "Wept" of Wishton Wish—and restored to its true place and activities, as the child to its mother's bosom, as the soul rested in the heart of God; as the branch in the Vine, the human spirit is in Christ. Men were urged to come back to the Father, to enter into their true heritage. They heard the voice that reached them at their depths, they came to themselves, to their true selves; they arose and came to their Father. "It is a belief in the redeemable qualities in man which is the most potent spell in the minister of Christ," said Bishop Potter at the consecration of Phillips Brooks to the bishopric. In these words he struck the key-note of the power in the ministry of his now lamented confrere.

No More Storms.

"There is a time for all things," a time for Conference, a time to be appointed to a pastoral charge, a time to move, a time for the people to receive their preacher kindly, and a time for the preacher to kindly show his appreciation of this kindness. Now, the question naturally arises, How shall he best do this? Perhaps one will say, he can do this in his round of pastoral visiting, or from the pulpit. Why not through the organ of his Conference? He is an "authorized agent" for this paper; he often urges his people to subscribe, and not unfrequently becomes responsible for their subscriptions. Then again, our church paper, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, is not very much crowded with revival news during the Winter months.

Our rule has been to publish short notices of the kindness of our people during Winter and early Spring, and then during Summer and Fall to publish short accounts of our revivals. But we have had our "last warning" with regard to "storms, poundings and breezes," and are called upon to tell "how many souls have been helped." Are not all these evidences of care for and appreciation of the pastor helpful to the souls of the people? There are many things as helpful as singing and shouting. Are we to conclude from the notice in the ADVOCATE, of Feb. 23, that these evidences of appreciation are not worthy of notice? Possibly they are not with one who is large enough to work in double harness—to be an editor and presiding elder—but to the little station and circuit preacher they amount to a great deal. We are in single harness and need all the help we can get. If we are let alone for a few months, we will give accounts of revivals in which "souls have been helped." The good people are taking care of the preachers so they can conduct these revivals successfully. Wait on us a little while and we will have somebody writing, "Give us short notices, brethren."

"A time to all things."

Well, really, that puts a new face on the whole thing. We were simple enough to think that Christian people followed the precepts of Christ, and that they wanted to do alms "in secret," and desired that the right hand should not know what the left hand did; but it seems that we were too simple, and that they really want everything of that kind preceded by a blare of trumpets and their alms-deeds blazed abroad. Very well. Here goes.—EDITOR.

Pounding Extraordinary.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote some time ago with regard to our warm reception by the good people of Oak Ridge, Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, and also of the kindness shown us by some of the Phœnix, Wesley Chapel people. But I want to say now the half hath not been told, for on the evening of Feb. 24 a large number of the Oak Ridge Church, with two or three families of Bradley's Chapel Church, came in on us and they just took possession of us for a while. I think they were between sixty and seventy-five present. And we had a very pleasant time indeed. It was a pleasant captivity. Dear friends, pleasant conversation, sweet music, happy children, all united to make it a very happy evening for the pastor and his family. But finally the evening drew to a close and we invited them to the parlor, hall and gallery, for the parlor would not hold them, and we read Psalm cii, and sung a thanksgiving song, after which we bowed together to invoke the divine blessing upon us, and then the people dispersed and left the inmates of the parsonage to examine the boxes, bundles, etc., to see what was left, and you may be sure we found many good things, such as coffee, sugar, rice, hams, sausages, butter, preserves, canned goods, pepper, spice, extracts, potatoes, molasses, meal, beef, soap, and dresses for wife, Sallie, and little Annie May, hat for Dannie, and last, but not least, an order from Mrs. Virgie Austin for a good barrel of flour.

It is pleasant indeed to live among and labor for such kind people. May God graciously bless everyone of them, for surely they have blessed us and made us happy! We have some of the best people here I ever met. All are kind to us, and I am sure some can not be surpassed by any. They live near the parsonage and seem to study the needs of the pastor's family, and then supply them. For instance, Dr. J. S. Austin, living about fifty yards from the parsonage, pays his full quota of the preacher's salary, and then does all their practice free of charge. And then he and his wife, Mrs. Cameron, Samuel P. Grant and wife, all living right near the parsonage, never let a week pass without showing some acts of kindness. Surely these things will be recorded on high. May God graciously bless all the good people of Warren circuit and everywhere!

DANCING FOR THE CHURCH.

(Special Despatch to the Appeal-Avalanche.)

BAIRD, Miss., Feb. 9.—To-night there is a grand ball and supper for the benefit of the Episcopal Church just removed here from Jacksonville. Visitors are here from Greenwood and many other points. The ball was a grand success.

The above we clip from one of the Memphis dailies, bearing date of Friday, Feb. 10. We have read Bro. Holloman's timely protest against such affairs as balls arranged for the purpose of raising money for the church of God, and to all he has said we wish to say, Amen. He, doubtless, was shocked (as all Christians ought to be) to read such an announcement as appeared in the Clarion-Ledger, of sixth instant; but behold the announcement as per the clipping we here prefix! Note the headline: "Dancing for the Church." (Why not a pugilistic exhibition, as that seems to be about as popular as dancing in this enlightened (?) age.) "Special despatch;" "visitors are here from many points," and "the ball was a grand success!"

We ask the question: Will the great Head of the church, at the final reckoning, recognize and pronounce the work of such a church as a grand success? Will he? Will God honor such plans? Will he recognize such work as being for his honor and glory? Will God's glorious and gracious presence abide with such a people? Can it be said of a house thus erected that 'tis the place where "his honor dwelleth?" Or shall we name it "Ichabod" and say, "The glory is departed"?

His satanic majesty has "doffed" his lion skin, and, having "donned" the "sheep clothing," "is going to and fro in the earth," and is suggesting to many who would worship God that they allow him to assist in the "arrangements."

Brethren—ministers of the gospel of Christ, members of the Christian church—raise your voices in denouncing as wrong, as sinful, such things as balls, suppers, etc., when indulged in and practiced by any church or branch of a church which claims the Lord Jesus Christ as its head. Listen to the voice of God as it calls you to "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins."

"Stand to your arms, the foe is nigh,
The powers of hell surround."

Reared and educated under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, I cannot, I will not stand by and see her thus depart from her solemn vows and obligations without most strenuously protesting against such deviations.

Letter from Rev. H. G. Hawkins.

Bro. Mellen: Your postal card and seventy-four books from Publishing House came last week. In the main they are very suitable, and have encouraged us. One bright young fellow who understands English, has just come in, and is examining them now. They have all been marked "Matsuyama Reading-Room," and numbered, and they are doing service. One young man has begun to read "The Man of Galilee." I think, too, that some of them who come oftenest have planned to buy a little book-case.

Bro. and Sister Mosely are in Kobe. Sister Mosely has not been well; and last week and the preceding one Bro. Mosely was sick.

Though alone, in one sense, more than half of the time since my stay here began, in other senses there has been no loneliness. I have been too busy to get home-sick.

I have heard nothing from Millsaps College concerning the securing of some Japanese articles. Perhaps it was impractical to spend $100—or even $50—thus, unless other more necessary things had been secured. I could, however, procure with $50 a set of articles that would be great teachers.

Bro. Mosely and I have decided to fix up each a box of articles, to be consigned to some interested friend, and by him sold, the profit to be used in furnishing the "Matsuyama Reading-Room." There is danger of a missionary by this means getting his mind away from his proper work; but we have decided to make one experiment.

If I should send mine to you, please manage it through some Meridian or New Orleans merchant. And if ——— has donated $1,000 to the reading-room, send of the articles which are appropriate to Millsaps College, dividing others between Bro. ——— yourself, and my mother. I hope not to trouble you too much.

I received along with the other books one, "The Making of a Man," from Cassell Publishing Company. I have read forty pages of it, and they are fine. If it is so good throughout, I shall suggest it to a young man, who is contemplating such work, as fit to be translated into Japanese.

The inclosed letter is from a young man who is determined to go to America. He is to be a preacher, and this America is the place to learn. His father is to spend six years there; and that if he can only land there, he can make it through some school. He is a good worker and an earnest Christian. Few are so zealous. I have advised him to resume his place in school, and make his plans to go to America later. What he will do I know not. The letter he means is recommendation to some friends.

Hoping that you may have another successful year's work, I am,

Yours fraternally,

H. G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, Japan, Jan. 30, 1893.

The following is the letter referred to:

20th Day of January, 1893.

Mr. H. G. Hawkins—

My Dear Mr. Hawkins: I must tell you about important, but forgive, as I do not know composition. Therefore I will to make very many mistakes. That is my decision of mind about I going to America. Granted by my dear God and my parents, uncles and aunts, therefore I will go to America needing help for few traveling expenses. I did leave school from day. Please, please, good help, sir.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.—March 19, 1893.

PREPARED BY REV. A. F. WATKINS.

(Isaiah xliv, 9-20.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—"I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God besides me." (Isa. xlv, 5).

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. The Vanity and Shame of Idol-Making (vs. 9-11). II. Idol-Making Described (vs. 12-17). III. The Prophet's Inferences (vs. 18-20).

HOME READINGS.

Sunday (March 12)—The True God. (Isa. xliv, 1-8.)
Monday—Vanity of Graven Images. (Isa. xliv, 9-20.)
Tuesday—The Folly of Prayer to Idols. (1. Kings xviii, 17-29.)
Wednesday—The Wisdom of Prayer to God. (1. Kings xviii, 30-39.)
Thursday—Idol Worship Forbidden. (Deut. xi, 16-23.)
Friday—The Majesty of God. (Isa. xl, 12-17.)
Saturday—To Whom Will Ye Liken God? (Isa. xl, 18-27.)

CENTRAL THOUGHT.—The Sin of Idolatry.

INTRODUCTORY.

TIME.—B. C. 712. A. M. 3292.

PLACE.—Isaiah was a resident of Jerusalem.

PERSONS.—The Prophet Isaiah was the greatest of all the Old Testament prophets. His prophecies extended over a period of more than fifty years (B. C. 765-618), and are remarkable for their fullness and the variety of subjects treated. His words are strong, clear, and of matchless beauty, and he describes the kingdom and sufferings of the Messiah so distinctly that he has been called the "Evangelical Prophet." According to tradition, he suffered martyrdom, during the reign of Manasseh, by being sawn asunder. But on this point there is no authentic information. Isaiah was supposed, by some, to have been of priestly, by others, of royal lineage; but of his personal history very little is known.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The importance of this lesson is shown by two considerations: 1. One of the evils of idolatry is that it turns the heart away from the worship of God, and causes men to give their love to other things, and to put their dependence upon them. We must be careful lest we neglect God and give our time, thought, love and service to other things. The Apostle Paul tells us that covetousness is idolatry. 2. The thought that millions of earth's inhabitants are to-day bowing to these graven images that can not see, nor hear, nor help, nor save, ought to inspire our hearts with earnest desire and a strong purpose to give them the Word of God and make them partakers of the blessings which we enjoy. The man who thinks, with unmoved heart, of the blindness and misery of those who know nothing of Jesus, surely has but little of the spirit of his Lord.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE VANITY AND SHAME OF IDOL-MAKING.

Ver. 9. "They that make a graven image are all of them vanity." They declare themselves to be vain and foolish men by what they do. "Their delectable things shall not profit." Their idols which they make shall be of no advantage to them. "They are their own witnesses." Their own testimony would convict them of doing a senseless thing in worshiping their own handiwork, and the only reason that they are not ashamed is that they will not consider that it is folly for the maker to worship the product of his own hand.

Ver. 10. "Who hath formed a god . . . that is profitable for nothing." What man would be so silly as to do such a thing? The absurdity of such an act is astonishing. Is it possible that any man in his wits will do it?

Ver. 11. "Behold all his fellows shall be ashamed." Not only himself, but all those who join him in his foolish work, or take part in his senseless worship, shall be ashamed. "The workmen they are of men." The clause as thus given seems to mean that, as men, they can not do this impossible thing—make a god. Dr. Clarke, however, translates the clause thus: "The workmen themselves shall blush." "Let them all be gathered together, let them stand up." Let them come forward and seriously consider their own actions, and they shall be ashamed of their folly.

II.—IDOL-MAKING DESCRIBED.

Ver. 12. "The smith with his tongs worketh, . . . and fashioneth it with his hammer." This obscure verse is supposed to indicate the manner of making a metal idol, and introduces us into a blacksmith shop, where with tongs and hammer the sturdy smith labors to give shape to his god, and in his heavy work becomes weary and faint, and his senseless god can not give him food or drink, or strengthen his weary arm. An unfeeling and impotent god indeed who will not or can not befriend his worshiper!

Ver. 13. "The carpenter stretcheth out his rule." This verse shows us the carpenter at work upon a wooden idol. He measures his piece of wood with a rule, then with his line works out the figure upon it, then with his planes (chisels) carves the outlines, and by means of the compass works out the rounded likeness to the human figure, and at last completes the image "according to the beauty of a man, that it may remain in the house" of him who made it.

Ver. 14. "He heweth him down cedars." He did not create the materials upon which he worked; they must be supplied by the forest. A cedar, a cypress or an oak must be hewn down. "Which he strengtheneth for himself." He plants and cares for the tree which is nourished by the rain, and at last he considers it suitable for his purpose.

Ver. 15. "Then shall it be for a man to burn." The irony that is manifest in these verses is strengthened by the enumeration of the different uses to which the parts of the same tree are put. With one part he warms himself when cold, with another part he cooks his food, with another part he makes a god and worships it.

Vers. 16, 17, repeat more fully the statements of verse 15—"And the residue thereof he maketh a god." "Earth-born block, watered by rain, essentially destined for heating and cooking, and made into an idol image by the way—such things gods!" (Lange.) "Deliver me; for thou art my god." He asks that this stick which his own hands have fashioned deliver him. The fire can burn, the rust decay, the worms devour his god! In connection with this scathing sarcasm of the prophet, it is interesting to notice the following from Horace, a heathen poet: "Formerly I was the stump of a fig tree, a useless log; when the carpenter, after hesitating whether to make me a god or a stool, at last determined to make me a god. Thus I became a god." (Hor., Lib. 1, sat. 8.)

III.—THE PROPHET'S INFERENCES.

Ver. 18. "They have not known nor understood." They are insensible of their own folly; their eyes are closed, their hearts are dulled, and they can not understand the absurdity of their own act. They are judicially blinded. How far the heathen are responsible for their condition may safely be left to an infinitely wise and good God; our relation to them is not affected thereby. Indeed, the less criminal they are, the more pitiable they become. They are debased and wretched, and we must raise and bless.

Ver. 19. "And none considereth in his heart." As if the only thing needed to show the absurdity of such an act was that the man should seriously and honestly consider the question.

Ver. 20. "He feedeth on ashes." The expression is probably a proverbial one, and means that his labor is vain, foolish and to no purpose. He who relies on an idol for help is as foolish as he who depends upon ashes for nourishment. "Is there not a lie in my right hand?" Is not this image, which is the most perfect product of my skill and strength, a lie, a deception, a cheat, a snare? A deceived heart hinders him from this realization of his folly.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

(1) The description of the image worshiper given by the prophet, seven hundred years before Christ, is true of the idolater of to-day. The church is the militant host of the Lord against idolatry.

(2) All idolaters are not image worshipers; some men bow down before stocks and stones, and others before stocks and bonds. We must flee from idolatry. (1. Cor. x, 14.)

(3) The man who does not believe in missions is either ignorant or ungodly. The same Lord who has called us has also sent us. He who has said, "Come," said also, "Go." Its missionary zeal is the church's spiritual thermometer.

(4) Bishop Haygood says there are three reasons for missionary work: 1. The Lord's command. 2. The world's need. 3. The trusteeship of the church.

(5) The world's need and the church's ability constitute the measure of the church's obligation.

The Editor—What He Must Be.

"The editor of a religious journal—what must he be?" is a question now going the rounds of the religious press. The Observer says: "He must be as serious as a parson, but as scintillant as the best of diners-out. He must be as confident as a cyclopedia, but as cautious as a table of logarithms. He must not be altogether a philosopher, but he must certainly not be a buffoon; for in the one case he will sink his ship with his own weight; in the other his paper will, like a toy balloon, explode with its own gas." The Living Church puts it thus: "He must be a leader of public opinion, yet never express any opinion; he must receive with meekness the criticism of everybody who pleases to take him to task, yet never presume to criticise anybody or anything; he must grind all the axes of his denomination, and all the little hatchets of his brethren, but be counted mean if he charges enough to pay for oiling the wheel; he must correct and condense almost every contribution that he publishes, though he is ordered to print it 'exactly as it is;' he must be held responsible for all errors, mistakes, unwisdoms, infelicities, bad taste, and bad temper of contributors, though he may protest that he is not; he must publish everything that he receives, even if he has to enlarge his paper." The Interior adds: "And the acid and sugar are so mixed that his cup is always one of refreshing lemonade. He may have the 'blues' in all shades from cerulean to blue-black, and yet he knows that he has tried to help and comfort his fellow-creatures and to add happiness to their lives. That is where the sweetness comes in. It atones for all the vinegar—as that consciousness does for everybody who in brotherly and sisterly spirit offers helping hands." Yes, amid all the trials of an editor he has an unequalled opportunity of doing good. He hears not the responsive "Amens" that cheer the minister in the pulpit, but he addresses a larger throng, and his words are often pondered in quiet thankfulness by those whom his paper visits from week to week. It is not without its recompense.—Evangelical Messenger.

Resolution of Respect.

At the morning services of the great revival meeting in progress at the M. E. Church, South, in Ripley, on the twenty-seventh instant, the regular order was informally suspended, and the very large audience resolved itself into a committee of the whole, when the following preamble and resolution were introduced by Jno. Y. Murry, Jr., and adopted with almost breathless solemnity, by a rising vote and bowing of heads, to wit:

Whereas, We have heard with sadness and great sorrow of the sudden death in the city of Memphis, on the twenty-third instant, of that beloved evangelist, Rev. Geo. S. Inge; And whereas, In the death of Bro. Inge the church of God has sustained a great loss; his native State, Mississippi, one of her most useful citizens, whose character is and will ever be esteemed one of her brightest ornaments; his courageous and chivalrous father and his intelligent, sweet-spirited mother, the mainstay and hope of their old age, and his dear family an irreparable loss; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to all the bereaved. That these resolutions be spread on the church records, that a copy be sent the family and parents of deceased, the county paper, Nashville and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger, and Memphis papers, with request to publish same.

A Convention of Christian Workers.

The Convention of Christian Workers, called by the Central Committee of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, of which notice has been given, will be held in St Louis, Mo., May 9 1893. This is the first meeting of the kind ever held in our church, and will be a very important and interesting occasion to all interested in city evangelization and other forms of home mission work to be done under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South. Good speakers will be in attendance, and many important matters will be discussed.

Those desiring to attend can address either the secretary of the Conference, Mrs. T. M. Finney, 4028 Morgan street, St. Louis, Mo.; the president of the St. Louis Conference, Mrs. John Mathews, 4365 Bell Ave., St. Louis, Mo.; or Miss M. C. Lee, 3502 Franklin street, St. Louis, Mo. After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read this:

BRIEFS.

At the last monthly meeting of the New Orleans Sabbath-school Union, it was agreed to do away with the meetings held on Friday evening of each week for the study of the Sabbath-school lesson for the following Sabbath held in some one of the churches of the city, and to hold a similar meeting in the parlor of the Young Men's Christian Association, 15 Camp St., every Saturday at twelve o'clock. The meetings will still be conducted by Rev. W. H. LaPrade for several weeks to come. The general public is invited to attend these meetings, as well as Sabbath-school workers.

There is evidently an increase of a very bad practice throughout this country, and that is the practice of lynching. An exchange gives the following figures which indicate too plainly the growth of this evil spirit among our people:

In the year 1883 there were thirty-nine reported cases of lynching, and none of punishment for it. Accordingly in 1884 there was an increase in such violence, 53 cases. Still no punishment. And in 1885 there were 77 cases; in 1886, 73; in 1887, 70; in 1888, 72; in 1889, 95; in 1890, 100; in 1891, 169; in 1892, 236.

At such a rate of increase it will not be long before almost every vestige of security of life will be destroyed. The people are the rulers in this land, and they can put an end to this shameful evil, if they will.

Somebody asked the New York Advocate if there was any ground for the statement that ministers' sons are usually the worst boys in the place of their residence, and this is the answer:

Some ministers' sons have proved to be the most consummate scoundrels that ever lived. Occasionally one has become a blasphemous infidel; but the average morality, character and standing of ministers' sons relatively to the whole number compares most favorably with those of any class or profession. To test this matter, in a certain city one hundred children of ministers of five denominations were traced through a period of forty years, with the result that astonished those who made the investigation. They were among the best and most distinguished citizens, though there were two or three "black sheep," and one was blacker than Egyptian darkness. What ministers' children do is widely known. Their mischief is spoken of as vice, their vice as crime. One of our pastors challenged a lawyer, who was repeating this old slander, to an investigation of the children of a number of ministers equal to the number of lawyers in that county. The challenge was accepted, but at the end of a week the lawyer gave up the case. We would not have the reader infer from this a general principle. The ministers' children might have been better, and the lawyers' worse, in that county than upon the average; but we suggest to those who are invariably repeating this phrase the propriety of making some comparisons.

It is said that Dr. Deems' Church of the Strangers, in New York, will be moved from its present site to a more favorable situation up town. Dr. Deems' physicians give hope of his ultimate recovery from his recent attack of paralysis. He is improving gradually.

Membership Too Cheap.

Judged by the requirements of our Book of Discipline, it seems that sufficient safeguards have been posted at the door of the church to guarantee the right sort of members. But if we study the lives and characters of a good many of our members, we can hardly escape the conclusion that the requirements of the Discipline have not been complied with. In some way—either by neglect of the law in the case or by mistaken zeal for mere numbers—there has come into the church a multitude of people whose lives have undergone no change, and whose characters have not the least resemblance to the character of Christ. And yet by their induction into the church, they have had conferred upon them all the rights and privileges of the church relation, and go forth before the world as samples of the work the church is doing in the matter of saving men and women. So to speak, the church has placed upon them her imprimatur, and sent them forth to tell the world what a great work she is doing. Now, these people are not alone to blame for being in the church in the condition they are in. Their desire to become members was a lawful desire, and in seeking membership they were only trying to bring to fulfillment that lawful desire. The larger share of the responsibility for having so many of such people in the church attaches to the church doorkeepers—the pastors. There is no use to deny such a plain fact. Many pastors have made the terms of membership so easy that almost anybody who applies may gain admittance.

We recognize the great fact, and appreciate its supreme importance, that the church is in the world for the salvation of men, and that all men should avail themselves of its "privileges and moans of grace." But we also recognize another fact, and that is, that the church has rights which ought to be respected and guarded by her ministers. She has the right to demand that her escutcheon be not stained nor her respectability be lowered in the eye of the world by introducing into her membership persons whose conduct does not agree with her teachings and whose lives are a reproach to her honor. It may be true that many of this class of members have backslidden and become worldly and wicked since they became members, but we think a majority of them never were converted from sin—never had the witness of the Spirit that they were "children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." These all-important facts were not sufficiently impressed upon their minds and consciences in the earlier stages of their religious awakening, and having been admitted into the church with no actual and realized experience in their own souls of the transforming power of the Divine Spirit, their religious awakening has gradually shaded off and left them no better than before they came in. If the door had been more judiciously and jealously guarded, some of them might not have come in, but those who did come would have been worthier members, and the cause of Christ would not have now to carry so much reproach!

The number of unconverted people in the church—people who apparently have not the slightest conception of the obligations of the Christian profession—impresses us with the thought that membership in our church is entirely too cheap. We throw the doors wide open and take anybody who will perfunctorily answer a few questions. This hasty method of receiving members, in our view, defeats the "one condition previously required of those who desire admission." That condition is "a desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins." Anyone who believes the Bible will express such a desire, but the condition is that it be really so fixed in the soul as to be shown by its fruits. Many of our pastors never wait for the "fruits" of that desire to be manifested in the life, but receive persons immediately upon their application for church membership. This brings down the value of membership to a point entirely too cheap. An easy entrance upon church privileges decreases the importance of those privileges in the estimation of the candidate and in the estimation of the world. It depreciates the value of church fellowship and surrounds the holy ordinances of religion with profaneness. It ought not to be. It is doing harm continually. Every man ought to be made to feel, when he seeks admission into the church, that he is taking the most important and the most responsible action he can possibly take; that the privileges he seeks are no common privileges; that the rights he seeks to secure are rights guaranteed by the Eternal God, and that the obligations he proposes to assume will cling to him through all the coming days of life. It is no common thing to join the church. It is no common thing to receive a member. The church is the body of Christ—the bride of the Immaculate Lamb!

Brethren of the ministry, think on these things, and see if it is not time to call a halt in this practice of indiscriminately receiving into the church anybody and everybody who may present themselves. We say, raise the standard of membership up, at least, to disciplinary requirements.

A Righteous Crusade.

No one can read Judge Ferguson's charge, delivered to the new grand jury last week, without coming to the conclusion that he is one official who is terribly in earnest in performing the duties of his office. When on a former occasion he delivered himself to a former grand jury, we took occasion to commend his action. We thought he had made a strong effort to uphold the law, and that effort was quite successful. But human nature is prone to relax its efforts for the right, and police officers have a strong flavor of that sort of human nature about them, and things began to swing around again in the same old orbits. The gamblers, winked at by the police, began to ply their nefarious business—the saloons and concert dives began again to lure our young men into their devilish dens, and things looked as if the former efforts in favor of righteousness were merely "a spell of spasms." But when the new grand jury came before Judge Ferguson for instructions, he delivered a charge which was a cumulation of all he and Judge Moise had said on former occasions, freshened by the addition of some strong, clear-cut reminders of the duty of said jury, backed by the assertion that he could and would give the names of the violators of the law and the names of the police who knew they were violators and yet allowed them to go without arrest. The Judge "lays down the law" provided for the cases he mentions, and also the law provided for the cases of delinquent police officers. These matters are so plainly put that it is difficult to see how the guilty can escape, and especially the guilty police. There is no denying the fact now, that if the law against gambling and the law protecting minors and the Sunday law are not executed, the police are responsible. Judges Ferguson and Moise, by their courage and the intrepid performance of the duties of their office, have demonstrated that fact to the satisfaction of every man who reads the papers. And now Judge Ferguson tells the grand jury in vigorous English that the law provides that "any superintendent of police or other officer, who knowingly permits any infraction of the law, shall be immediately dismissed from the force and from his office." And he directs them to inquire why this penalty has not been enforced? This is going straight to the heart of this whole shameful matter. The enforcement of law, as we said in a former article, is simply a matter of the courts and the police. The courts are in favor of enforcement—the police are not. The issue now is, whether the courts will be sustained in upholding the law of the land, or whether the police will be sustained in their contempt of the law. On this point the Judge gives this significant utterance:

> The moral sentiment is emphatically opposed to gambling. This is due in a great measure to the efforts of the clergy, and the very positive and commendable stand taken by the press, both religious and secular, in opposition to said evil. The people have determined that gambling must and shall be suppressed, much preferring, however, that legal measures shall secure the desired end. There are men who are ready and willing to serve as deputy sheriffs, without pay, whenever required so to do, but the court is disposed first to make this effort to induce, or compel rather, the officials herein referred to to perform a plain duty.
> The only remedy against gambling is the strong arm of the law, wielded by a law-respecting police, or by the people. If the police will not execute the law, then the duty devolves upon the people. If they will not move, then utter ruin. But we are clearly of the opinion that the moral sentiment of the community is in favor of the enforcement of the laws, and that these vigorous efforts of our worthy judges will be sustained, and that we shall yet see every gambling den closed and all laws respected as they should be.
> We believe, moreover, that the strong stand taken by these judges in these matters has already had a beneficial effect in creating a healthier moral sentiment than obtained formerly. It seems to us that the daily papers have become more thoroughly awake to the importance of this subject than they were in years gone by, and this is a great point gained.
> Respect for the law is growing in breadth and intensity throughout the community. The battle of the courts is fast becoming the battle of the people, and recruits to the side of right are every day wheeling into line. Let the judges of our Criminal Courts still carry on their righteous crusade, and victory, complete and glorious, will crown their labors.

"Gospel among the Slaves."

Only this morning a book with the above title, from the presses of our Publishing House, and the pen of Dr. W. P. Harrison, came into my hands. With intense interest have I examined its instructive and suggestive pages. Such a book ought to have been written. We need no more disputings about the sin or evil of slavery—that old straw has been sufficiently thrashed—but the history of what was done to mitigate its evils and Christianize the slaves ought to be published and forever preserved. No more thrilling chapters of missionary toil and triumph are to be found than in the history of "plantation missions" in the old South. This volume is a valuable contribution to those precious annals. It by no means exhausts the subject. Though these four hundred pages are well and discriminatingly filled, they contain but an outline of what shall some day be completed, and which will be a grand vindication of the heroic self-sacrifice and apostolic labors of our fathers. This book furnishes ample materials for another "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which covets the sanctified genius of another Christian matron.

Readers of this ADVOCATE will be most interested in the pages devoted to Louisiana and Mississippi. The sketch contributed by Mrs. Wall, daughter of the late Dr. Wm. Winans, is of exceptional interest. I hope the book may have a wide circulation and careful reading.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., March 10, 1893.

Rev. H. M. Booth.

Brethren of the Mississippi Conference:

Your veteran comrade, Bro. H. M. Booth, is dead. He fell asleep in Jesus at 8:15 P. M., Monday, March 6, in Rockport, Texas, having preached more than half a century and turned his seventy-seventh year of age. This is only intended as a notice of his death and triumphant hour, and is not to take the place of what others can tell better because they knew him better. He was fully ready when the messenger came to take him home, and he gave up life without a struggle. He had breathed hard during all of his last day, but as the moment of his departure came near and nearer he breathed easier and easier, the passing of each breath fainter and fainter, till, like a candle that had burned itself away, the light of his long and well-spent life went out. Bro. Booth traveled about thirty years in Mississippi Conference, then transferred to East Texas Conference, where he traveled about fifteen years, and about five years ago he superannuated. Three years ago he came to Rockport, and more than once was heard to remark, he came to go from Rockport to heaven, and so he did. None knew this veteran soldier of the cross but to reverence and honor him.

A large congregation gathered to see him for the last time before the altar of the church he loved so well, and as he was borne along the street every business door was closed in silent respect, while a long procession of friends followed the hearse, as it nodded its dark plumes, to his resting-place in the city of the dead. Happy soul, thy work is done; now thou shalt shine as the stars forever. Well done.

REV. A. L. SCARBOROUGH.

Rockport, Texas.

One thing in regard to recent protracted meetings reported in this paper we desire to mention with special emphasis. It is the harmony in which the pastors and people of different denominations engaged together in the work of saving souls. We have noticed that wherever this harmony has existed there has been a decided success in the Lord's work. And this is simply a prophecy of that larger and more successful work which will be accomplished when all the Lord's people work together in love and sympathy. May that day dawn upon us soon!

Rev. T. Y. Armstrong.

Rev. T. Y. Armstrong, a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home in Rose Hill this morning at 3 o'clock, after a painful illness of two weeks. He was born in August, 1812; was converted in 1835; joined the Alabama Conference in 1839, and came into the Mississippi Conference when the present boundaries were fixed. He has anxiously anticipated the end for some time. Among his last utterances were: "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth is reserved for me a crown of righteousness."

NOTES.

"If thou hast yesterday thy duty done,
And thereby cleared firm footing for to-day,
Whatever clouds may dark to-morrow's sun,
Thou shalt not miss thy solitary way."

Archdeacon Farrar: There is only one real failure in life possible, and that is not to be true to the best one knows.

A Brahmin said to a missionary: "If you were as good as your Book, you would conquer India for Christ in five years."

A bill to give the right of municipal suffrage to women was defeated in the Massachusetts Legislature by a vote of 97 to 88.

Archbishop Whately: I never fail, for my orders are not to conquer, but to fight, and whenever I do conquer also, that is so much over and above.

"God's plan is not to put us into a cradle and rock us asleep; he aims at quickening us to the most vigorous, aggressive life of a full, muscular, and busy manhood."

"Who doeth good by loving deed or word,
Who lifteth up a fallen one or dries a tear,
Who helps another bear his heavy cross,
Or on the parched and fevered lips doth pour
A blessed draught of water sweet and cool,
Becomes co-workers with the Lord of All;
Secures a rightful share in his success
And in the happiness that springs therefrom."

It is noticeable that the congregations whose pastors serve them with the pure water of life, fresh from the Rock, are healthy, happy, and hustling, but in those regions where large amounts of philosophical decoctions and polemic soap-suds are pitched into the spring, the flocks look unhappy.—Interior.

The history of current events in Philadelphia does not support the argument that high license tends to decrease the number of saloons. According to the Christian at Work, though the license is now $1,000 a year, there have been this year 3,390 applicants for license; and this is an increase of 374 applicants over last year. We suppose the same result would be seen in every large city.

You will never convince your opponent of wrong views by telling him he is a fool. Such talk weakens your side rather than his. It is a good sign of a masterful spirit to be able to deal fairly and tenderly with an opponent, and yet hold its own convictions in love and firmness. The rightness of a man's cause gives no license for reckless speech about the wrongness of another man's view of it.

It is quite interesting to note the fact that the Catholics are coming to the Chautauqua idea. The results of Summer school last year were so favorable that a site near Plattsburg, on Lake Champlain, has been secured. The school will be organized under a charter granted by the regents of the University of the State of New York. The school will begin operations this Summer. This is a new departure for the Catholics.

Our readers have doubtless heard somewhat of the new religion called Theosophy. To give them an inkling of the way of thinking its votaries practice, we append a theosophist's definition of nature:

> Nature is only another name for the external coating of the vibratory force. The invisible vibration makes a pattern for the visible manifestation. Things grow because the atoms of matter fall into place around an invisible pattern set up in the astral light by vibrating action.

Precisely so! Ahem!

The oldest may do good. One of the most useful men we ever knew did some of his best work after he was eighty years old, leading a soul to Christ just before he died, and upon his death-bed leaving a lasting impression for good upon those who witnessed his departure. Age has a rich experience, which is ever helpful when properly directed. The Bible says of the pious: "He shall still bring forth fruit in old age." The venerable saint bears a living testimony for Christ. Patient endurance of infirmities in declining years commends religion and honors God.—Presbyterian.

The Rockford Monitor says that to get an intelligent idea of the vastness of the drink bill of the United States for 1892, $1,200,000,000, we must make a few comparisons: "The net earnings of all the railroads of the United States amounts to less than one-third of our drink bill. The loss of property by fire in 1891 was only one-ninth of the liquor bill. The entire expenses of the United States government are only about one-half what we pay for intoxicants. The aggregate capital of all our national banks is about $700,000,000, or but little more than one-half the amount squandered on drink each year."—Christian at Work.

Fragmentary Christianity and half-hearted Christianity are so manifestly played out that nothing will avail hereafter except a return to the intensity and comprehensiveness of St. Paul and St. John. The leaven of Christianity has been fermenting in the heart of English society until it has produced such a conception of the practical scope of the Christian life as our forefathers never imagined. For the first time in the history of this country it is believed and openly asserted that the principles of Jesus Christ must be applied to every phase and aspect of conduct.—Hugh Price Hughes.

On the Wing.

Wesson, the chief manufacturing city of South Mississippi, the prophecy of better days, the widows' home, the woman's workshop, was our objective point for the fourth Sunday in February. Rev. T. B. Holloman, the commander-in-chief of our Methodist army at this point, gave us a hearty welcome. Under the successful pastorate of those who had gone before the membership had been increased beyond the capacity of the church-building. Now Bro. Holloman has made a quiet, but powerful plea, for the enlargment of the parsonage. So our good people are laying plans both to enlarge the church and the parsonage. Our collections from all sources amounted to $123, principally from the settlement of over-due notes.

We touched at McComb City, Bogue Chitto, Johnson Station, Summit, and Brookhaven. At all these places we found the brethren ready to help us. The congregation at Johnson, on Tuesday night, encouraged us no little. At Summit I found Dr. Weems laboring together with Pastor Cammack in a protracted meeting. The collection did not interfere with the spirituality of the service.

Whitworth College honored us greatly. The young ladies gave us $25 on our fund. Millsaps College returns thanks with a rising vote from all its students and professors. We were delighted with the faculty and carried away with us pleasant memories of Prof. Ricketts and his class in geometry, Miss Wall and the Freshman class in English, and Miss Hopper and the students of Algebra. We were impressed with the thoroughness of the work, the completeness of the buildings and the watchful care exercised by the president and his estimable wife. Our services were pleasant and, we trust, fully as profitable to the people as to us.

Brethren, sisters, you especially who owe notes, will you not make arrangements for their settlement at once? Think of how small an amount we need to complete our endowment, and then think again. It is the amount you owe which keeps us from completing the $100,000. Let us hear from you now. JOHN W. CHAMBERS, Agt.

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK FOR 1893.

Brethren of the Ministry and Laity:

Let us all, at the opening of this Spring season, read and ponder our church and ministerial vows, the Word of God, the Discipline and the last report of our Sunday-school Board in reference to our Sunday-school work.

Let our personal, united and constant aim be to report for this year, at least as many Sunday-schools as churches and as many Sunday-school members as church members, a Sunday-school Conference in every district, and Children's Day observance in every Sunday-school. Also an ample supply of lesson papers and a circulating library in every school, and a Bible in the hands of every Sunday-school scholar. To accomplish these purposes, and thereby fulfill our Sunday-school mission, we most earnestly invoke the hearty co-operation of every presiding elder, pastor, superintendent, teacher, official and private member of the church.

Financial aid is generously proffered by the Sunday-school Board for the carrying out of the above specified designs. Liberal help will be given to new or needy schools to procure lesson papers, catechisms and libraries. Bibles for those who may wish, but are not able to pay for them, will be furnished at half price or free on application of the pastor or superintendent. Children's Day programs furnished free to all who will observe the day as provided in the Discipline. Preachers and superintendents will please send us their orders for these by April 15, so as to give ample time for preparation.

Brethren, do not hesitate to apply for any financial help needed as above stated. Any correspondence relating to the Sunday-school interest will be appreciated and attended to.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

The International Epworth League.

Our General Sunday-school Committee has appointed the following persons, as delegates to the International Epworth League Conference to be held in Cleveland, O., July 6-9, 1893, to fill the places assigned our church on the Programme of the Conference, viz:

"Reply to Address of Welcome." Bishop A. W. Wilson, D. D.

"Conference Sermon." Rev. W. A. Candler, D. D., North Georgia Conference.

"President of Meeting, Afternoon, July 7." Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, D. D., Holston Conference.

"Supplementary Methods of Education." Rev. H. M. Dubose, D. D., Pacific Conference.

"Epworth League in the College." Rev. Collins Denny, D. D., Baltimore Conference.

"Temperance." Judge E. H. East, Nashville, Tenn.

"My Duty to the Heathen World." Rev. Dr. W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary.

"Sunday Afternoon Service, Muslo Hall." Rev. S. H. Werlein, D. D., St. Louis Conference.

"Sunday Afternoon Service, Epworth Memorial Church." Rev. I. Z. T. Morris, Northwest Texas Conference.

Attention, Preachers.

Some weeks ago I called through the ADVOCATE for the names and postoffice address of all members of the Mississippi Conference who were the sons of preachers. I intended to be understood as including in this call those who were recently admitted on trial, as well as those in full connection. Several have complied with my request, while many others may have overlooked my call, or, perhaps, the purposed concealment of my object caused some to be indifferent.

My object is to prepare a memorial volume from the material thus obtained, that it will be a pleasure to those who survive me to read, and that will be a loved employ for a superannuated preacher in the evening of life. If approved by those for whose benefit I would write, they will give me their address, that I may correspond with them. H. J. HARRIS.

A United Work.

All denominations, sects and classes are interested in the work of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The opportunity is before all for appreciation and substantial aid by subscribing at once to the dedicator's volume entitled, "Unperverted Charity," the proceeds of which are donated by the author, William P. Wayne, of this city, to the foundling fund of the Waifs' Home. The volume comprises about two hundred pages, and embodies in its narrative the original poems, humor, metaphors, also folk lore, romance, W. C. T. U. logic, Sunday Law provision, new institutions, suggestive and unique entertainment by the author. The first edition will be 1,000 copies, and subscriptions are now asked for and taken so as to have sold the first edition before received from publisher's hands. Price is fifty cents. Send a postal card or subscription order, or call in person and subscribe at the author's residence, 573 Carondelet, or the S. P. C. C. office, 120 Common.

Help the Church Builders.

Our Church Extension Boards expend every year within the territory of the Louisiana Conference upon an average of from ten to twelve hundred dollars. They could easily expend several times that amount if they had it. There are now pressing calls for more money than we have on hand. We have in subscriptions enough to meet the present demands, if collected. Some of these subscriptions are more than a year old. I trust they will be paid up at once, and that this year's assessments will be raised and forwarded at once. Forward all church extension money to me at Minden, La.

Something to Think About.

Mr. Carroll D. Wright gives us some very interesting facts.

He estimates—and in the matter of statistics he is an expert—that there are in this country at the present time rather more than twenty-two millions of persons who are "engaged in gainful occupations."

Subtracting from our sixty-five millions most of the wives and daughters, all of the decrepit and aged and all of the school children, it will be seen that we are a work-a-day nation in its shirt sleeves. The class of do-nothings because they have too much money and the other class of do-nothings because they are born loafers do not count for much either in number or influence.

But Mr. Wright adds that not only is the aggregate of those who do work on the increase, but also the aggregate of those who are willing to work, but can't get it. There's the rub. That is the reason for the existence of labor organizations, for strikes and for the unceasing conflict between capital and labor.

The remedy there is but one. Skilled labor is nearly always in demand. A first-class workman is seldom out of a job. It is necessary, therefore, for the new generation to cease dawdling, to give up being jacks of all trades, to give themselves vehemently to some special department and to become masters of that. There never yet was a time when it was not easier to earn four dollars a day because you are worth it than to earn one dollar a day at work which a million others can do as well as you.

The lesson is clear and it is emphatic. —N. Y. Herald.

The Christian Life a Business.

The highest encomium I ever heard of a single man was that of John Vassar after he had talked about Christianity with a fashionable woman in a hotel. Her husband had come in, and said that if he had known of it he would have sent him about his business. The woman replied: "If you had seen him, you would have thought that was his business."

Christ set an example of a man being about his business. It was a business that meant the loss of his life, that involved the cross and the crown of thorns, and the "Father forgive them," "Why hast thou forsaken me?" and the sepulchre. But, although he saw the end from the beginning, he was about his Father's business till it was finished.—A. J. Gordon. D. D.

RECOLLECTIONS.

What a blessed thing is memory! How it brings up the pleasures of the past, and hides its unpleasantness? You recall your childhood days, do you not, and wish they would return? You remember the pleasant associations, while the unpleasant ones are forgotten. Perhaps to your mind comes the face of some friend. It was once a pale, sad face. It showed marks of pain, lines of care. It seemed to be looking into the hereafter, the unknown future. And then you recalled how it brightened, how it recovered its rosy hue, how it became a picture of happiness and joy. Do you remember these things? Many people do, and gladly tell how the health returned, how happiness came back, how the world seemed bright. They tell how they were once weak, nerveless, perhaps in pain, certainly unhappy. They tell of sleepless nights, restless days, untouched food, unstrung nerves. And then they tell how they became happy, healthy and strong once more. You have heard it often in the past, have you not? You have heard people describe how they were cured and kept in health? You certainly can remember what it is that has so helped people in America. If not, listen to what Mrs. Annie Jenness Miller, who is known universally as the great dress reformer, says: "Six years ago, when suffering from mental care and overwork, I received the most pronounced benefit from the use of the great medicine, Warner's Safe Cure." Ah, now you remember. Now you recall how many people you have heard say this same thing. Now you recollect how much you have heard of this great Cure. Now you are ready to admit that memory is usually pleasing, that the highest pleasure comes from perfect health, and that this great remedy has done more to produce and prolong health than any other discovery ever known in the entire history of the whole world.

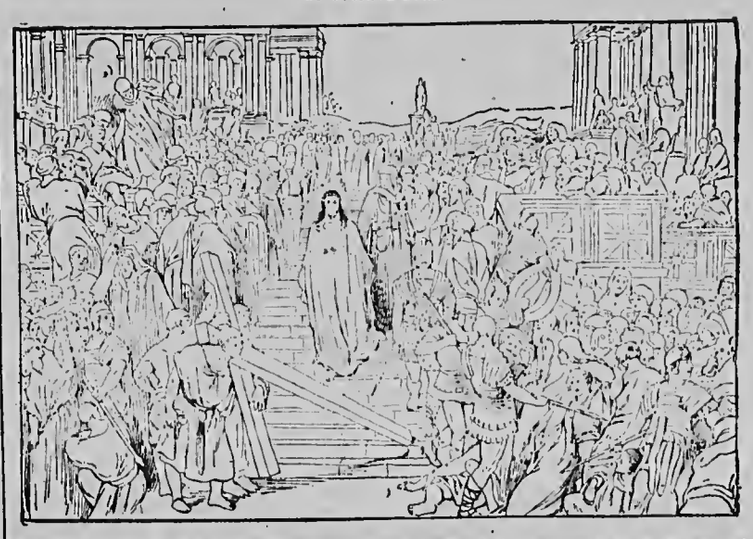
CHRIST LEAVING THE PRAETORIUM.

BY GUSTAVE DORE.



THIS is one of the greatest religious paintings of the century, as it is one of the most wonderful creations of the genius of Gustave Dore. He was a painter of the French school, although his not qualled originality and weird fancy made it impossible for him strictly to belong to any school. The scene represents Christ descending the steps leading from the official tribunal of the Roman Government of Jerusalem after his condemnation. The figure of the Savior, erect and commanding, is the centre of attraction. Dore's aspiration turned towards religious subjects, and he became so fascinated with the delineation of the Savior's face that he painted it fifty times; and in no effort of his genius has the heavenly radiance which emanates from the figure of Christ been so apparent as in this sublime and elevated picture. The gaping crowd, some of them friends, others attracted by excitement; the leering Jews pressing forward with uplifted hands; the poor and wretched who adored him expressing the most profound sorrow; the sick whom he had healed and those who still craved his divine help all pressing forward to get one last glance at him, while the Roman soldiers with spears and shields driving them back, are graphically displayed in this wonderful picture. The infinite love and pity on His sacred face, as painted with the inspiration of Dore's pencil, is something beyond all description. The reproduction is a photo etching, engraved with the greatest care, preserving all the beautiful softness and value of the original, and has been pronounced by Art critics to be equal in execution to the marked proofs sold by subscription only, for $100 each, in the Dore Gallery, London.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

HOME CIRCLE.

AN ANGEL IN THE HOUSE.

BY LEIGH HUNT.

How sweet it were, if without feeble fright
Or dying of the dreadful beauteous sight,
An angel came to us, and we could bear
To see him issue from the silent air
At evening in our room, and bend on ours
His divine eyes, and bring us from his bowers
News of dear friends and children who have never Been dead indeed, as we shall know forever.
Alas! we think not what we daily see
About our hearts—angels that are to be,
Or may be if they will, and we prepare
Their souls and ours to meet in happy air;
A child, a friend, a wife whose soft heart sings
In unison with ours, breeding its future wings.

The Restlessness of Old Age.

There is something very pathetic about the peculiar restlessness of old age. I was talking the other day with a lady born early in the century. Her ninetieth birthday is just beyond her—a few weeks off. Nearly all her own children are dead, and the two survivors are far away from her in distant lands. Her grandchildren are separated from her, in interest, by three generations. They are not of her period, and they do not understand her needs, nor sympathize entirely in her feelings.

This old gentlewoman is in full possession of her mental faculties, and except for somewhat impaired sight, is the equal in vigor of many persons twenty years her juniors. One of her relatives, speaking of her, said: "It is very trying to live with auntie; she is so restless. She is always wanting to go somewhere. We hardly get her established in one place, before she fancies she would be happier in another. Then she resents our going with her on her walks, and steals off furtively by herself."

"And," said a friend, "her memory is not very retentive of present things. She lives so wholly in the past. Strangers who come in find her talk entertaining, but those who hear the same thing a hundred times in a year grow very weary."

Poor restless old people! They do live in the past, when they were of some account in the world. They do like to go about unchallenged and unwatched. Surely the greatest delicacy, the most unobtrusive love, should guard their steps, and never should they for one instant be suffered to think themselves superfluous.

It is a kind provision of our Father in heaven which makes extreme old age the exception, and not the rule. But those who are honored by the presence in their home of a dear aged one, should not omit to rise up before the hoary head; to be tenderly solicitous to the one who now finds the grasshopper a burden.—Selected.

Do You Know How Great You Are?

What a wonderful being is man! Created in the image of God. The breath of the Almighty within him. Stars and sun made his servants. His scepter given dominion over all animal creation. Destined for two worlds. Made a little lower than the angels. Glory and honor his crown. God standing ready to die for his redemption. Heaven set into a jubilee over his repentance. A son of God, yea, a king and priest unto God. Certainly his dignity towers up like a mountain. To no other existence outside the jasper walls is attached such significance. And yet how we forget all this! We act as if we were earth-born and earth-destined, and without a higher end than to sport with sin and revel with corruption. How contracted is our vision. How little we see the parapets and towers of the next world. How fully we see those of this. How earthly passions play and hold carnival in our hearts. How seldom are we lifted to a third heaven by a touch of inspiration. How we live as if the life were not more than meat, nor the body than raiment. How shadowy and faint, like the first gleams of the light of the morning, are the great realities of the soul, and how thick and heavy the darkness of worldliness and laiseness which surrounds us. How the apparent triumphs over the real. But we are the sons of God, nevertheless, and the breath of the Almighty has given us understanding. We should be filled with the thought. To think highly of ourselves will help us to act nobly and well. If tempted, remember you are a prince, and should not act like a slave. What many persons need to do is to discover themselves. They have never been aroused by the thought of who and what they are, and whither they are hastening. If we are sons of God, we should be like him. If we are hastening into his presence, we should assimilate character like his own. Our motives and deeds should correspond with our dignity. Young man, young woman, think highly of yourself and live a worthy life.—Epworth Herald.

When Elisha directed the widow to borrow vessels of her neighbors and to fill them with oil, the oil flowed until all were filled, and then stopped. When you go in to ask grace of God, first go out and borrow of your neighbors. Borrow your neighbor's sin and your neighbor's sorrow, and his need and his poverty. Borrow a large vessel for darkest Africa, and another for India, and another for China, and another for the islands of the sea. He who asks for little will receive little. He who asks for much will receive great grace.—A. J. Gordon.

The Beatitude of the Unsuccessful.

There may be no Bible beatitude saying expressly, "Blessed are the unsuccessful," but there are beatitudes which are equivalent to this. We take from our Lord's own lips, "Blessed are they that mourn," "Blessed be ye poor," "Blessed are they which are persecuted," "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you," "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you." Then many other Scripture passages have like teaching. Evidently not all blessings lie in the sunshine; many of them hide in the shadows. We do not read far in the Bible, especially in the New Testament, without finding that earthly prosperity is not the highest good that God has for men. Our Lord speaks very plainly about the perils of worldly success.

The Bible is indeed a book for the unsuccessful. Its sweetest messages are to those who have fallen. It is a book of love and sympathy. It is like a mother's bosom to lay one's head upon in time of distress or pain. Its pages teem with cheer for those who are discouraged. It sets its lamps of hope to shine in darkened chambers. It reaches out its hands of help to the fainting and to those who have fallen. It is full of comfort for those who are in sorrow. It has its many special promises for the needy, the poor, the bereft. It is a book for those who have failed, for the disappointed, the defeated, the discouraged.

It is this quality in the Bible that makes it so dear to the heart of humanity. If it were a book only for the strong, the successful, the victorious, the unfallen, those who have no sorrow, who never fail—the whole, the happy—it would not find such a welcome wherever it goes in this world. So long as there are tears and sorrows and broken hearts and crushed hopes and human failures, and lives burdened and bowed down, and spirits sad and despairing, so long will the Bible be a book believed in as of God—an inspired book, and full of inspiration, light, help and strength for earth's weary ones. —J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Minister's Wife.

There is only one woman in the whole parish on whom our minister's wife has no mercy. That woman is not her "hired girl;" no indeed. Our minister's wife manages to so distribute her household tasks that "the girl" can get through them without any hardship, and have some time to herself.

Toward the wives of all the officers of the church she is kind and considerate, and always ready to lighten their burdens, taking them on herself, if she thinks it necessary to do so. The poor of the church find in her a steadfast friend and wise counselor, and she is often at the bedside of the dying, and performs the last rites for her poor sisters when they are gone. At every sewing society she is present, and has a voice in all the enterprises of the church; and not only in them, but in whatever is going on in the community in which she lives.

But this poor woman that she is so cruel to is a constant sufferer. Our minister's wife makes this poor woman work so hard that she has a great portion of the time a steady pain from her head all down the spinal column, so she is hardly fit to sit up, and in this wretched condition our minister's wife compels her to compose, and write papers for the missionary society, to preside over benevolent associations, to prepare reports and answer calls from everywhere and everybody that come in. How can she answer all this to her conscience it is hard to see. Perhaps she thinks she has a right, because this poor, overworked woman is just herself. Has she a right? That is the question. —Exchange.

A Sunny Face.

Wear it. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses it possessor, and all who come under its benign influence. It is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant, ever-flowing benediction to all his friends. Men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced. All doors are open to those who smile. All social circles welcome cheerfulness. A sunny face is an open sesame to hearts and homes. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant where fear and doubt and despondency held high carnival. Your own life will be sweetened, your own hopes quickened, your own joys heightened by your perennial, heaven-lighted, sunny face. Get the glow and radiance from such nearness to the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around. A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially so to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny-faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence. Childhood runs into the arms of such.—Exchange.

The hours of a wise man are lengthened by his ideas, as those of a fool are by his passions. The time of the one is long, because he does not know what to do with it; so is that of the other, because he distinguishes every moment of it with useful or amusing thoughts; or, in other words, because the one is always wishing it away, and the other always enjoying it.—Addison.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

IF I WERE A GIRL.

BY NORMA BROCK.

If I were a girl, a bright, merry girl,
Just entering life's great field,
I'd arm myself for a noble fight,
And, come what might, would not yield.

What if a poem I never could write
That would thrill with delight the soul,
Or a song to charm I never could sing,
Or reach any lofty goal!

Or if I were doomed to live in the shade,
With none looking on to cheer!
I'd live a song so sweet, so pure,
That angels would listen and hear.

I would be so careful that not a note
In my one song should discord make,
And if the tones with tears were faint
I'd still keep them true for His sake,

Whose ear would surely catch the strain,
And its harmony He would see.
Then O the joy that my heart would feel
When he said: "Your song pleased me!"

—Onward.

In Japan.

JAPANESE NEW YEAR (Shinnen).

The Japanese for three days give themselves up to the New Year. The first day soldiers and other organized bodies may be seen visiting the homes of prominent officials. Students of the various schools assemble to salute the Emperor's photograph. The second day is more especially for merchants. Their stores are opened that morning many hours before day, and special inducements in the way of gifts are offered to early buyers. On this account, or because it is the custom, the streets are crowded until break of day, when the people disperse. During all three of the days it is in order to visit your friends and leave your card in the basket placed for the purpose at the threshold. If urged, you may enter, and be conducted to the noblest room of the house, where is a feast of choice food, including wine, already prepared. If you insist that you have already eaten, or for any reason can not partake, it makes no difference; dishes are served. Often a few cakes and candies are placed in a paper and presented. They are not to be refused, but carried off. You hurry away to other homes, followed by salutations and congratulations. O Medeto gazarimasu, "I wish you joy," is on every side.

At night the young men and ladies, and often the old, assemble at private homes for playing cards (Karuta). This game is different from the American game. The Japanese are not gamblers, and the principal objection to their card-playing is the fascination that holds them sometimes until long past midnight. The game belongs to the New Year, and offers one of the few opportunities for social intercourse between the two sexes.

The small boy flouts his kite in the streets, or upon the plains and mountains. The little girls, dressed in their best clothes, toss balls, play hop-scot and a kind of battledore and shuttlecock. The preparations occupy the last days of the old year. On both sides of the entrance to each home a small pine from the mountain is temporarily planted, and over the threshold decorations are made of rice straw and oranges. Many collectors of debts run through the streets until late with portable lanterns. Long-standing accounts are settled, new business arrangements made. Great quantities of mochi and zoni are prepared. The mochi is made by steaming rice and beating it into a dough. This dough is eaten as it is, being formed into little biscuits. Sometimes a mash of sweetened beans is placed inside each biscuit. The zoni is eaten only at New Year. It is made by boiling mochi, fish, and various vegetables together.

It should be mentioned that the devout souls, and, indeed, many who had been neglectful of their devotions, upon the first morning worship every god kept in the home, and the Emperor himself prays upon this day for the peace of the country. H. G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, Japan, Jan. 20, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: I, like many others, have found the "children's corner" very interesting, and would like my writing to fill a small space. I am one of the girls of the Seventh Street Orphan's Home. We have Sunday-school here every Sabbath afternoon, and our kind teachers come through storm and sunshine to teach us the Word of our dear Lord and Savior. My teacher is Mrs. Perkins, and we all love her dearly. Our superintendent is Mr. Rodd, and he faithfully ministers to us. We have a great many little children who help to form our circle, each one trying to learn some lesson pleasing to their Creator. If any of the readers of the ADVOCATE would like to know the name of the beloved superintendent who was with us last year, they can find it by solving the following spiritual acrostic, and the first letters of each answer will spell his name: In what city was our Savior born? Who opened the gate for Peter after he was released from prison? What people did the Lord send plagues upon? What book in the Bible does not once mention the name of God? Whom did the Lord anoint in place of Saul? Who was Jacob's first wife? What book precedes Jonah? With what word did Solomon begin his preaching? Who sold his birthright? Which of Joseph's brethren did he retain when he sent the others for Benjamin? Who was the oldest man? What did Moses say when he saw the burning bush? Who was the father of Abraham? Who was Noah's second son. With best wishes, I am,

Your friend, ROSA E. WHIDDEN.

New Orleans, La.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written a letter for the children's column, I thought I would try and see if I couldn't think of something that would be interesting enough to fill a little space in your valuable paper. Mama has been taking the ADVOCATE for several years, but I am just now old enough to feel an interest in it. I guess you would like to know something of our Sunday-school and church affairs. Our Sunday-school is not as large as it has been; but I think, as the weather grows warmer, it will increase. We have preaching three times a month. Bro. Knickerbocker, our pastor, is a most excellent minister. Both he and his wife are liked by everyone. I joined the church last Summer. I have no sisters, but three brothers, who, like myself, attend Sunday-school regularly. Wishing the ADVOCATE much success, I remain, as ever,

Your little friend, EMMETT DALTON.

Umbrellas.

How many of you guessed what we were to talk about to-day, children? Most of you, I suppose, for it was not much of a conundrum, was it? None of us remember the time when people went through the pouring rain like so many poor drowned rats, for we have always been used to the sight of an umbrella. But the fact is that though umbrellas were used in Eastern lands hundreds of years ago by the Romans, Greeks, Persians and Chinese, still no one had the courage to introduce them into England or this country for many years. Somewhere near the end of the sixteenth century a traveler wrote in England a letter saying that some of the Italians carried a little leather canopy over their heads, which they called "ombrellas," meaning something that ministers to shadow and shelter them from the scorching sun. In a letter from Gen. Wolfe, written some years later from Paris, he speaks of the use of umbrellas there, and wonders why anything so useful had not already been introduced into England, but they were only exhibited as a curiosity in the museums then, and no effort was made to manufacture them. Suddenly a very courageous man one day appeared on the street carrying an umbrella. It was raining in torrents and his common sense overcame any fear of ridicule. Imagine the crowd he must have collected as he strode along not caring what people thought. The boys jeered at him, while the crowd accused him of being "Frenchy." This man's name was Jonas Hanway, the founder of Magdalene Hospital. He had been in Persia, where he had found how very sensible people were to carry umbrellas, and how they ministered to one's comfort. So on his return he saw no reason for exposing himself and his clothes to the sun and rain. You know there always has to be a first time, children, and doubtless there were many waiting for some one who had the courage to brave public opinion as Jonas did. It is a splendid thing, boys, to have lots of common sense and moral courage, not to be afraid to be manly and independent in all that is right and sensible. I know some young men to-day ("girls" the boys call them, but I deeply resent the reflection) who would not have the moral courage to go away for a vacation because their clothes or hat were "last year's style." I heartily believe, boys, it is always best to keep up to the times if possible, only don't be afraid to do and say what you honestly think about a thing. But to go back to Jonas and his umbrella. I wish we might all have seen the thing, for it must have looked very funny in comparison with the fine silk ones we carry nowadays. At first all the umbrellas were made in France and sent to England and America, and cost a great deal of money. The sticks were heavy and solid like those you see on the umbrellas of the grocer's or express wagons and other carts, etc., that go rumbling about the city. The frame-work at the top was of iron covered with a heavy waxed silk. The handle had a huge wooden knob that rested on the ground, the other end possessed a solid ring by which the affair could be hung; altogether it weighed three or four pounds.

Compare this lumbering heavy thing with the delicate light sun-shades and the best Lyons silk umbrellas, and you will see what rapid strides have been made in that line.

Next time we will talk about something small again and very useful, in fact we could not get on in this world without committing a most dreadful breach of etiquette three times a day were it not for this most useful little article. Yet there was a time before it came into use, and people were very happy, if perhaps not quite so elegant as now since it found a place among us. Guess again, children.—Aunt Katharine, in Christian at Work.

KIND DEEDS. There is a story told of a little beggar boy who was found, one morning, lying asleep upon a pile of lumber, where he had passed the night. A laboring man, passing by on his way to work, touched with a spirit of kindness, stopped, and opening his dinner-pail, laid beside the sleeping boy a portion of the good things in it, and then went on. A man standing not far off, saw the kindly act, and, crossing over to where the boy lay, dropped a silver half dollar near the sandwich the laborer had left. Soon a child came running over with a pair of shoes; and thus the good work went on, one bringing some clothing, and another something else. By-and-by the boy awoke, and, when he saw the gifts spread around him, he broke down, and, burying his face in his hands, wept tears of thankfulness. Thus did one kind deed inspire others to acts of kindness, and sow the seed of much happiness.—Exchange.

BETTER WHISTLE THAN WHINE.—As I was taking a walk early in December, I noticed two little boys on their way to school. The small one stumbled and fell, and though he was not very much hurt, he began to whine in a babyish way, not a regular roaring, boy-cry, as though he were half killed, but a little, cross whine. The older boy took his hand in a kind, fatherly way and said:

"O, never mind, Jimmy; don't whine; it's a great deal better to whistle."

And he began, in the merriest way, a cheerful boyish whistle. Jimmy tried to join in the whistle.

"I can't whistle as nice as you, Charlie," said he. "My lips won't pucker up good."

"O, that is because you have not got all the whine out yet," said Charlie. "But you try a minute and the whistle will drive the whine away."

NOT TO BE DOWNED.—Edith (aged ten): "My grandfather was an English lord, and mama says I'm not to play with you."

Carrie (aged six) very indignant: "I'll let you know I've got blue blood in my veins, too. My grandfather was one of the pilgrims that came to this country in the ship Sunflower, and landed on Plimpton Rock."—Exchange.

A little San Francisco girl who, in all her six years, had never seen a snowfall, was so delighted at the rare sight of one that, oath to lose them, she collected a lot of the fairy-like flakes into balls and carefully deposited them under the kitchen range for safe-keeping. An hour later a dejected little figure crept into mama's room, sobbing bitterly. "The snowballs have burst," she wailed, "and all the juice has run out of them."

A little lad of four was playing doctor to some of his playmates. With the dignity of a judge, he requested the patient to show his tongue, and then, using a pencil for a thermometer, as he had doubtless seen the family physician do, he said:

A five-year-old boy, who had seen a peacock for the first time, ran into the house exclaiming to his sister: "Oh, Lizzie! I've seen a great, great, big, monstitorous tail walkin' round with a hen tied to it."

We may compare the soul to a linen cloth: it must be first washed to take off its native hue and color, and to make it white; and afterwards it must be ever and anon washed to preserve and keep it white.—South.

GENTRY—AURORA D., daughter of Dr. T. ...and M. J. Cotton, and wife of W. W. Gentry, was born in Camden, Miss., May 12, 1853, and died at Nicholson, Hancock county, Miss., Dec. 27, 1892.

Another home is desolate, for the wife and mother has been called from thence; a devoted husband is widowed, and three little ones are motherless. An aged father and mother, together with an affectionate brother and sister, are also bowed down by a more than ordinary sorrow, for she was ever the pride and joy of the old home. How tenderly do they recall the extreme docility and obedience of her childhood, and with what saddened pleasure recount the fact that with her neither parents or teachers ever found it necessary to use the rod! In early womanhood she consecrated her life to the service of God, uniting with the Primitive Baptist Church and receiving baptism at the hands of her father.

On Easter Sunday, 1883, she left the cultured Christian home in which she was reared to gladden one of her own. For this her superior education, affectionate disposition and practical sense eminently fitted her. Loving her husband with an extraordinary devotion, his welfare and interest were ever kept in view as objects of first importance. With her children she was tender, devoted, self-sacrificing. She was a systematic, thorough housekeeper; like Solomon's virtuous woman, "looking well unto the ways of her household." Her friendship was warm and true. She loved to be of service to her friends, and if trouble or sorrow overtook one, she straightway became as one of God's ministering spirits—an angel of strength and consolation.

Though the blow fell suddenly on family and friends, she had for several months endeavored to prepare them for it, often expressing the conviction that she would live but a short while. Though sore grieved, her loved ones find much in her pure and loving life to comfort them. They feel satisfied that she has exchanged an earthly for a heavenly home; then why should they grieve, since they know where she is, and how to find her? S. E. S.

Poplarville, Miss.

SETTLES—MARY ZELIE, adopted daughter of Josiah D. and Mary E. Settles, was born Dec. 7, 1878; died Nov. 25, 1892. Zelie was given to us by her father, Mr. J. B. Herbert, of West Baton Rouge, La., at the age of eighteen months.

Just three months have elapsed since the sweet spirit of our darling daughter was peacefully borne to the beautiful land of the soul of which she so often sang. It is a sad reality that our precious one is gone from us, never more to brighten our home where she was the joy of our hearts. Yes, her voice of music and love is hushed, her soft blue eyes, so expressive, closed; but her soul is with God, who only knows the desolation of the broken heart of her loving mama, where her dutiful and devoted daughter was so enthroned. Early in life she evinced a burning love for God and his people, loved to attend the class and prayer meeting, and at the age of eight years gave her young heart to God, who is gathering up his jewels, plucking our earthly treasures, transplanting them to burst into eternal bloom in the fair fields of paradise.

Zelie was only sick a few days when the bright sunshine of her pure and innocent life died; but the sweet influence will ever linger in our hearts of sadness, inspiring us to a nobler life, for her lovely character shone brightest in her beautiful devotion to papa and mama. Good by, joy little darling, until we meet in heaven! MAMA.

MORGAN—Whereas, It hath pleased God, in his wise providence, to remove from us our beloved TURNER GREY MORGAN, who was born March 9, 1827, and fell on sleep Sept. 18, 1892. Bro. Morgan was a member of the Methodist Church from his childhood. In all the relations of life he was true and faithful. He was a useful member of the Quarterly Conference; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Brooksville circuit, Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, that while we bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, we mourn the loss of him who was often tried and found good and true.

Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference tender its heartfelt sympathy to Sister Morgan and her children in this sad affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered in the record book, a copy furnished the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATES, and one be sent to the family of Bro. Morgan.

WALTER PRICE, for Committee.

MANLEY—W. L. MANLEY was born in Louisa county, Va., Sept. 20, 1813; was married to Ellen Sherman, Nov. 5, 1868. He joined the M. E. Church at Hinds Chapel in 1873, and departed this life Feb. 14, 1893.

Bro. Manley was one of the most conscientious men I ever met. He did not believe that a Christian could retain his integrity and not pay his debts. He never made much demonstration publicly, because of the fact that he had such a horror of some one thinking that he was acting a hypocrite. He did not come up to the standard that he thought a genuine Christian should, and he suffered this fact to discourage him from making public demonstration. He told me that he tried to do his duty to God and to his fellow-man. He held family prayers and ask the blessing at the table. I was to see him Monday before he died, and when I told him good-by, he said: "Pray for me; I am suffering so I can not pray." He said: "If I had made no preparation for death until now I could not do it at all." He leaves a wife and four children behind to mourn his loss, five having preceded him to the glory-world. Weep not, dear ones, for him, but rather rejoice that the Father has called him home. His pastor, C. W. PERKINS.

NEWSOM—JOSEPH FARIS NEWSOM, son of G. A. and Lizzie Newsom, was born in Jefferson county, Miss., March 7, 1872, and on Sept. 28, 1892, the messenger of death opened her sweet white arms and whispered, "Come, lay thy sorrows in this bosom, and I will bear them away."

Faris was liked by all who knew him. He was a dutiful son, a loving brother and a true friend to the cause of Christ. He joined the M. E. Church, South, and professed religion several years ago (I do not know the year). Just before he died he told his parents that he did not fear death; that he saw that his way was clear.

Father, mother, brothers and sisters, weep no more o'er thy fond brother; because if he had stayed here life would have made his soul dependent on the dust, which is perishing leaf by leaf, and land by land, flower by flower, and hill by hill, away. But death, who gave him wings to mount above the spheres, who bursts the involving cloud and shown the light of day, pointed with finger spired to a distant, giant world, and said, "There, there is my home." Oh! what a delightful home. B. W. LEWIS.

DODSON—FANNIE, eldest daughter of Mr. C. E. and Mrs. M. F. Dodson, was born Feb. 23, 1881, and on the eve of Nov. 11, 1892, her pure spirit winged its flight to the better land. She told her mama in the morning before she died she would be with papa before sundown; he had called her and told her to come to him. Fannie was a sufferer from babyhood, and the last two months of her sweet little life were spent with much suffering from dropsy; but she bore it with patience, and said she was willing to die. Her papa had only preceded her to the better land two months lacking three days. She was a loving daughter and a kind sister. She leaves mama, five brothers and two sisters to follow her.

May the Lord help the mother to trust him still, to humbly kiss the rod that works his holy will. AUNT FRONIE.

Nashville Christian Advocate please copy.

BRELAND—LIZZIE LOUELLA, little daughter of Calvert W. and Emily Breland, was born Jan. 9, 1886, and died Jan. 12, 1893. The cause of her death was a burn which she received on the morning of March 12, 1892. Her sufferings lasted nearly a year. She came very near recovering twice—in fact, was thought to be well. But our heavenly Father has taken her unto himself, and she is now free from pain.

To the bereaved father and mother we would say, Do not grieve after your loved one. While she will never more comfort your hearts here, yet there is joy in the fact that you have one more tie in heaven, even your precious little daughter. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate," and the next time you meet her the meeting will be forever. W. J. DAWSON.

LEWIS—E. BAYANT LEWIS, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Lewis, was born in Marion county, Miss., April 13, 1871, and died at Bogue Chitto, Miss., Feb. 8, 1893.

Thus passed away a noble, gentle and useful young man. He was kind and loving at home, and in the town in which he lived greatly beloved by all who knew him. He joined the church when about ten years old, and ever thereafter lived a consistent member. He died rather suddenly with pneumonia; but when he saw that he was dangerously ill, he said "that whether he died or lived he was all right," and just before the end came he sung a part of the hymn, "Jesus, lover of my soul." May God comfort the loved ones left behind!

J. G. CAMMACK.

DODSON—Mr. C. E. DODSON was born Aug. 6, 1857; married to Miss M. F. Eddins, Nov. 13, 1877; professed faith in Christ and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at about the age of twenty-five; died Sept. 14, 1892, after an illness of ten days. He was a kind and loving husband and father, a good neighbor, and ever lent a willing hand to aid the sick and distressed. He leaves two brothers, a heart-broken wife, five sons and three daughters, many relatives and friends to mourn his irreparable loss, which is his eternal gain. May God help the mother to raise the precious children the father loved so true to meet him where parting comes no more!

A RELATIVE.

PINKSTON—Bro. A. P. PINKSTON, the subject of this short sketch, departed this life Feb. 27, 1893, aged forty-five years ten months and twenty-six days, with the hope of a glorious resurrection. Among his last words he said: "I am prepared and want to go." Yes, like St. Paul, he preferred to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. We buried his remains at Tranquil Church, Yazoo county, Miss., where he had once held his membership.

He leaves an aged mother, wife, and five children. May the God of all grace and mercy comfort and guide them, and bring them all safely home at last!

R. T. NOLEN, L. P.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Stallelinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

CHRIST WALKING ON THE SEA OF GALILEE.

AMONG the great religious paintings of modern times, Christ Walking on the Sea, by Charles Francer, is a masterpiece. The text from which the picture was taken is this: When even was come, his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship. And it was dark, and the ship was in the midst of the sea, and Jesus alone was on the land and was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew. And he saw them toiling in rowing, for the wind was contrary unto them, and the ship was now in the midst of the sea tossed with the waves. Jesus cometh unto them, walking upon the sea and would have passed them. But when the disciples saw him walking on the sea and drawing nigh unto the ship, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out for fear. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid."

This beautiful biblical description the painter has chosen for his subject, and his wonderful painting appeals in the highest degree to the religious sentiment, as well as the artistic taste and refinement of every nationality and every creed.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

A large delegation of merchants, bankers and ship owners from Dublin and other places in Leinster, and also from the provinces of Munster and Connaught, was received on March 10 by Lord Salisbury. The object of the delegation was to show that there was a strong opposition to home rule in other parts of Ireland besides Ulster.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Hon. John Wanamaker, who was Postmaster General in President Harrison's Cabinet, spent a few days in this city last week. He was accompanied by a party, who are traveling for pleasure.

Boston was visited by a very destructive fire on March 10, which burned over more than a square. Losses aggregate $4,500,000. Many lives were lost, and many persons were maimed and mangled.

It is announced that ex-President Harrison intends to devote the most of his time next Winter to writing a book, which will explain to the American public matters connected with his administration that have never been fully understood.

With the object of taking observations of the eclipse of the sun, in the three brief minutes during which it will be visible on April 16, next, Prof. Schaeberle, of the Lick University, is now on his way to the top of the Andes in South America.

The Bishop Brooks memorial committee has announced in Boston the closing of the fund, the amount subscribed having reached $77,200. A sub-committee was chosen to employ an artist or architect, obtain designs, determine the site, and carry on the work.

The vaults of the United States mint in Philadelphia hold the largest amount of silver ever stored in one place in the United States. The quantity is 110,000,000 ounces or fully equal to make $150,000,000 in dollars. Besides this amount there are sealed in the separate vaults $50,000,000 in coined silver.

President Cleveland is reported to have said that he would not call an extra session of Congress, as the only object, the repeal of the silver purchase, could not be effected this year. Regarding Hawaii, the President, it is reported, deprecated over haste, and said he would probably send a commission there.

Delegates from cotton-growing counties of Arkansas to the number of 200 assembled in Little Rock, March 10, to discuss the acreage of the staple for the season of 1893-94, and for other purposes of benefit to their chief crop. After effecting a state organization and electing delegates to the Interstate Cotton Planters' Convention at New Orleans, the meeting adjourned sine die.

One of the most interesting sights of the World's Fair will be the great Indian sculptor, Panduro, from Guadalajara, Mexico, making clay busts of living subjects in sight of the visitors. Space has been granted for the purpose, and a large quantity of the special clay that he uses has been shipped to Chicago. He is an uncultivated Indian, but has marvelous skill, and can produce a most exact portrait in a very few minutes.

The Texas Cotton Convention, to take steps to reduce the acreage, met in Austin on March 10, with about seventy-five delegates present. The sentiment was in favor of reduced acreage, but it is most too late in the season to make a reduction this year, as most of the farmers have made their contracts for labor and rentals. Resolutions were adopted recommending diversity of crops and reduced acreage in cotton if practical this year.

President Cleveland's first executive communication to the Senate of the United States came in on March 9, and proved to be a surprise, not only to Republicans, but to many Democrats as well. In the communication President Cleveland withdrew the treaty with Hawaii which was sent to the Senate a few weeks ago by the President. The message was short, simply requesting the Senate to transmit to the executive the proposed treaty with Hawaii.

The highest salary drawn by a diplomatist is that of M. Waddington, the French ambassador to London. His salary is $60,000 a year, besides which he has a large private income.

The bill consolidating all the Grand Trunk Railroad branch lines into one system, under the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, has been passed by the Railroad Committee of the House of Commons.

All the Canadian railways have agreed upon a rate to the World's Fair at Chicago. The general public will get return tickets at $24, that is, about one fare and a third. These tickets will be issued from April 15 to Oct. 31, inclusive, and they will be good for one month.

At the conference between the Pope and the French bishops who attended the jubilee the Pope announced that just before the French parliamentary elections he would address to the French episcopacy a letter, in which he would urge the necessity of forming in the Chamber a party of republican Catholics.

Lichtenworth, a village of 1,110 inhabitants in lower Austria, has been swept by a terrible thunder storm, which lasted fifteen hours. During the storm lightning was almost incessant. Twelve houses were struck and burned. Five people were struck dead in the streets and seven perished in burning buildings.

M. Flory, the government accountant, who had been appointed to examine the accounts of the Panama Canal Company, was called upon to testify at the trial on March 10. He estimates that the Panama Canal Company had expended 105 000,000 francs in payment for newspaper advertising and for favorable notices in the newspapers and other services connected with the general puffing of the enterprise. About 558,000,000 of francs, being less than half the total amount subscribed, had been expended in the actual operations on the canal. The present assets amounted to 20,000,000 francs.

BEAUTY AND PURITY

Beauty of skin and purity of blood go hand in hand. No greater blessing than a skin without blemish, and a body nourished by pure blood, is vouchsafed to man or woman. It is the foundation of health and happiness. To cleanse the blood, skin, and scalp of every eruption, impurity and disease, and restore the hair, no agency in the world of medicine is so speedy, economical and unfailing as the CUTICURA REMEDIES. Everything about them inspires confidence. They are absolutely pure, and may be used on the youngest infant. They afford immediate relief in the most agonizing of itching and burning eczemas, and other itching, scaly and crusted skin and scalp diseases. They prevent inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blotches, blackheads, red, rough and oily skin. They speedily cure humors of the blood and skin with loss of hair, whether simple scrofulous, hereditary, or ulcerative. They cleanse the system of all impurities by internal and external medication, and constitute the most effective treatment of modern times.

MISS FLORENCE E. BEHLER,

No. 37 Alma St., Allegheny, Penna. writes: Dermo-Royale works like a charm. My face was covered with freckles and in less than two weeks' time they are gone. My complexion is now clear and white as a child's. Everyone can see what Dermo-Royale has done for me.

Mrs. Ella M. Murray, Newton, N. C. writes: I have used one bottle and have found a great change. In what the doctors here called Skin Leprosy—large brown spots, causing no pain or trouble, except the look—they have entirely gone and I can recommend Derma-Royale highly. Please send me your terms to agents.

Miss Von Hoane, No. 807 Dayton Street, Newport, Ky., writes: For nearly five years I was afflicted with eczema. My face was a mass of sores and scabs and the itching was terrible. I found nothing that could help me until I tried your Derma-Royale. I have not used quite one bottle and my skin is smooth and clear. I call myself cured, and consider Derma-Royale the greatest remedy in the world.

DERMA-ROYALE

The new discovery for curing cutaneous affections, removing discolorations and bleaching and beautifying the complexion. In experimenting in the laboratory with a new bleach for fine fabrics it was found that all spots, freckles, tan, and other discolorations were quickly removed from the hands and face without the slightest injury to the skin. The discovery was submitted to experienced dermatologists and Physicians who incorporated it with well known curatives and prepared for us the marvelous preparation Royale. THERE NEVER WAS ANYTHING LIKE IT. It is perfectly harmless and so simple a child can use it. Apply at night—the improvement apparent after single application will surprise and delight you. One bottle completely removes and cures the most aggravated case and thoroughly clears, whitens and beautifies the complexion. It has never failed and will NOT FAIL. It is highly recommended by Physicians and its sure results warrant us in offering

Letter from Kentucky.

BY J. H. COTTRELL, D. D.

The card of Bro. J. A. Parker, of mer, La., telling of the death of one his sons from accidental discharge a gun, on the twenty-first of Febru-, ultimo, in the NEW ORLEANS RISTIAN ADVOCATE of the second March, mingles itself with several er events which have caused tears flow. There is a sense in which re was never an accident. Chance! k! accident! Neither of these is own in the economy of the governnt of One in whom and of whom are

There is a sense in which it is e, that "whatsoever cometh to pass rdained of God." The distinction the freeness of n volition and the essity of a forceful enactment marks ifference the philosophic mind aphends upon its baro statement. he Lord reigneth! Let the earth oice! Let the multitude of isles be d thereof! Clouds and darkness round about him! Righteousness judgment are the habitation of his one!"

Memories of the days when Parker under my jurisdiction, as presidelder, in old Alabama, in the six-, have been brought up vividly to nd by announcement of the terrible ction that has befallen him and ; and the Spring rain that has softd this Wednesday, from the early rning until the middle of the afternn, has been in symbolization of the npathetic sorrow in which I've been nking of my friends.

've been having it upon the point my purpose to write for the Arena a sertation, not altogether in denial the theory of religion advanced in March issue of that magazine by is R. Ehrich, entitled "A Religion All Time," but a dissertation in illration of the fact I've frequently arked, viz.: that there is nothing rue but that there is somewhat else te as true that is seemingly in condiction thereto. The point claimed Ehrich is, that the controlling, hi-adjusting motive which is to monize, symmetrize and happify anity, will be first on behalf of ture weal; that we are to love and or God for man's sake, and not to ider man for God's sake. The ter, to my mind, is readily settled. re is no call for any solution of blem. Cause and effect are recipal throughout all phenomenal exsion of wisdom and power. A nut es into all that organically consti- a tree, and the tree culminates in oduction of the nut, which, potenly, is the tree again. Parallel, or cident with this, have we the rd of parentage and offspring in ifold forms. Upon hypothesis of a sis, through creative force and whether there was a germal initon, or whether full formation, at genesis, of what now passes in es of reproductions, involve pre- the same question of divine, onal sufficiency in the creative enent. There is an ad captandum of- of proposing, as Ehrich does, love an as reason or occasion for love od; but a ready way off from or of any perplexity is, that love is ate and immediate. It obliges n our relations, after what we may a disinterested—altogether—inter- manner. One's own individual, onal, organic self-obligement, that tually puts estoppage to the possiy of the question whether he may more allied to his eyes or his ears his lips or his tongue—helps to an rehension of the nothingness of this iful issue; as whether religion lies our loving and serving God for 's sake, or man for God's sake. re I challenged with the question ther I love my parents for my hers' and sister's sake, or the latter he sake of the former, I would not that there was either the cause of other. They are loved in associa- ; but, I suspect, the last analysis love each and I love all, for my sake. Self-love is the root—the ification—for all loves. It is imible that we love another better we love ourself. Nor is it re- ed! "Thou shalt love thy neigh- as thyself." Our domestic loves saint us with, as they qualify us that love which operates the or- unification of the spiritual kingso graphically depicted by Paul: mpacted by that which every joint plies, according to the effectual king in the measure of every part, making increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Fulfilling conditions of duty lifts to the enjoyment of privilege, and, reciprocally, consideration of privilege qualifies for performance of duty. There is the round of reciprocity here, according to the analogy obtaining in the whole round of moral and of spiritual life. Catholic human love and the love divine are in reciprocal action and reaction, which perfect us in life and enrich us in the franchises of such being as justifies us in saying, 'Our Father, who art in heaven!" Of course, criticisms in regard to methods and forms of worship are legitimate. A disciplining of the taste of Zion, so that our occasions of worship shall become to the people attractive and instructive, comes next in importance to the right utterance of what may be termed the gospel. Over-fastidiousness, however, is as hindering as is slovenly disregard of proprieties. "Let all things be done decently and in order."

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE circulates in the range of itinerant service in the early years of my ministry. The notice of Parker's affliction has, by the law of association, called up to mind many and much. To all who yet linger this side the dark river I wish to send greeting. I've ever recoiled from demonstrating on papor what I've felt of brotherly devotion; but this occasion our Bro. Parker's bereavement causes for expression of sympathy, I avail myself of to say to all who yet linger of my comrades, Heaven bless you!

Calls are coming in upon me to fill lecture engagements, and I hope, during the Spring, to be through Alabama and Mississippi.

My health is improving from effect of my coming under strictest regimen. I asked for, and was granted, supernumerary relation to the Louisville Conference this year, on account of attacks of vertigo that had become rather frequent.

Cloverport, where I am with my daughter, Mrs. Carrie W. Short whose husband is a druggist, is on a beautiful bend of the Ohio river. Belleview Bend is a name I've given the curve. The Indiana and Kentucky scene is a picturesque one.

March 8, 1893.

Nashville Notes.

The month of February, last, will, for a long time to come, be memorable in the history of Nashville as a time of great spiritual awakening among the unconverted, and of earnest religious activity among professed Christians. In fact, those who ought to know, are confident in asserting that never before in their observation have they beheld such a widespread interest on the subject of religion as was manifested in this city during the twenty days that Mr. Mills was conducting his meeting in our midst. Of course, long before his coming the Christian churches had begun preparations. Plans were laid, organization instituted, prayers offered up for the success of the meeting; everyone was expecting great things from God, and, as it often happens when the faith of his people rises to the right pitch, God surprises them by the magnificence of his bestowments, so, though for weeks our community of Christians had been planning and working and hoping for a great blessing, when it did come it was of such grander proportions than their faith had dared even to hope, that it really proved an astonishment.

Mr. Mills was himself a wonder from the very first. In appearance, he is quite an ordinary person. Being very small of stature, he can not inspire an audience with anything like a commanding presence, from any physical cause; but somehow the presence is felt, and the command is implicitly obeyed. He held audiences of five and six thousand, with fully a fifth part standing. Then, too, he has no tricks of oratory to please; no flights of eloquence to enthuse. He rarely ever gets out of a conversational address; he seldom thunders; he never rants; yet, in spite of this absence of what the common run of people seem to like best, those very same folks sit quietly and attentively, earnestly interested in his words; so that an inquiry as to what constitutes the elements of success in the case of this noted evangelist must go elsewhere for a proper solution. A careful study of the method, manner and matter of Mr. Mills will, perhaps, afford a most satisfactory answer to the question. And, first, as to his peculiar method of conducting a revival. That he has one, and himself is the sole claimant to it, the phrase, now current, "Mills' method," abundantly testifies. To him a series of meetings means just as much forethought and careful planning and maneuvering of forces as a battle means to a sagacious general. It is a regular campaign, with campaign literature, campaign funds, and campaign committees, just as much as any political contest calls for. Long before his arrival at any place he has all the forces that he is to lead munitioned, marshalled, and ready for the charge which he himself is to lead. His great aim is to get the Christian churches united so as to present a solid front of combined faith and earnestness. In short, the method is that dictated by reason and consecrated common sense. It is business law in the spiritual world.

Then the manner of this preacher is such as to call for attention. From the moment he utters his first word, a hearer is consciously impressed with the fact that the man standing before him has a deep sympathy and love for him. The tone of his voice, the look of his eye, and the winning smile that now and then plays across his countenance, all prove to the hearer that it is a friend and helper whose words he hears. But beyond this, and beneath these externals, there is the deep-seated earnestness of the lover of men's souls. Men can not hear Mr. Mills and say that preaching is a mere profession. There is nothing of the professional air about him. He speaks in a huge tabernacle filled with people as though there were but one man present, and he an inquirer after the way of salvation.

The matter of his message is thoroughly consonant with his directness of method and his sympathetic earnestness of manner. It is the plain story of the gospel simply told and practically illustrated. A deep and thoroughly spiritual understanding of the Bible, together with a profound knowledge of human nature, linked with a positive conviction of the truth of what he says, and a whole-souled consecration to the work of saving men—these constitute the equipment of this evangelist. Love is his motive, the sheaves he gathers his reward, and God his only source of power. It is no wonder that the Holy Spirit used him in doing a great work.

One of the events of the meeting was the "week-day" Sabbath. Wednesday was set apart each week as a day of special effort and prayer. Services were held all over the city throughout the day through the agency of cottage prayer meetings early in the morning and special services at the later hours.

On the second Wednesday a sight was presented that some eyes looked upon for the first time. Over a thousand of the business houses and manufactories closed their places during the hours of service in order to give their employees opportunity to attend. That day three services were held in the tabernacle, each time the crowd being all out of proportion to the building. Surely the man must be blind of sight and blunt of mind to have the temerity to stand up in the face of such a spectacle and declare that the power of the gospel is waning, or that Jesus is losing control over the hearts of men.

The result of the revival no one can measure. The fraternal feeling of sympathy and co-operation which it engendered among the evangelical denominations was full pay for all effort put forth. An opportunity to see and hear such a man as Mr. Mills was enough reward. The methods learned by his stay among us are invaluable; the instructions that he left the city pastors will be yielding rich fruit for years to come; and when, in addition to all this, we remember that over fifteen hundred people made a determined move toward accepting Christ, and the city was left with a protracted meeting going on in nearly every one of the evangelical churches in order to gather up and preserve the results of Mr. Mills' visit, we must say that the investment that the churches of Nashville made last month will pay larger and more enduring dividends than all of her commercial enterprises multiplied a hundredfold. If evils come not, then our fears are vain,
And if they do, fear but augments the pain.

The Cyclone of March 3.

The terrible cyclone which swept through Lauderdale county so recently is calculated to put us all to thinking. The one which devastated Marion and Toomsuba is not the same as the one which wrought destruction on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad. The former occurred at 5:30 P. M., originating north-northwest of Meridian. It consisted of three small cyclones, beginning about a mile from Marion and uniting in the northern part of the village. From there on nothing was left in its track. The formation of the storm was plainly visible from Meridian, and is not likely to be forgotten soon by those who braved the fierce wind to watch it. Directly in the north was seen a small cloud, apparently twenty feet by seventy-five, of a pale, sickly yellow, made the more striking by the volumes of black, billowy clouds by which it was surrounded. They were continuous flashes of sheet lightning from side to side of this strange-looking cloud, which continued until a few tremendous electrical discharges to the earth relieved the surfeit, after which it was lost in the others.

The devastation wrought at Marion and Toomsuba was fearful. Houses were blown to atoms, trees uprooted, in some instances stripped of their bark. Everything directly in its path was covered with mud and punctured with splinters. Where the small end of the funnel seemed to touch the ground, the grass was torn up, and the black soil was left an ashen color as if it had been blasted. There is no use to go into details. They have already been published in all the daily papers. The wonder is not that so many were killed, but that so many escaped alive. The hand of a merciful Providence is unmistakably visible.

The following Sabbath collections were taken in all the churches of this city for the sufferers, besides contributions by various organizations and individuals. On Saturday last an excursion was run to Toomsuba, the proceeds of which went to the sufferers, and over $100 net was realized. This not only gave many an opportunity to see the ruins, but also contributed towards the relief of the utter destitution in various places. On Sunday following, the Sabbath was wantonly desecrated by another excursion which was run down the N. O. and N. E. railroad for the same purpose. This latter not only did not have the co-operation of the Christians of Meridian, but was run in direct opposition to a published protest by the representatives of the various Protestant Churches. It purported to be run "in the name of humanity." "In the name of humanity," indeed. Can anything be said to be "in the name of humanity" which, violative of God's law, is calculated to doom the participant to eternal woe?

There is one other incident connected with this storm which should put to shame many of us. Just before the cyclone reached Marion, the little daughter of a widowed lady, seeing its approach, fell upon her knees and prayed: "O Lord, save us, and not only us, but all Marion Station, if it be thy will. But Lord, if it be thy will, take us. But if it be thy will, spare us, and we will be good children and sin no more." Her two little brothers joined in this prayer, and when it was finished they ran up, and one said to his mother, "Now, mama, don't be afraid, for God is going to save us." To which the others responded, "Yes, I feel just that way." And so it was. While the fences were all blown down, and some of the outhouses, this home was without a scratch. Oh, for the practical faith of a little child! Then we might remove mountains. B. F. LEWIS.

Meridian, Miss.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. G. Backus, Eastabuchie, Miss., March 9: "Our first quarterly meeting was held at Eastabuchie with good results. Spiritually and financially, it was a very profitable meeting. The presiding elder, Bro. Partridge, came to us in the spirit of the Master, and his words in the Quarterly Conference were helpful, and his sermons most edifying and uplifting. After the eleven o'clock sermon, on Sunday, we did not forget the day had been set apart as 'Veterans Day.' A collection was taken, and about seventeen dollars raised for our Conference claimants. The love-feast, Sunday afternoon, was marked with the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. It was a most delightful hour, and our hearts were made to rejoice in God, our Savior. Bro. T. W. Adams, of Ellisville, was with us, and contributed to the success of the occasion. His visit was greatly appreciated and his sermons enjoyed. Permit me to add that our lot has been cast with an appreciative people, who are kind and thoughtful toward their pastor and his family. We thank God and take courage."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Sidon charge, North Mississippi Conference, March 6: "Last Sunday was a great day in Sidon. Large and attentive congregation of earnest hearers, upon whom the Holy Ghost descended in gentle, but no less powerful efficacy and decisiveness. Three came forward and gave their hand for membership, and avowed their faith in the power of Christ to save by taking the vows of the church, and promising full obedience thereto. They were all mature persons of sound mind, and know what it meant to take the vows of the church. I trust that this is a beginning and prophecy of the work which will be done on this charge this year. The whole charge, I think, is on the upgrade. We are moving on fairly well in most departments of our work. The people love to come to church, as is indicated by the effort they make to get there, no matter what the circumstances. Taking all the signs of the times and indications of progress into consideration, the bow of promise and a brighter future arches the broadening horizon of our spiritual sky. May there still be greater eagerness to hear the gospel; greater desire to embrace it; greater effort to improve it; greater consecration to maintain it!"

Rev. J. W. Bell, Ripley and New Albany, March 8: "We have just closed the most wonderful meeting I ever saw. It continued for twelve days, and there were more than a hundred conversions. We got fifty-five members. Had forty to assume the church vows at one time Sunday. There were seventy-five taken into the three churches in our little town that day. The work of the meeting was thorough. Nearly all the conversions were at the altar. Bro. W. M. McIntosh, of the North Alabama Conference, did the preaching. I do not know of a preacher of greater power than he. I had him with me at Iuka. God wonderfully blesses his preaching. Bro. Patton was with him, and had charge of the singing, and did much good. The churches here are greatly revived. The town seemed full of hate. Now, if any two professed Christians in the town are unfriendly, I do not know them. Old and bitter feuds are buried. The three churches—Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist—are one in love as they never were. The pastors worked in our meeting just as if it had been their own. Bro. Malone, former pastor, who left the work with a heavy heart because there was no revival at Ripley during his two years, was with us the last few days of the meeting and rejoiced with us in the victory. Bro. McIntosh goes to help me at New Albany on the twentieth instant. He will go to Grenada soon. Pray for us and rejoice with us, and we give all the glory to our God."

Rev. J. E. Riddle, Boyce, La., March 15: "After some delay, we arrived safe and sound early in January. Bro. Jno. Miller met us at the depot, and, our household goods being yet behind, we became guests in that Methodist's hospitable home for nearly a week, till the parsonage could be made ready for occupancy. Yes, we have a parsonage here, a new and comfortable one, though rather small; only three rooms. Two more will be added this Fall, we hope. There is a good stable and shed for buggy (cart), and other houses on the lot. The parsonage is on two lots, giving ample room for 'kitchen' and flower gardens, and a large lot for the horse, cow and calf. We are going to be supplied soon with the latter. The church is on a large corner lot, just across the street, which is so much better than sticking it up right by the preacher's house. Our house is neatly furnished; everything new. Thirty-six dollars have been spent in the house and on the premises since we arrived. A few friends called, some time since, and supplied us with many things needed in the pantry, and some things needed in the wardrobe. I have a Board of good stewards, who met timely, and allowanced me liberally. They are paying up well, though not in full, as the months go by. I am very much pleased with my other appointments (two), which pleasure grows upon acquaintance. My congregations are larger than at first. They seem to be growing at each of the three appointments. Am sorry we have no prayer meeting. Sunday-schools very good. Colfax hold theirs in the afternoon. This is in agreement with our good and wise senior Bishop's opinion, or suggestion, in respect to the hour best suited for holding Sunday-schools. More children attend preaching there than at any other regular appointment. I like the plan, and believe its general adoption would have no small influence in bringing about a great revival throughout the church."

Rev. H. C. Morehead, Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference: "As the first round of quarterly meetings have been finished, I make the following brief report. Many of the preachers of the district received from the good people of the charges to which they had been assigned for this Conference year substantial expressions of appreciation on entering upon the work of the year. Were it not for the fact you have put the brakes on the brethren, I would be tempted to recite some instances along this line. At the risk of incurring your displeasure and subjecting this to the waste-basket, I will say that the people of this station did not satisfy their desire when they had made Bro. Hargrove and family feel happy, but remembered the inmates of the district parsonage in such a thoughtful, kind and impressive way as to make our hearts glow with love and gratitude to them. . . . If I have not been misled, we are in fine shape for a successful year's work in this part of the vineyard. The preachers are consecrated, faithful and courageous in their work. We are reaping, in part, the fruit of earnest effort put forth in behalf of Sunday-school interest last year. We began the work of 1892 with the conviction that the membership of the Sunday-school ought to equal the membership of the church. This was emphasized privately and publicly. The result is an improvement in this department from 25 to 50 per cent. There are more family altars by far than last year in the beginning. Several of the prayer meetings which were organized in the country charges have continued through the Winter, and are more largely attended and are becoming more and more interesting and profitable. I am happy to report a revival in the study of the Word of God. The result of the observation of the pastors is that more of our members are carefully studying the Bible than heretofore. There is a marked improvement in the piety of many of our people. This is very noticeable. We would have no one infer that all are saints; but this is our prayerful aim. Our people need to give more attention to the literature which comes into their homes—too many secular papers and so-called literary papers (as bad or worse than the 'yellow-back trash' which is flooding our country), and not enough Advocates. . . . Rev. A. J. Jones, pastor at Pleasant Hill, has made needed and valued additions and improvements to the furniture and parsonage of that charge. Rev. C. W. Perkins and the good people of Neshit's will soon rejoice in the completion of their new church. This accomplished, and Methodism comes to the front in that community. Rev. B. P. Jaco has laid the foundation for the second new church in the Panola circuit. The development on this charge in the past two years 'along all lines' is second to none; and should it continue, the day is not far distant when it will be in the front rank of the pleasant circuits of North Mississippi. During the quarterly meeting exercises at Wall Hill, I was requested to visit the home of the patriarch of Methodism in this part of the State, Rev. J. H. Brooks, and administer to him the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Accordingly, in the afternoon of Sunday, accompanied by Rev. T. W. Dye, the pastor, and a few other friends, the pleasant service was held. How solemn and tender the occasion!

'Heaven came down our souls to greet,
And glory crowned the mercy-seat.'

As 'Uncle Joe' said rejoicingly, 'It will, perhaps, be the last time I will ever commune with you here,' and then pointed heavenward. We were made exceeding happy. The name of this great and good man throughout this section of country is as ointment poured forth. We will meet him in the land of song and gladness."

JOY OF INCOMPLETENESS.

BY J. BESSEMBRES.

If all our lives were one broad glare
Of sunlight, clear, unclouded;
If all our paths were smooth and fair,
By no soft gloom enshrouded;
If all life's flowers were fully blown,
Without the sweet unfolding,
And happiness were rudely thrown
On hands too weak for holding—
Should we not miss the twilight hours,
The gentle haze and sadness?
Should we not long for storms and showers,
To break the constant gladness?

If none were sick and none were sad,
What service could we render?
I think if we were always glad,
We scarcely could be tender;
Did our beloved never need
Our patient ministration,
Earth would grow cold and mis, indeed,
Its sweetest compensation;
If sorrow never claimed our heart,
And every wish were granted,
Patience would die and hope depart—
Life would be disenchanted.

And yet in heaven is no more night,
In heaven is no more sorrow;
Such unimagined new delight
From grace from pain will borrow
As the poor seed that underground
Seeks its true life above it,
Not knowing what will there be found,
When sunbeams kiss and love it.
So we in darkness upward grow,
And look and long for heaven,
But can not picture it below,
Till more of light be given.

Is the Devil Black?

BY JULIEN C. BROWN, D. D.

The name of Judas Iscariot has been malodorous in human history since that fatal night, eighteen hundred years ago, when he betrayed his Master in the Garden of Olivet. No obloquy has been too black, no opprobrium too bitter, no hate too severe and no loathing too abhorrent to express even in part that sense of outraged justice which the human mind has felt rightly belonged to him who could sell sinless innocence to a shameful death for the paltry sum of $15. Through successive generations his name has been categorically pilloried with that of the devil and Beelzebub, "prince of devils." Branded as the arch-traitor of all time, his character has been linked with all that is most repulsive in vice, debasing in avarice and hideous in crime. No word of extenuation for his sin and no whisper of sympathy for his tragic ending has ever floated over the mighty tracts of the world's strange history. The verdict of all nations and times and places has gone against him, and the traitor sleeps in a grave on which a universal execration casts a stone of hate at every moment of duration. Once indeed is he chronicled in this wise by an old monk of the Middle Ages: St. Brendan was cruising in the Arctic Seas amid cold and interminable ice-fields when one day in the distance he beheld standing upon a huge iceberg the lone and solitary figure of a man. He drew near and recognized Judas Iscariot. When asked how he came to be there, Judas replied: 'Once every hundred years, amid the intolerable heats of hell, an angel touches me and gives me a brief respite from burning tortures because, once when a man, I gave a coat to a shivering beggar on the streets of Joppa."

If it be established that there was no necessity for a betrayer, and that such betrayal as actually took place was not contemplated in the divine plan by which the Savior was to march step by step to the completion of his sacrifice of himself, then the action of Judas was certainly a crime, but whether willful or not, remains to be considered. If, on the other hand, it be established that all the events connected with those last few days moved in a divinely ordained order, each event following the other in strict succession as a prearranged and predestined plan of the Almighty to consummate the tragedy, and thus through it the redemption of the world, then the action of Judas must be regarded as having little or no moral significance or can only be called at the furthest, a simple mistake—a very sad blunder. Whether or not he could have avoided his action opens up anew the old controversy of necessity and free-will into which we do not care to enter. Suffice it to say, we but voice the reigning and popular belief when we assert that right and wrong lie before every man, and that he is free to choose between them, and the responsibility of choice rests with himself.

The fatalist's belief is that every man's actions are determined by causes external and internal, over which he has no power, leaving no room for any moral choice whatever. The first is contradicted by facts, the second by the instinct of conscience. We prefer this view of the case. A betrayal was not necessary in the divine plan, and Judas was free to betray his Master or not according as dominant feelings and motives swayed his will from hour to hour. We can not admit that an irreversible decree, predetermined of God, hurried the poor human on to commit an act which would result in his irretrievable ruin. No. He stood where ten thousand men are standing every day, confronting a terrible temptation, and one that had been gathering in mighty force for months past preparatory to the final onslaught; and when the decisive moment arrived he wavered and fell—though he might have stood.

Now, then, to determine the motive which prompted his sin must be our aim, for upon that hinges the degree of his guilt, the turpitude of his action and extent of punishment due to his conduct. . . It is a well-known fact that in every properly conducted criminal trial of civilized countries the matter of motives is carefully considered and modifies in some form or other the guilt or innocence of the accused. Motives determine the degree of culpability. What reason had the prisoner for doing this? What was his object?—what specific end was to be attained, and what feeling or impulse or passion moved him at the time? By tracing briefly the history of Iscariot's discipleship, the prevailing expectations and hopes of his countrymen respecting the promised Messiah, the state of the public mind on the eve of the betrayal and subsequent events as connected with Judas himself, we may possibly find a motive less unworthy of him and more charitable for Christians than the one commonly assigned. He was chosen one of the Twelve, and probably about the same time as the others. While Simon the Canaanite, Nathaniel and Bartholomew left no names after them, Judas did, even though it was exalted to a "bad pre-eminence." He was early chosen as treasurer of the little band. Some distinguishing qualifications as a business man—a man of affairs—must have recommended him to such an important and delicate position. They would not certainly have selected him unless he had previously shown some aptitude for such employment. There is no intimation anywhere that he sought the office. It sought him by the common consent. All the disciples and Christ himself must have had confidence in and trusted him, else they would not have permitted him to handle their little store. It is unreasonable to suppose that they would have trusted the little money they had or gathered from time to time for their common necessities into the hands of a known thief. But so it was—what they had was entrusted to him. He was their commissary and "carried the bag" for three years. If during all that time there was any peculation, any misuse, embezzling or squandering of their funds, no mention is anywhere made of it. Neither is it intimated at any time that any of them suspected him of either dishonesty or avarice. If he had failed to honestly and faithfully discharge the duties of his office, we are justified in believing they would promptly have removed or exposed him. They did neither, and up to the very night of the last supper he was their trusted treasurer because from some words Christ spoke to him, "Some of them thought because Judas had the bag that Jesus said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast, or that he should give something to the poor." Singular indeed that a recognized thief and one whose soul was steeped in avaricious greed of gain should hold in such company such position for the space of three good years. It has no marks of likelihood whatever. In a mild and tender way Christ showed his favoritism for Peter, James and John. The first he often rebuked; the other two he reproached in sadness too deep for tears on the sorrowful night of his bitter agony—"Couldst thou not watch with me one hour?" But to Judas and the others he never spoke words of praise or blame, unless when lamenting their lack of faith. The most prejudiced student can find nothing in the record concerning the conduct of Judas up to the night of betrayal that was reprehensible, or that would call for censure. Least of all will he find any intimation or charge of avarice as Iscariot's besetting sin. The fact of his covenanting with the enemies of Jesus to betray him unto them for "thirty pieces of silver" ($15), instead of lending color to the idea of a consuming and degrading avarice, absolutely discredits it. They would have given him a hundred, yes, a thousand times that sum rather than fail in their infamous plot. Whatever Judas may have been, he was no fool. Shrewd, calculating, a man of the world, and knowing men as he did, if money had been his object, he would have bled the conspirators for a sum sufficient to have satisfied in part, at least, that craving desire, and would never have contented himself with the paltry price of a Grecian slave. What to him was "thirty pieces of silver"?—a mere bagatelle in comparison with the munificent amount the nefarious plotters were prepared to pay.

Jerusalem was crowded with people. Enthusiasm for Christ was great, and the desire to make him king was increasing. In proportion as that enthusiasm rose, the vindictive and relentless hate of the chief priests and scribes was intensified. Their very thirst for his blood was consuming. Like sleuth-hounds they tracked him in daylight and in darkness. A grim determination and a fierce persistency in compassing his destruction marked their every movement. "They feared the people." They dreaded lest the man they despised the most and hated the deepest should be taken by force and made to be their king. So often had he exposed their baseness and denounced their conduct that such an occurrence would be an infinite humiliation and a lingering shame. It was a fortunate circumstance that threw Judas in their way. The bargain was soon closed. Judas had his plans, they had theirs, and the two, as we believe, were diametrically opposed to each other. The consideration in their minds was blood; that in the mind of Judas was neither blood nor money.

Events hasten on. The arrest, the mock trial, the terrible tragedy, the quiet grave and the silent garden have passed in sad and painful review before heaven and earth. This man, Judas, who they say loves money so well, who now has his "thirty pieces of silver" and his life in his own hands, what does he do? Does he clutch his pitiful $15 with a miser's insane delight and set about adding to it yet more? Surely he must, for that is the way with avarice. What does it care for the tears and groans and dying of others? Though every piece of the glittering metal be stained with crimson blood, Avarice will kiss it and fondle it as a mother would the best-loved child of her bosom. Avarice will forget all save its one absorbing passion. Life itself is valued only as it gives opportunity for the continuous accumulation of yellow gold. This passion did not belong to Judas. Stunned and crushed and broken by the dread events following his mad betrayal, he returns and seeks another interview with the red-handed murderers of the Son of God. They were quiet with suppressed delight at the success of their plot. They had won, Judas had lost. With a broken heart, a burning conscience and a hopeless forecast of his future, he flung the blood-money at their feet, condemned himself and the unholy betrayal, and left their presence to expiate his guilt by hanging over the Valley of Gehinnon. Avarice would have died with the "thirty pieces of silver" on its blackened heart. Avarice would not have died at all so long as it could be possible to live. Judas betrayed his Lord, but not through that base passion. In another article we will attempt to show the true motive which guided him in his miserable action.

The Keeley Cure.

The results that have attended the operation of the Keeley Cure for drunkenness since it was made known by the discoverer, will justify the statement of a few things as very well-established facts. The first is that drunkenness, whether regarded as alcoholism or as a state induced by the use of morphia, is a disease. However much the drink habit may be regarded by moralists as a vice that deserves the condemnation of God and man, inasmuch as it is self-imposed, nevertheless, every inebriate is not only the victim of a vicious habit, but more than this, he is to a greater or less degree physically diseased. If this disease is allowed to go on unchecked, a stage is reached where there is absolutely no hope—and, I may say, no possibility for recovery—unless there be some natural or supernatural treatment from without; and I have begun to believe that the mere signing of a total abstinence pledge on the part of a man in this advanced stage of disease amounts to little more than would the pledge of a small-pox victim not to exhibit the symptoms of small-pox. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, stated publicly a short time since that in all his long and varied experience he had never known of more than two or three persons who had recovered from drunkenness by the power of the will. The grace of God is able to heal any disease of body, mind, or soul, but the difficulty in the case of the inebriate is that the effect of the disease has reached beyond the physical into the domain of the will, so that he is in a state where it is well-nigh impossible for him to co-operate with divine grace. The fact, then, that so few drunkards, comparatively, have been reclaimed does not, in any wise, discount the grace of God, for a violation of the freedom of the will would impair free agency; but it is sad evidence of the diseased condition of their moral and physical natures. So drunkenness is not different from other physical diseases, caused by sin in this particular, viz.: that it is worthy of medical treatment.

The second thing that the experience of the last few years has rendered certain is that the Keeley Bi-Chloride of Gold Treatment is effective in curing this disease. Rumors have been circulated at various times as to its ineffectiveness, and as to the injurious after effects of the treatment upon mind and body; but these seem to have arisen from the fact that there are a large number of advertised gold cures that have no connection with the genuine Keeley Cure, other than that they are attempts at imitation, or else from the deliberate misrepresentation of facts on the part of those whose interest the truth antagonizes. Well-authenticated statistics show that through the medium of the various branch establishments authorized by the Parent Institute at Dwight, Ill., there have been cured somewhere near one hundred thousand men from the diseases induced by the various habits of drink, opium, etc., and that only about three per cent. have backslidden. This is as good a showing as can be furnished for any other disease. The Keeley Cure does not profess to cure other diseases that may be associated with drunkenness, such as consumption, heart disease, etc., but professes to put the man, who is afflicted with the disease of drunkenness, in the position where he was before he acquired the habit, so that the man who backslides after having this cure effected for him, deliberately chooses to cultivate the taste over again. I have been reliably informed that not one who has undergone the full course of treatment in the Institute located in New Orleans has failed of a radical and permanent cure.

It is quite an interesting sight to observe the line of patients march slowly by the operator's table and receive the injection in the left arm, or "shot," as it is called. This is repeated four times during each day. No one can talk with one of the Keeley graduates and be longer skeptical. It is thrilling to hear them talk of their restored manhood, and to see in their faces the radiance of a hope that had long been obscured. One of them told me that for twenty years he had been a confirmed drunkard, having reached apparently the very lowest depths of shame and ruin, but that now he felt no more craving for liquor than for castor oil; and this is simply one instance of the many.

In view of these facts, the question as to what attitude temperance workers, and even the church of God itself, ought to sustain to this movement, is a very important one. I believe that it presents a new phase in the line of temperance work that must be recognized. I believe that such work as is contemplated by the Keeley Help Club in New Orleans, organized to assist poverty-stricken inebriates, must be undertaken jointly with the work of closing the saloons. While this is true, it ought to be the signal for increased zeal on the part of all temperance reformers in the direction of prohibition, and for this reason, as the confirmed drunkards are being cured, their places will be rapidly filled by others on whom their mantle of shame has fallen, and I am not sure but that the tendency might be to increase rather than diminish in number, for the youth will say, "I can drink now with impunity, for if I should become a drunkard, I can be cured." But what a glorious step in the right direction would be made if all the inebriates could be restored to health, and at the same time the temptations to drink could be removed from the young man, who will otherwise certainly make another and a larger crop of drunkards.

I believe, further, that inasmuch as a mere bodily cure will not avail for the disease of the soul, that the church should see to it that the saving truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ are applied along with the physical treatment, and that the Keeley Cure should be considered by the church, as that which in the providence of God is designed as a means to an end—even the redemption of the soul.

Rev. George S. Inge.

I have failed to write of our dear, sainted Bro. Inge because I knew there are so many others in our Conference that could tell of his life and labors so much better than I.

It was my privilege, on Nov. 29, 1886, to go with him from Corinth, Miss., to West Point, for the meeting of North Mississippi Conference, where we were admitted on trial into the itinerancy, Dec. 2, 1886. Bishop Duncan appointed Bro. Inge to Booneville and Rienzi, and it was my good fortune to be situated near him.

How often he has warmed my heart into profounder love for my work when I was almost crushed with the arduous work of a poor circuit!

That year he held some very great meetings at Okolona, Houston, West Point, etc. On his returns to his charge he would sometimes say to me, "How my soul burns to go from revival to revival!" He would say, "It is so grand to see old and young coming home to God." Then he would say: "I don't want to do a thing that has not my God's approval. I am praying for a clear revelation from Heaven, that I may not be mistaken as to my duty."

Our next Conference convened at Winona, Nov. 28, 1887. Bishop Keener sent Bro. Inge to Holly Springs, where his work abides as a monument more glorious than earthly hands can erect. The year closed with success piled upon success. Then we met at Starkville, and on Dec. 17, 1888, he was sent back to Holly Springs by Bishop Galloway.

After this he served an unexpired year of a deceased preacher of Pine Street Church, Portland, Maine, and in April, 1890, he began his regular evangelistic work with Bro. J. W. Honnoll, at Holly Springs. In this work, as in the pastorate, he proved an inestimable blessing to our church and a benediction to every branch of Zion. On and on he went, establishing himself as one of the greatest pulpit characters and one of the most successful evangelists of the age.

When I think of speaking of his many shining traits of character, my hand falls nerveless, and the ink dries on my pen before I can touch the unmarked page, that whispers back: "Touch me not, for, as I am, I bespeak the purity of the soul that now rejoices with the glorified just over there." And I say, Oh, for the pen of a Morgan and the beautiful words that I have so frequently heard fall from the eloquent tongue that now "lies silent in the grave." Then I would not falter so while trying to say something of my departed brother.

In the social circle he was the magnet for every eye and ear. However, his social gifts were largely sacrificed to save his physical powers for the thronging multitudes that met him at his places of worship. He possessed a magic that forced those who came in contact with him to esteem him. He was gallant as a prince, as eloquent as a Whitefield, as courageous as a Luther—I might say as Paul. I know no energy comparable to his, and he could truthfully say with David, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up."

I have known Bro. Inge throughout his ministerial life; have been with him some every year, and had the fortune to travel and work by his side all last year. I never knew him to do anything little. He lived in a high and holy atmosphere in every word and act. I have looked upon him and thought he would be called into account for as few trifling words as any man it has ever been my pleasure to meet. He was unmistakably "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." He communed much with his Lord in private. I have been asked, "Does Inge pray much?" I will here answer: I never saw the time or place where he was not anxious for prayer, and he never faltered from his purposes in prayer. In his prayers he seemed to realize that God was listening. I have felt the air quiver, as it were, under the pressure of divine recognition, as his words reached the ears of God.

It has been said through some of our secular papers that Bro. Inge brought on his demise by a month's hard work in a prohibition campaign at his home in Columbus, Miss. No doubt this work continued the impairing of his strength; but that alone should not be mentioned as his prostrator. For almost three years he had averaged near 800 sermons per annum.

The first of last October, at Winona, he was in very near distance of the other world, brought on by continuous labor. Nor was this the first sentinel that bade him rest, for in the latter part of July, last, when I had been absent some days, he wrote me, saying: "That hot wave came near blistering brain as well as body." Never after that did he have the physical strength that was natural to him. So often he would say, "That pain in my head gives me trouble to-day."

After his prostration I preceded him to Marianna, Ark., while he was regaining some strength, for he would not consent to cancelling his engagements. Just before leaving him at Marianna to commence our meeting at Gainesville, Texas, I said: "Bro. Inge, don't kill yourself at work here. Remember, you only have a little force to lean upon now." He smiled, and said: "I won't, Bro. Whitehurst; but you know I have thought it would have been so sweet to have gone to heaven from Winona; but you would not let me." He said: "I am ready and willing any time; but I dislike to be severed from my wife and children, and especially before the children get able to take more of the cares off mama."

I want to ask his dear wife, precious children, much-loved and loving parents, and devoted friends and brethren, not to be sad. He said so often: "I am so tired; I want to rest." Yes, dear George, "rest, only rest." Your brethren will combine their forces and try to keep your work going on. Oh, how I loved him!

J. A. WHITEHURST.

Talla-Chulok.

Sunday afternoon, Feb. 26, Rev. H. W. Van Hook and I left Hopewell Church and rode over hill and dale, stump and rut, and through mud, mire, water and rain until we reached Talla Chulok Church, Kemper county, Miss., where Bro. W. W. Cammack and his congregation of Choctaws were waiting for us. As we rode up we could hear the Choctaws singing with the spirit and understanding, led by Bro. Jno. W. Tolcs. The hymn was, 'Work, for the night is coming." How they did sing!

Bro. Van Hook and I were soon inside of the modest little structure which Bro. Cammack had recently erected, and which the deft hands of an Indian maiden and of a pale-face maiden friend had decked with evergreens in honor of the presiding elder's coming. Never before have I so felt my own weakness and the need of help from on high. Only a few earnest words based on Rev. II, were made by me; but how intent were the eyes of the Indians fixed on me, and how they did seem to drink in the message brought by me to them.

Then followed the hymn, "What a friend we have in Jesus." Bro. Cammack read the invitation in Choctaw, and I the confession and prayer in English. Bro. Cammack, Bro. Van Hook, Bro. Simpson, J. Tubby (our full-blood Choctaw preacher) and myself first communed. Then every Choctaw member present, men, women and children, knelt about the rude altar and partook of the bread and wine in "remembrance" of Jesus. It was, to me, a touching, thrilling scene and season.

The communion over, a hymn was sung and an invitation to join the church given by Bro. Cammack in English and repeated by Bro. Tubby in Choctaw. Three persons came forward—Martha, Cora and Amy Johnson—all full-blood Choctaws, and all manifesting deep emotion. Martha and Cora had been pupils of Bro. and Sister Cammack for some time, and Amy had been showing much interest. According to their earnest request and evident sincerity, Bro. Cammack at once baptized them and received them into full fellowship. Then followed an old-fashioned handshaking in which Indians and whites alike took part. I was glad to take the hand of every Indian present and esteemed it one of the privileges of the itinerancy to have made the acquaintance of Brokesholder, Tongaloo, Johnson and others of our Choctaw brethren, and of the good women who are trying to serve the Lord. God bless them one and all! God bless the bright-eyed babies! And may his blessings rest richly on Bro. Cammack and his faithful wife (who is indeed a helpmeet for him in this great work) and on Bro. Toles and Bro. C. B. Tinsley, who are fellow-laborers with them in this work of love!

The mission urgently needs one hundred and sixty acres of land. This tract just where it is needed can be had for $400 cash or $480 on time. We ought to have the cash. In a year or two we will need eight hundred acres more, but first now, the one hundred and sixty acres will suffice to give permanency to the mission and ensure success. I should like to find ten persons who will give $20 each toward the purchase of this tract of land, twenty who will give $10 each; eighty who will give $5 each. Remittances can be made to the Rev. T. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss. (who has this mission so much at heart), or to myself. "He gives twice who gives quickly."

T. L. MELLEN.

Indian Mission.

I have had but two rest days since my return from Conference. I have a few spare moments this morning, and will give some dots concerning our work among the Choctaws. I regret not having an opportunity at our late Annual Conference to fully explain the situation and condition generally as I have seen it. There are some things, both good and bad, which our Conference ought to have known in order to act intelligently and wisely in the future toward these Reds whom we have so long neglected. I trust and pray, however, that all things may yet work out for the best. I have had a new experience among the Choctaws this year. I have been teaching a school for them. I commenced Jan. 9, and closed March 9, and while it required much patience and painstaking labor, yet I regard it as the most profitable two months' work which I have yet done among them. I commenced with seven pupils and closed with fourteen, and during this short term of two months the most of them learned to spell, read and make the letters, figures and Roman characters. They also learned to repeat the Lord's Prayer in concert and to sing several hymns. We have had six accessions to the church since Conference, making twenty-four now in all. All of those who joined last year are holding out faithfully as far as I know. One had a little fight with Meridian. The next day he came and told me about it, and while he seemed to know that it was wrong to fight, yet he seemed to think that in the case he had done a good deed, for he said he, "The other Indian was a Baptist, and he talk, talk, talk about the Methodist, and I say nothing. After awhile I get mighty mad and hit him with my fist." I tried to show him that this was wrong, and then brought the matter before the church. He showed signs of true penitence and asked forgiveness. We all had a hand shaking over it.

On the fourth Sunday in February we enjoyed a rare treat. Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., of the Meridian district, and Bro. Van Hook, of the Linwood circuit, visited the mission at Talla Chulok. Bro. Mellen preached for us, after which he administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. This was the first time the Indians had taken the Supper. They enjoyed the service very much. The leading one, who spoke in behalf of all the others, said, "I am mighty glad they came."

Now, in conclusion, let me say that our only chance to make a success of the Indian Mission is to purchase some land and build up a school. I will give $10 each year until a sufficient amount is purchased. Who will help?

An Easter Greeting.

To the Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Dear Brethren: I am requested by the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school for missionaries and other Christian workers to give you this Easter greeting, and to thank you for your aid two years ago, in getting before the entire church the proposition of the generous founder of this institution, so that ample assistance was given through the Easter offerings to secure the completion of the building, entirely free from debt. It was formally dedicated last September, after an address by Bishop Galloway and inaugural papers by representatives of the able faculty. The good work being done during the year in the different departments in preparation of young women for Christian work, as missionaries, trained nurses, and Sabbath-school teachers, shows the great wisdom in the establishment of the training-school. The Nurse-training Department has been almost self-sustaining from the beginning, and grateful hearts testify to the comfort, cheer and restored health which have come through the work being done.

Actual experience in Christian work accompanies the instruction of the lecture-room, so that missionaries need not go to the field without having first been tested as to their consecration and fitness. In all the departments of Bible study, church history and mission fields, Christian evidences, sacred music and methods, excellent work is being done.

It is gratifying to state that a number of rooms were furnished in time for the opening by the generous gifts of individuals and missionary societies.

An excellent reference library has been secured, together with charts, maps and valuable contributions to the Museum, illustrative of Bible and mission lands. Something, too, has been done in the way of lectureships and scholarships. It has been wisely determined to make no charge for tuition in order to bring the advantages of the training-school within the reach of every worthy young woman who seeks to fit herself for Christian work. An increase in the endowment is much needed.

The Constitution of the Woman's Missionary Society requires that money for the school be raised outside of the regular funds, which are needed to sustain missionaries in the field; and that society, at its last annual meeting, asked the church for a generous Easter offering, this year, to complete the furnishing of the building and to aid in meeting the running expenses, with the earnest hope that the response might be so hearty as to largely increase the endowment fund.

Will you kindly read this letter to your congregation and Sunday-school, and give all an opportunity of making an Easter offering for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school?

Yours cordially,

E. R. HENDRIX,
Chairman of the Board of Managers.

"Blow Ye the Trumpet, Blow."

When Joshua led the Israelites to the capture of Jericho the Lord commanded them to march around the city in silence once a day for six days, but on the seventh day to rise early and encompass it seven times, and when the priests blew the trumpets all the people were to give a great shout, then would the wall fall down. During those six days the faith, courage and zeal of the Israelites grew strong, so that when the appointed signal was given they set up a great, triumphant shout and the victory was accomplished.

For many months the church has been preparing, with prayer and self-denial, for a victory for Christ on Easter Sunday. The faith and zeal of the people have increased. Now all things are ready—the set time has come for the blessing for which we have prayed. Let there be none to linger indifferent in their tents, none to cavil and question, and none to give half-hearted service. With glad, free hearts let us go forward, as a church, knowing it is the Captain of the Lord's host who goes before. Let the pastors, as priests of the living Christ, blow the gospel trumpet loud and long, that all may hear, and with the signal let the people give a great "Alleluia" of praise and thanksgiving unto him "who was dead and is alive again."

"With shouting and singing
And jubilant ringing"

let them bring their gifts to the altar that

"God's banner exalted may be,"

and all the world know he reigneth evermore as King of kings. Ministers of God, the people wait for your signal; then

"Blow ye the trumpet, blow,
The gladly solemn sound;
Let all the nations know,
To earth's remotest bound,
The year of jubilee has come."

Ministerial Educational Society.

The North Mississippi Conference, in keeping with the keenly felt want of the people, continued at its last session a plan to increase the facilities of educating young preachers. It created a Ministerial Educational Society. The Board appointed for this purpose are: R. W. Jones, Oxford; J. D. Cameron, Senatobia; J. W. Malone, Coldwater; J. W. Anderson, Abbeville, and J. M. Wyatt, Como.

The import of this obviously needed enterprise is to aid worthy young men who are studying for the ministry at Millsaps College—an institution surpassing any in history for its age and means. Some help, perhaps, will be rendered by gift, but in the main by loan. Soon will be out a Constitution and By-laws, and also a circular explaining and exhorting. We ask in this that every Methodist and friend to Methodism begin at once to feel and take an interest in this inviting cause of doing good.

Talk wisely in favor of it, pray fervently for it and give liberally to it. For several Conferences from one to six young men have failed to enter on the account of a limited education; yet we are not as strict at the Conference door for admission as the people are demanding. Help!—$1, $5, $10, $20, $25, $50, $100, $1,000.

You, dear brethren and sisters, whom God has graciously blessed, and who are living in the even-tide of life, do something generously for the gospel of Jesus before you go hence. Incarnate a monument that will speak in the bettering and the blessing of this world after you are gone. Turn now some of your material substance into immaterial treasure. Any member of the Board is ready and willing to receive, hear or do anything that will enlarge the success of the Ministerial Educational Society.

Yours in Christ, J. M. WYATT.

A Timely Utterance.

I've just arisen from a careful reading of our Dr. Sawyer's great little book, "The World in the Church." There is not a dull page in all its seventeen chapters. Drawing liberally from the deliverances of our General Conferences, from our college of Bishops, from such individuals as Bishops Marvin, Parker, McTyeire and Galloway, from the editors of all our leading Advocates, from our other chief men, and from such leaders of the world's thought as Dwight L. Moody, Theodore Cuyler, Howard Crosby and Dr. A. McLaren, he shows conclusively that the occasion demands the taking of our hearings and a return to the "old paths." As a wise surgeon, he cuts "to the quick," but with tenderest intent. He "wounds to heal." There is no trace of pessimism in these pages. Hiding our eyes, like the ostrich, will not save us from capture by our wily foes. But get the book from our colporters and read for yourself. It will repay a thousand-fold the meager cost of 25 cents. J. P. DRAKE.

Education at Centenary.

At Centenary College we are passing into the last quarter of a satisfactory year's work. Our number of students has been smaller, but in all other respects the results of the present session will compare favorably with those of any that have preceded it. Order and studiousness have prevailed generally and the progress of the young men has been very gratifying. We are doing this session much more of college, and comparatively less of preparatory, teaching than heretofore. Professors and students are doing hard work—head-work, heart-work and soul-work. There has been spirit-strengthening and character-building here; the organizing, training and equipping of lives that shall be effective for good through all time. We have had eleven young men preparing for the ministry of the gospel. The health of the college and of the community has been almost perfect.

True, the two Conferences seemed to show a waning zeal for Centenary, and even inflicted what the editor of this ADVOCATE called "a whack on the head;" yet some things have the power of not succumbing to blows. Perhaps Centenary is of that kind. It surely was bad logic which led to a withdrawal of some of her support because she has some endowment, as if anything could grow without constantly increasing support. But her endowment must grow. Since the State has made education a charity the church can no longer hope to support her schools by tuition fees. She must endow them. While the North is giving by hundreds of thousands to endow colleges, has the South nothing for education? Is Louisiana exhausted? Shall a college whose graduates shed such luster upon her name be allowed to suffer for want of an endowment?

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

The ignorance of police officers is a marvel. It was proved that the public knew of gambling houses in operation; it was proved that the police sergeant had been approached with the offer of twenty per cent. hush money, and it was also proved that said sergeant was in blank ignorance of the whole thing. Great is the power of proof. "None are so blind as those who will not see." "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

In the death of Rev. Dr. E. E. Wiley, of Emory and Henry College, a long, useful and honorable career has closed. Dr. Wiley has been one of the front rank in our church for a great number of years, and while his "record is on high" the impress of his work will abide on the church for a long time to come.

President Cleveland closed his inaugural address with these words:

Above all I know there is a Supreme Being who rules the affairs of men, and whose goodness and mercy have always followed the American people, and I know he will not turn from us now, if we humbly and reverently seek his powerful aid.

Bible Institute and Summer School.

Our readers will remember that several articles appeared in this paper some months ago urging the importance of organizing a Bible Institute for the benefit of the church and clergy. We are glad to record that through the earnest efforts of Rev. F. N. Parker, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, and E. P. Mackie, of Carondelet Street Church, the matter has been pushed to organization. Upon the invitation of these two brethren one dozen gentlemen met at the residence of the editor on the evening of March 7. A temporary organization was effected with Rev. W. H La Prade as president, and E. P. Mackie as secretary. All present entered heartily and enthusiastically into the project and some good, safe preliminary work was done. An adjourned meeting was held on the evening of March 14 in Rayne Memorial Chapel, when a Constitution and By-laws were adopted and a Board of Managers and officers of the association were chosen. The association bears the name, "Methodist Bible Institute and Summer School." The object of the association is Bible exegesis, Sunday-school work, and all other such work as is usually pursued in such schools. The membership is confined to Methodists, though those not members may have the benefits of the school upon condition of paying a fee to be fixed by the managers. Membership fee in the association is $2 a year for gentlemen and $1 a year for ladies. The hope of the association is to secure the permission of the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground, to use its grounds and buildings for the Summer school, to be held after the annual camp meeting.

The Board of Managers consists of fifteen persons, viz.: Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Rev. F. N. Parker, Rev. C. W. Carter, Rev. D. L. Mitchel, D. Zable, J. W. Blackman, E. P. Mackie, P. Voss, L. S. Widney, W. B. Thomson, C. B. Fee, H. W. Spear, J. H. Campman, J. R. Westerfield and A. F. Godat.

The officers of the Board: President, Rev. F. N. Parker; vice presidents, D. Zable, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, and Rev. C. W. Carter; recording secretary, Paul Voss; corresponding secretary, E. P. Mackie; treasurer, L. S. Widney.

We regard this as the beginning of a good work, and we trust the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi and Alabama will join heartily with us in making it a decided success from the start.

All enquiries in regard to the matter will be cheerfully answered by the corresponding secretary, E. P. Mackie, 40 and 42 Tchoupitoulas St., New Orleans, La.

A Nugatory Law.

A recent decision of our Supreme Court has cut the ground from under one criminal statute, and maybe more than one. The Chief of Police had been found guilty of a misdemeanor in office and sentenced to pay a fine. His offense was refusal to arrest parties found violating the Sunday law. The court decides that as crimes in Louisiana are statutory, and as no statute describes or defines a misdemeanor, no court can make such description or definition without exceeding its powers. The section of the Revised Statutes under which the Chief of Police was tried and convicted does not itself define what a misdemeanor is. As the Legislature has nowhere defined the offense, the courts can not exercise that legislative function; hence the law is nugatory and can not be enforced.

It occurs to us that this opens still wider the door for misdemeanors in office. There are, however, other ways of reaching law-breakers, and we are sure that our sturdy Criminal Court officers will remit no effort to bring them to justice. Let these officers understand that they have the sympathy and moral support of our best citizens, who will give them all the aid possible. We are glad to state that the daily papers are heartily supporting this righteous cause. Now is the time for everyone to remember and act upon the divine injunction, "Be not weary in well doing," encouraged to bravely dare and wisely do by the promise attached, "In due season you shall reap if you faint not."

After One and Twenty Years.

It was my privilege to spend several days, including last Sabbath, with old friends and new at Yazoo City, Miss. Just one and twenty years before I had landed in that little city, a young pastor, under circumstances peculiarly trying and never to be forgotten. It was three months after Conference, and to supply a place made vacant by the pastor's transfer to meet the exigencies in another important charge. His sudden removal was regretted, resisted, and almost resented. Efforts were still active to retain him when his innocent young successor appeared on the scene. Of course there was no lack of Christian courtesy—or of candor. He was given the state of case, and earnestly entreated to suggest some other argument which might be effective in keeping their beloved pastor. It was suggested that I might supply the other pulpit and leave theirs undisturbed and unbereaved. But, for reasons which all at length came to appreciate, the change was made, and for nearly two years Yazoo City was one of the happiest homes of my life. Friendships were there formed which have cheered the intervening years, and the humble labor there performed I trust is not unrecorded in the chronicles of the skies.

A few times since I have seen the old home, but this anniversary visit was specially pleasant and profitable. What changes have been wrought! The old heavy Concord stage-coach making five miles an hour, on which I wearily worked my way over the hills, has given place to rail-cars and the speed of steam. The town of muddy streets and indifferent sidewalks, and unpainted houses, and antiquated churches, has become the best-kept city in the State, with electric lights, water-works and a complete system of sewerage—the only one in Mississippi. Modern, tasteful churches have been built, hundreds of handsome residences erected, old ones repainted, and in every way there has been improvement and enlargement. Some landmarks remain. The one of tenderest interest to me, of course, was the little cottage, then our parsonage, in which the young itinerants and their babes loved and were beloved.

The congregation is larger, and I trust, spiritually and otherwise, stronger. But most of the old faces are gone. Some devout mothers in Israel—the elect of earth—are represented by their daughters, and worthy sons have succeeded honored fathers. May they as faithfully serve their generation and leave as rich a heritage of spiritual achievement! Those dear names I gratefully recall, but must forbear to repeat.

The beautiful new church, because of a forward movement inaugurated a few weeks ago, is about free from a burdensome debt. It will very soon be only a pleasant memory. Pastor Jones and congregation, are, therefore, happy and hopeful. Indeed, I did not see a cloud on any brow, or hear a doleful tone in any voice. The future for them is bright with promise. May the promise become a Pentecost!

I was the grateful guest of my special and honored friend and brother, Peter James, known to all connectional Methodism, and was the first to occupy the "prophet's chamber" in his new palatial home. The hours went swiftly by, and all too soon the time of my departure was at hand. Regretting that much generous hospitality could not be accepted and many calls could not be made, I bade friends and former home again good-bye. After another one and twenty years not many of us will be here; may we all at length be citizens of that city "which hath the foundations."

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., Mar. 17, 1893.

The Man of Sorrows.

BY J. B. A. AHRENS, D. D.

The Savior endured untold agonies during his triennial mission as instructor, exemplar, prophet and priest. Often his sensitive nature was lacerated by the obtuseness, coarseness and baseness of his followers. Unseen, many bitter tears coursed down his wan cheek. Helplessly he passed the long vigils of dreary nights, brooding over the apparent cruelty, sensuality and worldliness of mankind.

The anticipation of his impending cruciation and crucifixion added to his pain. He foresaw his persecution, arrest, trial, scourging, ignominy and tortuous death. Finite man always hopes for deliverance from impending danger; but our Immanuel could sustain no such hope. His prophetic eye plainly discerned the heart-rending tragedy in which he was the pitiable sufferer. For three years he witnessed himself betrayed by Judas, deserted by his disciples, with wicked imprecations denied by Peter. For three years he beheld himself suspended on the cross. The triennial knowledge of his disgrace and execution as a malefactor was tantamount to triennial duration of the same. Thus, in a certain sense, our Savior hung on the cross for three years; for three years he endured the tortures of hands and feet transfixed by rusty nails. Felons right and left for three years.

We have reason to be grateful for the boon of our future being hid from our vision. Much suffering may be in store for us; but we know it not. Hence we always hope for the best. Usually misfortune comes unexpectedly. Not so with the Man of Sorrows. To him his future was unveiled. During his sojourns in Jewry he may have seen the thorn-bush from which the constituents of his crown of thorns were to be taken. He may have rested, prayed and wept beneath the umbrageous tree from whose trunk his cross was to be made. Repeatedly he may have visited Golgatha, the place where he would soon find himself in extremis.

This explains the significant fact that the Lamb of God, while dwelling with men, never indulged in humor, merriment or laughter. Mentally he endured crucifixion while he taught the multitude, fed the hungry, cured the sick, and restored the dead to life.

But our Savior endured greater pain than the anticipation and ultimate realization of his crucifixion. When sympathizing female friends sobbed aloud because of his torment, he remarks: "Weep not for me; but weep for yourselves, and for your children." That unpardoned sinners are exposed to divine wrath, that they are, like sheep, led to the slaughter by the god of this world, pained him more than scourge, thorns, nails and suspension on the cross. Men's sin and sin's consequences filled his cup with inexpressible sorrow. Men, made in the image of God, captives, slaves! Sin had transformed this virgin abode of men—men once pure—into a valley of dry bones. Very dry. Nevertheless, wretched sinners deem themselves rich; knowing not that they are miserable, poor, blind and naked. They know not what belongs to their peace. Hence: "Weep for yourselves." Sympathy with the victims of dire delusion filled his heart with greatest pang. The dread spectacle of the impending doom of impenitent sinners pained him more than all human instruments of torture.

More: Jesus ever lives and intercedes for sinners. A petitioner is interested in the parties for whom he seeks favor. Is the petition refused, do circumstances prevent compliance, it afflicts the petitioner. This is true also in regard to our Savior. Though he entered into his glory, the conception is correct that his bosom is filled with greatest grief when men remain impenitent, quenching the Spirit, rejecting pardon and rest.

It is a tearful thought, but we can not banish it, that Jesus is now sad, distressed, because guilty men neglect the great salvation. This distress finds abatement only when there is joy in heaven over penitent sinners.

Commendable, If True.

Those who constantly see him and who have been consulted frequently as to the forthcoming changes in all the departments of the public service say that the first question which Mr. Cleveland now asks as to any person proposed to him for public place is—Does he drink? Mr. Cleveland, I can tell you, has discovered that it is becoming a fashion not to drink; that the men who do not drink are the men who do the greatest things in this world's affairs. He has discovered the value in commercial and in business life of the man who does not drink. He knows that there are some railroad companies who will not employ a man in any capacity who drinks at any time; that no railroad company will permit any of its employees to drink during the hours of service, and that the value of a man who does not drink is each year increasing in this country. He has discovered, I think, that it may be worth while to apply this principle to politics, and to discover whether or not a man is not worth as much for public office who does not drink as he is in commercial enterprises.

If this is a true statement of Mr. Cleveland's mind on this subject, we regard it as a departure that every right-thinking citizen will heartily commend. The business men have come to the conclusion that habitual liquor drinkers are not capable of attending to business wisely, and hence there has been growing among them a determination not to trust their affairs to the unsteady hands and the muddled brains of such employees. The drink habit depreciates a man's value in the commercial world and puts a discount upon his services as employee. Now, if men in the business world hedge their business in that way in order to secure the greatest efficiency in carrying it on, then there is much greater reason that the business of a great government should have the same safeguards thrown around it. No doubt much evil has come in the past from the lack of just this precaution in appointing men to official stations, where clear heads and steady hands are absolutely necessary to do the work well and wisely. We hope that the extract above is true, and that the President will hold to the policy there indicated, and above all, as he is the Chief Executive, and needs the clearest head of all, that he will practice himself what he requires in his subordinates.

And now, if all persons who employ others to work for them would adopt the policy above referred to, what a mighty shaking and quaking there would be among the saloons!

NOTES.

The best thing any man or woman or boy or girl can do is to be true.

The church loafer is such a negative charactor that he amounts to a positive evil.

The question is not, What can I do? That is foolish. The wise question is, What can I do with God to help me?

"Everyone must recognize a personal value in his own life whou he remembers that Christ has lived and died for him."

Rev. B. Fay Mills is oredlited with this epigram: "It does not take a great man to be a Christian, but it takes all there is of him."

Not by appointment do we meet delight
And joy; they heed not our expectancy;
But round some corner in the streets of life
—Gerald Mas

As the pulpit is the "preacher's throne of power," a negligence of conscientious preparation for which that power is an unpardonable sin against the congregation.

Joseph Cook made a wonderful impression, for him, in a recent Monday lecture, when he said the Solid South is not more dangerous than city rings and corrupt combinations for special ends." Danger! Why are those people still afraid of? We have no notion of hurting them.

Our colleges must be supplied with better buildings and more adequate endowments. Harvard University alone is worth more than all the male and female colleges in Southern Methodism combined. New England has a college for every four thousand square miles and five dollars' worth of property for every man, woman, and child within her borders; while in the South there is one college for every seven thousand square miles, and one dollar's worth of college property per capita.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

It is the property of the Conference. But whether the property or not, it is the adopted mouth-piece of the Conference, every consideration binds the members to sustain it, to work for and enlarge its circulation. No member has a right to ignore it, or to supplant it. He can no more be disloyal to his Conference paper with a clear conscience than he can be untrue without blame to any other enterprise of the church.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is bending its efforts to secure a "Waifs' Home." Mr. Clay, the president, has had a good house in a central location offered him for $4,500, to be paid by July. Every energy will be put forth to secure the property. This is a worthy object, and if any of our readers feel inclined to place their money where it will bring large returns in good to a high class, we shall be pleased to hand over to Bro. Clay.

The foolishness of the "children of light, in their generation," was never more glaringly exhibited than in this day in regard to the liquor business. They are agreed on only one point, and that is, the business ought to be stopped. Beyond this their foolishness reigns so supreme as to bring to nothing every effort made to stop the iniquitous traffic. The man who will discover the common ground upon which all the children of light must stand to fight this great enemy will solve the only problem in the case.

In an editorial on Mr. Cleveland's inaugural address the Independent is "constrained to say that we admire the spirit of boldness and independence with which he enters upon his official duties. He is one of those men whom the public has learned to trust. It believes that he says exactly what he means, and that he means to fulfill all his pledges. His countrymen, without regard to party, have much confidence in him, and will judge him with fairness. He has a great opportunity before him, and it is only proper patriotism to hope that his administration will be successful.

Is there any man "worth shucks" conducting any regular trade who without the organ of that business? We desire to know where we could buy a needed machine. A "want" notice was put in the paper devoted to that class of manufactures. We got a letter from every maker of such tools in America, for it seemed every firm read their trade periodical. Office members, leaders, bell-wethers and the greatest business on the planet—the Christian Church—are content to live and cruel enough to force their families to live, with the meagerest information, and without a page of religious literature. The methods of business men ought to shame our dead beats if anything could bring a blush to this stolid, stingy, sluggish set.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

If Mr. Cleveland's policy of not appointing any ex-officials to office again had been pursued by the people, who would be our President now?

The New York Legislature has a bill before it to permit saloons to be opened after 1 P. M. on Sunday. Little by little the camel's nose is pushing in.

Osmond S. Barbee, son of Rev. J. D. Barbee, of Nashville, Tenn., died, March 13, at his father's home. We extend our sympathy to the family.

The levees on both sides of the great river are reported by the engineers as in good enough condition to resist successfully last year's water.

"Doing is the great thing," says Ruskin, "for if resolutely people do what is right, what duty calls them to do, in time they come to like doing it."

"'Tis not the great things that we do or say,
But idle words forgot as soon as spoken;
And little thoughtless deeds of every day
Are stumbling blocks on which the weak are broken."

The Pacific Slope will have to elect a Bishop who was reared on its golden sands, if he is to be a permanent institution. It seems so, despite promises, etc.

The net increase in the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during the last year is forty-eight thousand two hundred and one.

There is talk of establishing a packing-house in Canton, Miss., if the farmers around will raise cattle and hogs to supply the house with material for operations.

The ladies of Rayne Memorial Church, in this city, have sent on $600 for the missionary debt, of which the Sunday-school raised $125. What church beats that?

Since the death of Phillips Brooks, it is said by some that Dr. A. J. F. Behrends, of the Central Congregational Church, of Brooklyn, is the foremost preacher in America.

In 1881 the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor numbered sixty-eight persons; in July, 1892, they numbered 1,370,200 members. That is increase "as is increase."

The New York Herald's London Sunday edition has failed. The Methodist Times says: "The good sense of the English people snuffed out that base Yankee institution."

The last prize fight in this city did not pay. The winner had a hard struggle to get his money. That is one good sign that such shows are depreciating in public favor.

The Agricultural Department estimates that the yield in bushels of wheat, corn and oats, for 1892, is as follows: Wheat, 339,729,000; corn, 1,619,595,000; oats, 631,513,000.

The debt of Dr. Talmage's new tabernacle amounts to $287,000. That debt is certainly a ridiculous thing, in view of the fuss that Talmage has made during the last few years.

The Independent says: "If the farmers of this country fully knew what a disaster they escaped by the failure of the Local Option bill, they would hold meetings to express their gratitude."

The Christian Temperance League of Ruston, La., held an enthusiastic anti-whisky convention last week. By all possible means and in all lawful ways let us work to put the monster evil down.

By the appointment of Bishop Granbery, the Zion and Orange Grove Churches of the Ocean Springs and Zion work have been attached to the Americus circuit, Bro. G. R. Ellis still remaining their pastor.

Bro. Hocutt, our pastor on Pascagoula and Donaldsonville circuit, has secured two fine lots for a church-building in White Castle. He has the deed recorded and is making active preparation for building a church.

It is said that every member of Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet is a member of the Presbyterian Church, excepting Secretary Carlisle, and he leans that way. So it will be more of a "Presbyterian administration" than President Harrison's.

Here is a question, asked by the Interior, which our Sunday-school people ought to ponder long: "Is it not an orthodox fact that the Sunday-school lesson helps have become a great harrier to the study of the Scriptures themselves?"

The Century is commanding a larger number of readers than ever. A new edition of 5,000 copies of the February number has been printed. The large March edition has proved inadequate, and a still larger edition for April will be published.

We call the special attention of all Boards of Trustees of church property in Mississippi to a short article from J. W. Drake, in another column, entitled "Church Doors in Mississippi." It is a matter of some importance, and the time is short.

"How are you getting along securing new subscribers for this paper? Have you solicited on that line lately? The publisher reports that some are coming in, but we would be rejoiced to hear of them coming in by the score. Won't you help a little?

A Christian woman once wrote on the fly-leaf of her Bible the following words: "Lay any burden upon me; send me anywhere, only go with me; sever any tie but that one which binds me to thy service and to thy heart." This is true consecration.

Rev. Moses D. Hoge, D. D., has celebrated the forty-eighth anniversary of his pastorate in the Second Presbyterian Church of Richmond, Va. He is the only pastor the church ever had, and that church is the only pastorate he ever had, and they are not tired of each other yet!

We were gratified to read this notice in last week's American, Lake Charles, La.:

Rev. H. W. May, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, after several weeks' sickness, we are please to state, is again able to visit his people and fill his pulpit.

The following from the Water Valley (Miss.) Progress shows how the cotton crop fell off from 1892:

Comparative statement of cotton receipts at this point up to Friday morning, March 10, 1893: 1890, 6,115; 1891, 7,868; 1892, 8,148. 1893, shipped, 2,905; Yocona mills 1,256; on storage, 444; total for 1893, 4,605.

The Franklinton New Era talks in this way about its parish:

Washington parish can boast of good schools, well-tended and prosperous churches, as good people as the world produces, a genial climate, pure water, fertile soil, good pasturage for cattle and sheep, lots of pine timber that can not be excelled, and many other advantages that ought to bring us scores of immigrants of a desirable class.

Note from Rev. F. M. Keen.

MR. EDITOR: Upon the advice of physicians and friends, I have reluctantly decided to give up my work for the remainder of the year. I am threatened with an attack of something like nervous prostration, but think that rest will ward it off; therefore, Bro. Little has released me from my work. I never entered upon a work under more favorable circumstances, and greatly regret that our very pleasant relation is thus so suddenly severed. My three months' stay with this noble-hearted people will ever occupy an important place in memory's casket. Please ask my brethren to pray for me, that I may soon be able to resume my loved employ. Sincerely, F. M. KEEN.

Church Doors in Mississippi.

The laws of Mississippi require that the doors of all church-buildings, except those which have but one audience-room, and that on the ground-floor, shall be constructed so as to open outwardly from the audience-rooms. This is, of course, a precaution against jams and consequent loss of life in case of fires. All churches already erected not in accordance with this requirement must be made to conform to it before the first day of May, 1893; and all new churches must, of course, be constructed in accordance with this law. (See Sections 2088 and 2090, Annotated Code of Mississippi.) I call attention to this law because I know of several churches which do not conform to it, and even if there were no danger of the infliction of a penalty for not obeying the law, it should be obeyed. The church accepts from the State exemption from taxation; it teaches its members to render obedience to lawful authority; it is, therefore, especially incumbent upon the church to show its respect for the authority from which it receives favors, and which it teaches its members to respect. The trustees of every church should take steps at once to make their church-building conform to the law. J. W. DRAKE,

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL.

Up to this date (March 14) a Week of Prayer and Self-denial has been observed by two pastoral charges in the Vicksburg district; by five in the Jackson; by two in the Woodville; by three in the Brookhaven; by one in the Brandon; by three charges and two persons in the Seashore district; and by nine pastoral charges in the Meridian district. The Virginia Conference has paid their proportion of the debt in full. The Mississippi Conference has not yet paid one-half.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Adams circuit, P. Heward, P.C. $10 00

SEASHORE DISTRICT—PER REV. M. H. MOORE, SOLICITOR.

Rev. T. W. Adams $10 00

There remain only $5.45 to be contributed by the Seashore district to complete the payment of the $550 called for from that district to aid in paying the missionary debt. Bro. M. H. Moore, district solicitor, began work as soon as he was appointed; made a quick, thorough canvass of his district. The preachers cordially co-operated with him. The people gladly responded. The $5.45 will be paid in a few days.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Wesley Chapel, H. M. Ellis, P. C. 12 65

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

Centenary Church, Franklinton circuit, W. M. Sullivan, P. C. ... $10 00

On the suggestion of the Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., the following resolution was adopted by a rising vote, unanimously:

Resolved, That we do hereby approve the plan for paying the missionary debt as adopted by the Board of Missions, and placed under special charge of Dr. W. R. Lambuth, and hereby assume the amount of the debt apportioned to our Conference and re-apportioned among our several districts, pledging ourselves to co-operate cordially with the district solicitors and the Conference solicitor in their efforts in this behalf.

Special Notice.

I desire to call the attention of the brethren of the Louisiana Conference to the fact that the fiscal year of our Missionary Board is rapidly drawing to its close. It is of the greatest importance that all pledges on the debt be redeemed and forwarded before March 31. This matter has much to do with all appropriations for the next year. The extension and strengthening of our missionary operations will depend upon the eradication of the debt. It is time for us to make a mighty effort. This debt hangs over us, depressing and retarding the entire movement of our church. We must recognize the vastness of this incubus and make a corresponding effort for its removal. If the brethren will turn their attention to this matter, give it the impulse of a faith-born, heart-felt appeal, the matter will be settled. Raise the money and send without delay to our Conference treasurer, Bro. W. B. Thomson, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans. FRANKLIN N. PARKER,
Solicitor for the Louisiana Conference.

Notice.

Mississippi Conference.

Rev. John B. Baldwin, local elder, has been appointed colporter for the Meridian district by Rev. W. D. Dominick, general colporter for the Mississippi Conference. Bro. Baldwin is most cordially commended to the preachers and church members in the Meridian district. His work commends itself. The preachers will help him in every way to circulate good literature.

The attention of the brethren is called to our book depository at Jackson, Miss., now under the efficient management of Laird & Dominick.

Notice.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference will hold its annual meeting at Macon, April 7-10. Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Aberdeen, will preach the annual sermon. Reduced fares will be given to all points in Mississippi, provided those attending supply themselves at starting-point with the proper certificates that they have paid full fare in coming.

Delegates from the western part of the Conference must arrange their connections so as to reach Macon, Thursday evening, April 6, as there is no south-bound morning train on the M. and O. railroad.

Delegates who have not already notified me will please do so as soon as possible, so that homes may be provided. MRS. H. W. FOOTE,

HOME CIRCLE.

COURT YOUR WIFE.

BY GEORGE HOLTON.

O middle-aged man, I've a word with you,
As you sit in your office this morn;
Has the worry of life, with its folly and strife,
Pierced your heart like a festering thorn?
Does the touch of your gold feel too clammy and cold?
Are you weary of flattery's scorn?

Alas! for the days when the passion of youth
Burns low in the desolate heart;
When the laughter and tears of our innocent years
Never more from the sympathies start,
And the hideous mien of indulgence is seen
'Neath the flattering mantle of art?

Perhaps you've tried friendship, and only have found
Deception and selfishness rife;
Perhaps you have poured to the needy your hoard,
To be pricked by ingratitude's knife;
And perhaps you have been through the whole round of sin.
Did you ever try courting your wife?

No? Then take my advice, and I think you will find
'Tis a pleasure as charming as new,
Follow memory's track till at last you are back
To the days when you swore to be true—
Yes, dream more and more, till she seems as of yore
To be watching and sighing for you.

And when you go home to-night buy a bouquet
Of the flowers she used to admire;
Put them into her hand when before her you stand,
With a lover-like kiss of desire;
And O! watch her eyes when they ope with surprise,
And flame up from a smoldering fire!

Then all through the evening be tender and kind;
Hover near her with eager delight;
Call her "Darling" and "Sweet," the old titles repeat
Till her face is with happiness bright.
Try it, world-wearied man, 'tis an excellent plan;
Go a-courting your dear wife to-night!

The Art of Going to Sleep.

A disciple of Delsarte tells in the following paragraphs why growing persons sometimes find it hard to go to sleep, and how to overcome the wakeful tendency:

If you have never done so, watch yourself go to sleep, and you will be amazed to see how tense your position is. Your knees are drawn and bended, your back is curved, the arms are held more or less tightly to the body, and the fingers are folded; the eyelids are held shut, not allowed to droop over the eyes, the neck is strained, and the head seems to touch the pillows only at the temples. The points of contact with the bed are really at temples, shoulders, hips, knees, and ankles. Now look at a child sleeping. Every muscle relaxed, every joint is inert, and prone on the couch; his little frame finds rest at every point.

The features are undone, so to speak, the nose widens, the mouth droops, the eyelids close easily, and with every line of expression obliterated he finds utter and complete repose. The abandon makes him fall out of bed sometimes, such an inert body has he become. You may imitate him even to that degree if necessary. Begin at your toes to relax, loosen all your joints and muscles, unbind your fingers, shake your wrists loose, take the curve and strain out of your neck, go all to pieces, in fact, and see how the day's fatigue seems to slip off from you, and the gentle mantle of rest and oblivion enfolds you like a garment.

In the same line of suggestion is a word from Hall's Journal of Health on the value of the couch to a cozy room. It says:

A room without a couch of some sort is only half furnished. Life is full of ups and downs, and all that saves the family of the mentally jaded and physically exhausted fortnightly is the periodical good cry and momentary loss of consciousness on the upstairs lounge, or the old sofa in the sitting-room. There are times when so many of the things that distract us could be straightened out and the way made clear, if one only had a long, comfortable couch on whose soft bosom he could throw himself, boots and hands, stretch his weary frame, command of tidies and tapestry, close his tired eyes, relax the tension of his muscles, and give his harassed mind a chance. Ten minutes of this soothing narcotic, when the head throbs, the soul yearns for endless, dreamless, eternal rest, would make the vision clear, the nerves steady, the heart light, and the star of hope shine again.—Examiner.

Where Is Yours?

I knew a man who had lost his heart. His wife had not got it, and his children had not got it, and he did not seem as if he had got it himself.

"That is odd!" say you. Well, he used to starve himself. He scarcely had enough to eat. His clothes were threadbare. He starved all who were around him. He did not seem to have a heart. A poor woman owed him a little rent. Out she went into the street. He had no heart. A person had fallen back a little in the payment of money he had lent him. The debtor's children were crying for bread. The man did not care who cried for hunger, or what became of the children. He would have his money. He had lost his heart.

I never could make out where it was till I went to his house one day, and saw an iron safe; it stood behind the door of an inner room and when he unlocked it with a heavy key, and the bolts were shot and the inside was opened, there was a musty, fusty thing within it, as dry and dead as the kernel of a walnut seven years old. It was his heart. If you have locked up your heart in an iron safe, get it out. Get it out as quickly as ever you can. —Spurgeon

The Lord's Prayer Illustrated.

Our Father—
By right of creation,
By bountiful provision,
By gracious adoption:

Who art in heaven—
The throne of thy glory,
The portion of thy children,
The temple of thy angels:

Hallowed be thy name—
By the thoughts of our hearts,
By the words of our lips,
By the works of our hands:

Thy kingdom come—
Of Providence to defend us,
Of grace to refine us,
Of glory to crown us:

Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven—
Toward us without resistance,
By us without compulsion,
Universally without exception,
Eternally without declension:

Give us this day our daily bread—
Of necessity for our bodies,
Of eternal life for our souls;

And forgive us our trespasses—
Against the commands of thy law—
Against the grace of thy gospel;

As we forgive them that trespass against us—
Fully—retaining no grudge,
Promptly—without waiting for their repentance,
Heartily—so as to love them.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil—
Of overwhelming afflictions,
Of worldly entanglements,
Of Satan's devices,
Of error's seductions,
Of sinful affections;

For thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory forever.
Thy kingdom governs all,
Thy power subdues all,
Thy glory is above all.

Amen.
As it is in thy purposes,
So it is in thy promises,
So be it in our prayers,
So it shall be to thy praise.

Home-Keeping.

BY SUSAN TEALL PERRY.

Aunt Marietta looked up from the knitting work she was doing and said: "My dear, there is no trust so sacred and responsible as that of motherhood. The housekeeping duties, where the wife and mother seeks the highest and best good of those depending upon her, are the most ennobling and satisfying in their results of any duties of life. They are God-given, God-serving duties and I truly think the reason there are so many unhappy homes nowadays, is because this truth is not believed and acted upon, as it should be. On what many would call 'trifles' hang the most momentous things in life. You are trying to fulfill your obligations in the best manner, and I would far rather have grandmother's faculty for making the home and the loved ones happy than to have the faculty some of your neighbors have; not that we will meddle with our neighbors' concerns, for that is not our business, but I could solve the problem for you, as I am quite aware how housekeeping and home-keeping goes on across the way. It is very hard to do justice to so much outside work and inside work, my dear. After you have lived to be an old woman as I have, you will be glad to remember how you put forth your best effort in behalf of those whom God has given you in the home circle. The happiest time in life to look back upon for me are those days when the children were little ones in the old home nest, and I was mothering them. Now that they have gone from me to their own homes, it is a great satisfaction to me to feel that I did the best I could for them while they were with me. Girls and boys do grow up into women and men so soon. You are making a history every day right here in your home, writing the records of your daily life as a mother on the hearts of your children, and you are making pictures for them to look at by-and-by, 'Pictures hanging on memory's wall,' my dear. They will see more high art and beautiful coloring in such pictures when they look on them years hence, than they will see in any picture gallery in this country or any other; so don't think that your talents are being wasted. And always remember that 'Home-keeping hearts are happiest.'"—N. Y. Evangelist.

The Teaching of Sorrow.

It is often in sorrow that our lives are taught their sweetest songs. There is a story of a German baron who stretched wires from tower to tower of his castle, to make an Æolian harp. Then he waited to hear the music from it. For a time the air was still and no sound was heard. Afterward gentle breezes blew and the harp sang softly. At length came the Winter winds, strong and storm-like in their force; then the wires gave out majestic music which was heard through all the castle. There are human lives that never yield the music that is in them in the calm of quiet days; but when the winds of trial sweep over them they give out minglings of song; and when the storms of adversity blow upon them they answer in notes of victory. It takes trouble to bring out the best that is in them.

Come what may, we should make our lives sings. We have no right to add to the world's discords or to sing any but sweet strains in the ears of others. We should start no note of sadness in this world, which is already so full of sadness. We should add something every day to the stock of the world's happiness. If we are truly Christ's and walk with him, we can not but sing.—Westminster Teacher.

The soul and body are as strings of two musical instruments, set exactly at one height; if one be touched, the other trembles. They laugh and cry, are sick and well together.—Plarel.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

HOW CYRUS LAID THE CABLE.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

Come listen unto my song;
It is no silly fable;
'Tis all about the mighty cord
They call the Atlantic cable.

Bold Cyrus Field, he says, says he,
"I have a pretty notion
That I can run a telegraph
Across the Atlantic Ocean."

Then all the people laughed, and said
They'd like to see him do it;
He might get half seas over, but
He never could get through it.

To carry out his foolish plan
He never would be able;
He might as well go hang himself
With his Atlantic cable.

But Cyrus was a valiant man,
A fellow of decision,
And heeded not their mocking words,
Their laughter and derision.

Twice did his bravest efforts fail,
And yet his mind was stable;
He warn't the man to break his heart
Because he broke his cable.

"Once more, my gallant boys!" he cried;
"Three times!—you know the fable"— ("I'll make it thirty," muttered he,
"But I will lay the cable.")

Once more they tried—hurrah! hurrah!
What means this great commotion?
The Lord be praised! the cable's laid
Across the Atlantic Ocean!

Loud ring the bells—for flashing through
Six hundred leagues of water,
Old Mother England's heirloom
Salutes her eldest daughter.

"Peace on earth, good will to men,"
This was the message cabled;
And may the nations of the earth
To keep it be enabled.

O'er all the land the tidings speed,
And soon in every nation
They'll hear about the cable with Profoundest admiration!

Now long live James* and long live Vic,
And long live gallant Cyrus;
And may his courage, faith and zeal
With emulation fire us.

And may we honor evermore
The manly, bold and stable,
And tell our sons, to make them brave,
How Cyrus laid the cable.

*President James Buchanan.

No Answer

Has come to the editor's question, where the word "fits" is found in King James' Version of the Bible. What's the matter with the little cousins?—EDITOR.

In Japan.

In government, schools, and many public works, the buildings, dress, and much of the manners are greatly what the young people of America are accustomed to seeing; but in the homes many things are very different. There are no chairs, no bedsteads, no dressers, no dining-tables, no chimneys, fireplaces or stoves. The principal rooms of the houses have no doors and windows proper; but two or more sides of each room are made in pieces, which slide upon each other, and back and forth. The whole house may be easily turned into one room, and whole sides of houses may be opened for the Summer day. The different kinds of curious shoes never touch the matted floors. You can generally tell the number of inmates present at a home, or the number of guests at a hotel, by counting the shoes at the door. In well-to-do homes cleanliness is very marked, but rags and filth are plenteous in some quarters. The rich man, in silk dashes, in jinrikisha, by his begging fellowman. The extremes of life are here, as elsewhere.

In my occasional letters only a few things can be told. If you are interested, you may read more in books. H. G. HAWKINS.

MR. EDITOR: As I never see any letters from Rosetta, I thought I would write one. I am a little bachelor; only weigh about 100 pounds. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I love the church. Our church is named after Bishop C. B. Galloway. Don't you think the Bishop ought to dedicate our church? I do. I will close by asking a question: Who was the oldest man that ever lived, and died before his father? I remain,

Your bachelor friend, CECIL I. BASS.

The Same Knife.

A learned professor was explaining to his class how the identity of a thing might remain even with the loss of its parts.

"Here," he said, "is this penknife. Now, suppose I lose this blade and replace it with a new one—you see it has three blades—is it still the same knife?"

"Yes! yes!" cried the class.

"And suppose," he said, "I lose a second blade, and replace it with a new one, is it still the same knife?"

"Oh, yes!" said the class.

"And suppose," he said, "I lose the third blade, and replace it with a new one, it is still the same knife?"

The class eagerly responded, "Yes!"

"Now," said the professor, triumphantly, "suppose I lose the handle, and have a new one made, is it still the same knife?"

"Certainly!" roared the scholars.

"Professor," said he, "suppose I should find those three blades and that handle, and put them together again, what knife would that be?" The professor's answer is not recorded.

"Can't you change your seat to the other side of the car?" some one asked a little girl who had been sent to the country by the Country Week Association of Philadelphia. The child hesitated, fearing that she might lose many a pleasing sight from the car window by changing her seat. Then, thinking that she would investigate the matter she asked, "Is the country on both sides of the car?"

The Secret of Success.

Over fifty years ago a youth, working on a farm, asked his father to give him money enough to buy a gun. The old man could not spare it, but the boy, nothing daunted, found an old piece of iron about the place, and in the course of time contrived to make a gun barrel out of it, with the very meager facilities afforded by a country blacksmith's shop. He had not the materials to make a lock and stock, so he walked to the nearest town and traded for the necessary attachments, and was encouraged by the smith for having made so good a shooter; this gave him the ambition to make another, so he went to cutting out grindstones from the native rock to raise money for gun materials; in a short time there was a considerable demand for guns of his make. During the French war with Prussia he was called upon to furnish guns for the army, and in less than eight months he made and delivered to the government of France rifles of a particular pattern, costing five millions of dollars, which amount was duly paid. The same man furnished rifles for the United States, South America, Rome, Spain, Egypt and Japan. The farmer's boy who wanted a gun was Elphalet Remington, of Ilion, N. Y. Not satisfied with this achievement, he has recently completed a sewing machine, which is reported to represent the latest and most perfect advance in the improvement of this important adjunct of domestic economy, and then the typewriter. This is the type of a boy who, when there is not a way, makes a way for himself. Many a youth would have sat down and pouted, thinking over what a hard thing it was that he could not get a gun, with hard thoughts against the father for being so stingy. Not so with young Remington; he wanted a gun and was determined to have it; the very necessities of his situation stimulated him to the exercise and consequent development of his powers of planning and devising; in other words, of thinking for himself. And such are they, the world over, who achieve gilded success. Those who think for themselves, plan for themselves and upon themselves to act. So it was with Fitch and Goodyear and Howe. Their early history was the history of a struggle with privation and want and litigation, and almost despair; and the immortal Morse must be added to the list, owing all to their struggle against poverty and want. But as the human mind is constituted, it is better to struggle than to be idle; better to work than to wait; better to lean on one's self than on another. It is the men who, as boys, are goaded for a foothold in the world, who now wield the world's destinies, and do the most to mould its history.—Selected.

A Boy Who Read.

I do not think it is very serviceable to make a list of books for children to read. No two have exactly the same aptitudes, tastes, or kinds of curiosity about the world. And one story or bit of information may excite the interest of a class in one school, or the children in one family, which will not take at all with others. The only thing is to take hold somewhere, and to begin to use the art of reading to find out about things as you use your eyes and ears. I knew a boy, a scrap of a lad, who almost needed a high chair to bring him up to the general level of the dining-table, who liked to read the encyclopædia. He was always hunting round in the big books of the encyclopædia—books about his own size for what he wanted to know. He dug in it as another boy would dig in the woods for sassafras root. It appeared that he was interested in natural history and natural phenomena. He asked questions of these books, exactly as he would ask a living authority, and kept at it until he got answers. He knew how to read. Soon that boy was an authority on earthquakes. He liked to have the conversation at table turn on earthquakes, for then he seemed to be the tallest person at the table. I suppose there was no earthquake anywhere of any importance but that he could tell where it occurred, and what damage it did, how many houses it buried, and how many people it killed, and what shape it left the country it had shaken. From that he went on to try to discover what caused these disturbances, and this led him into other investigations, and at last into electricity, practical as well as theoretical. He examined machines and invented machines, and kept on reading, and presently he was an expert in electricity. He knew how to put in wires and signals and bells, and to do a number of practical and useful things, and almost before he was able to enter high school he had a great deal of work to do in the city, and three or four men under him. These men under him had not read as much about electricity as he had.—Charles Dudley Warner.

Mr. Gladstone at Home.

When relieved from the affairs of state, Mr. Gladstone finds no pleasure so great as in home life at Hawarden. There his family are gathered together, and the great man romps and plays with his grandchildren as though he never knew what it was to be blamed for everything that went wrong in all Great Britain and her colonies. Mr. Gladstone is a wonderful scholar, a busy writer and speaker, but the little Gladstone children know him best as a good, kind grandfather who is fond of fun. He, too, would prefer to enjoy their company rather than to be surrounded by England's great men at an all-night session of Parliament. His other recreations are walking, and—this is really very funny—chopping down trees. Our great George Washington, according to tradition, had a like fondness in his youth, but by the time he became President he had probably outgrown such fancies. Mr. Gladstone, however, is an expert woodman, and though he don't destroy valuable cherry-trees, he goes out with his axe and takes the keenest pleasure in felling trees to Hawarden park. A visitor to the castle one day noticed an axe behind the door in the great hall, where it had been left by the statesman after one of his chopping expeditions. A curious ornament for such a place, it seems. It may be out of compliment to the boy George Washington and his hatchet that the "Grand Old Man" prefers to use an American axe.—Harper's Young People.

POWER OF TRIFLES.—A little plant was given by a kindly neighbor to a sick girl. In trying to take care of it the family made changes in their way of living. First they cleaned the window, that more light might come to its leaves; then, when not too cold, they would open the window that fresh air might help the plant to grow. The clean window made the rest of the room look so untidy that they used to wash the floor and arrange the furniture more neatly. This led the father to mend some broken chairs, which kept him at home several evenings. After the work was done he stayed at home instead of going to the club-house. With the money saved he bought comforts for the home. Thus the little plant brought a real blessing to the home.—Exchange.

If you look at a dozen common lamp-chimneys, and then at Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," you will see the differences—all but one—they break from heat; these don't; you can't see that.

Common glass is misty, milky, dusty; you can't see through it; Macbeth's is clear.

Tough, clear glass is worth fine work; and a perfect chimney of fine tough glass is worth a hundred such as you hear, pop, clash on the least provocation.

RAWLS—Mrs. ELLEN E. RAWLS (nee Harrell) was born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jan. 15, 1821, and died in New Orleans, Jan. 21, 1893.

Sister Rawls was one of the old guard of Felicity Street Church, and as such only surrendered her commission with her life. What dangers had she seen, what conflicts passed, what deaths endured, before the final summons of "well done, good and faithful servant," came to her! A half century ago was the era of romantic conversions, and hers was of thrilling interest, combining as it did both the elements of providence and grace. On the way to attend worship at another church on a gusty morning she was literally blown by a strong wind out of her course and into a chapel where revival services were being held, and here heard from the officiating minister a testimony concerning the conversion of his own father, that presented a picture of doubts and difficulties so utterly like her own, that she could not doubt that God's voice was in the service for her, or that his hand had guided her to the place. In the pew which she occupied lay a tract that supplied to her all further information, and, availing herself of the offer of mercy extended to penitents at the close of the service, she was immediately blessed and enabled to go down to her consecrated home.

From that hour began a life of remarkable self-denial on the one hand as on one pledged to suffer for Christ, and on the other of passionate endeavor as a servant of him who said, "Go work in my vineyard;" that is not often paralleled in the age in which we live. Even in her last days, when decrepit from the effects of disease, she would totter along the street on errands of mercy, and not unfrequently drag her suffering body to the bedside of afflicted neighbors to share with them, as the best gift which she could bestow, a voice of warning or consolation. Her piety, like her faith, was of the robust kind, inured alike to toils and conflicts, and following the example of her Lord, she would not only bear her cross, but it need be fall under its weight. A sufferer for years from acute disease, she was nevertheless an example of cheerfulness which none could see without being impressed by it, or possibly reminded of that brilliancy of sunlight which sometimes visits us from the region of cloud or storm. What patience must that have been which never murmured at daily tortures like those which in a former age ungenerous tyrants were wont to bestow upon the bodies of helpless victims to feed their appetite for cruelty, and what resignation must that have been which no lightning flash of pain could betray into the mood of repining!

Having been a member of Felicity Street Church for many years, she had many pleasant reminiscences of the olden time, and delighted to talk of the old pastors to whose memory she was devoted. Indeed, she had been so intimately connected either as leader or promoter with every era, as well as incident of this religious community from the time of its organization, that anything like an extended obituary of her would practically embody a history of the church from its beginning to the present date. She was an exemplary wife, sister, daughter and mother, and if there be any other relation not included by these terms as citizen, patriot, Christian, they are perhaps all included under the summary with which we delight to conclude this brief tribute, that having served her generation faithfully by the will of God, she fell on sleep." As an afflicted family, community, church, we "weep for her not as those who have no hope."

J. M. HEARD.

KENNEDY—Col. HYDER ALI KENNEDY was born in Chambers county, Ala., A. D. 1810, and died at his residence in New Orleans early in January of the present year. He became a member of the Methodist Church soon after his marriage, which occurred a few years subsequently to the war, and lived in its communion until the close of his life.

His education was obtained at the famous University of North Carolina, located at Chapel Hill, and as he had just reached manhood when the war broke out he enlisted as a soldier in the Southern Army, and during the entire war served with Gibson's Division of the Army of Tennessee. In the army his character was that of a brave soldier, true to every trust, and meeting frequent promotion as the reward of efficient and gallant service. After the war he was almost constantly engaged in civic employment to the great satisfaction and profit of the public he served, and with an uniform record of fidelity and stainless integrity. In private life he had few or no enemies, and by all familiars was both admired and loved. His friendships were intensive and never broken but by the revealed unworthiness of their object or the decree of Providence. By a strange coincidence some of those who sustained particular intimacy to him in this relation were called away from earth at a date closely corresponding to his own death. May there not have been a providence hidden in the coincidence as well as behind it? In religion Col. Kennedy was undemonstrative but faithful and true. He was in official positions until the time of his death, and deeply concerned for the prosperity of his Master's cause. He will be greatly missed in the councils as well as in the public worship of the church of which at the time of his death he was a member. In the domestic circle Col. Kennedy was distinguished for unusual affection and refinement of behavior. He was at once the idol and presiding genius of the home. If Christianity has made any desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose, it has been that barren waste of family intercourse which in all barbarian lands has been proverbially destitute both of perfumes and fruits. And here our brother was seen at his best, as husband and father worthy the best models of chivalry, and whose errors was all on the side of generosity and affection.

He suffered much in his last illness, but with patience and entire resignation. Not long before his death, and while discussing with the writer the probable issue of his disease, he professed a hearty resolve both to do and suffer the will of his Maker. And in his very tones and manner of speech, though more than commonly cheerful, there seemed to be a prophecy of the end. Let us be comforted with the thought, that he both lived and died well, and left to loved ones as to the world a richer legacy than that of crowns or estates.

J. M. HEARD.

MYERS—Bro. JOHN D. MYERS was born March 22, 1860, and departed this life on Jan. 31, 1893.

Bro. Myers was denied that parental care and affection with which so many are blessed—both parents dying when he was quite young. His educational and financial standing, at death, was principally due to his own personal efforts, guided and assisted by Divine Providence. He professed conversion and united with the M. E. Church, South, at Girard, La., during a meeting held in the month of September, 1889. Was happily married to Miss Carrie Patterson, Feb. 13, 1890; and after living a short time at Girard, removed to Rayville, where he closed his earthly mission. In his business relations he was strictly honest—"rendering to all their due." As a husband, faithful and true; as a father, loving and tender, and as a Christian, his example was worthy of imitation. The future to him was not dark; "he knew in whom he had believed," and seemed resigned to the divine will. I feel that I can truly say, "Servant of God, well done; rest from thy labors."

May God bless the sorrowing wife and the two dear little children, who survive!

I. T. REAMES, Pastor.

LEWIS—Mrs. CHARLOTTE E. LEWIS was born Feb. 22, 1867, and died at the home of her father, in Girard, La., Jan. 25, 1893. Sister Lewis was blessed with God-fearing parents, who endeavored to bring her up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and, as a result, she united with the M. E. Church, South, several years ago, and tried to obey her rules until released from this obligation by death. She had many warm friends in this little town and adjoining country who feel that in her death they have sustained great loss.

During her illness the writer had no conversation with her concerning her decease; but when she was nearing the eternal world her anxious father asked her the question, "Are you afraid to die?" to which she replied, "No." Her death—caused from pneumonia—was extremely painful, but the agony was that of physical and not of the spiritual being—of the body, not the soul. We are made sad by her death, but hope to meet again in heaven. May God sustain the bereaved loved ones!

I. T. REAMES, Pastor.

LYNCH—Died, at his residence in Guldman, Ark., G. G. LYNCH, Feb. 6, 1893, at the age of fifty-eight years seven months and nine days. He was born in Smith county, Tenn.; was married to Miss Mary E. Richards, in Houston county, Texas, at her home, "Argyle," Sept. 25, 1866. He joined the church under the ministry of Rev. J. T. Daves, and lived a consistent life until God called him home.

The doctor who attended him in his last moments said, "It is worth living a Christian life, to be enabled to die like that." His wife, in this her greatest bereavement, says he has given her such happiness that death can not mar it utterly; and his pastor says, "The most appropriate text of Scripture for his funeral is, 'Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his'" The writer knew Bro. Lynch intimately and loved him very much. He was one of God's noblemen. God bless the widow in her bereavement!

H. O. WHITE.

NOBLE—On Jan. 6, 1893, death, with its cold and ruthless hand, lifted the lid of Earth's casket and took therefrom a precious gem.

"Baby Joe" was an only son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Noble. He was loved by many hearts, and ever tenderly cherished by fond parents; but, alas! he did not live long to brighten their home. A disease, which by science could not be quenched, threw its death-like arms around his little form and fled with its precious burden. Ah! another bright flower has been plucked by the grim hand of death. But God knows best, and we believe his blessings were upon him, for he did not suffer long, but was carried to a home beyond by him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Fond parents, grieve not for "Baby Joe," for he is now "safe in the arms of Jesus," and we are sure our loss is his eternal gain.

A COUSIN.

East Baton Rouge parish, La.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep—had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. CHRIST WALKING ON THE SEA OF GALILEE.

AMONG the great religious paintings of modern times, Christ Walking on the Sea, by Charles Franger, is a masterpiece. The text from which the picture was taken is this: When even was come, his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship. And it was dark, and the ship was in the midst of the sea, and Jesus alone was on the land and was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew. And he saw them toiling in rowing, for the wind was contrary unto them, and the ship was now in the midst of the sea tossed with the waves. Jesus cometh unto them, walking upon the sea and would have passed them. But when the disciples saw him walking on the sea and drawing nigh unto the ship, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out for fear. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid."

This beautiful Biblical description the painter has chosen for his subject, and his wonderful painting appeals in the highest degree to the religious sentiment, as well as the artistic taste and refinement of every nationality and every creed.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

The Value of a Dollar.

Every boy should learn the true value of a dollar. To know what a dollar costs and what it buys is one of the stepping-stones to success. It is also desirable that everyone should know that a half dollar will buy a bottle of

Ask your dealer for a bottle.

Employment for All.

We want active men and women in every county in the South to represent us and to sell our publications. We pay high commissions, and in addition allow our canvassers the privilege of general agents, which insures them extra profits. In this way you can make as much and even more than on your own sales. Our books are written by standard authors, and are just what the public want, as shown by our agents' reports. One agent sold $165 worth in four days last week. Our self-pronouncing Bibles are unsurpassed, and meet with high favor. Now is the time to enter the work. Write for terms and catalogue. Homer Publishing Co., Wm. Cooksey, manager, Homer, La.

To Whom It May Concern.

Macon, Ga., March 18, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

W. C. BLACK,
Pastor Mulberry St. Methodist Church.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

St. Patrick's Day, March 17, was fittingly celebrated by the Irishmen of this city. The Ancient Order of Hibernians had a large parade.

The famous Tremont Temple in Boston, used as a Baptist Church, was totally destroyed by fire on March 19. Loss is estimated at $385 000.

Ex-Senator James B. Eustis, of Louisiana, has been appointed to the French mission by President Cleveland, and the nomination has been confirmed by the Senate.

The problem of underground wires for electric railways is said to have been successfully solved in Hartford, where a section of street railway is now operated by this system.

The railways of the United States carried in round numbers 530,000,000 passengers during 1892. They also killed 293 people. About 784,000 men are given employment by them the year round.

The Swedish exhibit will be one of the finest at the World's Fair. The government appropriated about $100,000 for the exhibit, and that amount, in proportion to the population of other countries, was the largest appropriation made by any European country.

A Beauregard memorial meeting was held in this city on March 17, and it was attended by a large and representative audience. The committee from the city of Charleston, sent to receive the sword of Gen Beauregard, bequeathed by him to it, was present and participated in the ceremonies.

The Clothing Cutters' Union in New York City started a series of strikes on March 17, which if persisted in is likely to cause a lockout of about 800 cutters by the Clothing Manufacturers' Association, and this will have the effect of throwing between 6,000 and 7,000 tailors out of work.

The Sundry Civil Service bill lately passed by Congress contained an appropriation of $10,000 to be paid the lady managers of the World's Fair in quarters minted for the purpose. The ladies expect to put the new souvenirs on the market at $1 apiece. Indeed, it is reported that one enterprising speculator has offered $40,000 for the entire lot.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Jefferson Davis Monument Association, held in Richmond, Va., the president was authorized and instructed to proceed to New Orleans to make such arrangements as he shall deem necessary and proper to remove the remains of Hon. Jefferson Davis from that city to Richmond and determine the route by which they shall be removed.

There is to be a monument of coal at the World's Fair 50 feet high, 10 feet square at the base and 4 feet square at the top. It is to be exhibited by a Pennsylvania coal company. It will be constructed in sections 16 feet long, and put together at Chicago. Pieces of coal will be selected that will show, when placed in position, all the connecting minerals that are found in the mining of coal.

Rev. John A. Ellis.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

The Rev. John Alexander Ellis was born near Murfreesboro, Tenn., April 27, 1830, and, after a life of singular devoutness and usefulness, died at Moss Point, Miss., Feb. 16, 1893. He was the thirteenth of the fifteen children given his godly parents, all of whom, with true Hebrew reverence and joy, were hailed as tokens of divine favor. Few more holy and well-ordered homes have blessed the church and world than the one presided over by Hicks Ellis and Tabitha Gunn. One of the daughters—now a devout mother in Israel—says of that happy Tennessee home: "Obedience and reverence were so wisely instilled that they became a part of our nature. Our house was the resting-place for the tired itinerant, and no duties ever prevented the family from attending the week-day appointments."

At an early ago John entered the employment of his brother, removing with him to Huntsville, Ala., and devoted some years to the mercantile business. In that calling he soon became efficient, and, doubtless, would have achieved large success but for the call of Providence to another and wider sphere. Converted at the age of fourteen, he joined the Methodist Church at Huntsville, Ala., under the ministry of Rev. Adam S. Riggs. His espousal to Christ was whole-hearted, and his devotion ardent and unremitting. The conscientiousness so characteristic of his later years was seen in the activity and fidelity of his earliest Christian service. Soon the voice of God was heard—loud, clear, unmistakable, authoritative—calling him to the work of the ministry. Though disappointing many, and well-laid plans, and too modestly estimating his possible fitness for so great a calling, he cheerfully obeyed, and never doubted or regretted the decision of that hour. Not long before his translation he said: "The thought of any other work has never for one moment troubled me since I decided that this was my life mission." And few of the Lord's prophets ever had less desire for worldly applause, or the honors of life, than did this modest, self-denying, consecrated young man.

In order to test his gifts and graces, according to the wise and almost universal custom of that day, he was first given license to exhort. This occurred in May, 1849, and in October, of the same year, he was granted authority to preach, and recommended for admission into the traveling connection. His ministry was exceptionally fruitful, and he soon became generally and generously known for evangelistic zeal and distinguished pastoral efficiency. From circuit work he was transferred to the Nashville City Mission, and to his wise planning and successful evangelism our Methodism there is indebted for several of her strongest churches. He laid the foundations on which others have superbly built. His last appointment in the Tennessee Conference was Franklin station, where the heritage of his precious memory abides, and where "his works do follow him."

During the late war he entered military service as chaplain of the Twentieth Tennessee Regiment, and kept heroic step with his brave comrades until their banner was forever furled. One who shared with him the vicissitudes of many campaigns thus writes: "During his service with the Twentieth Tennessee he bound to him 'with hooks of steel' every man in the command. He braved the thickest storms of shot and shell, in his efforts to succor the wounded or console the dying, with a courage and devotion that was truly heroic. Tireless in his vigils at the bedside with the sick, and on the march, how many times have I seen him dismount and put a lame, sick, or tired infantry-man into his saddle! He was my mess-mate. We ate from the same camp-chest, slept under the same tree or canvas-roof, and rode or walked side by side when on the march. I knew him well, and, with his other comrades, surely regret his faith; yet we can rejoice that he has gone to receive the rich reward of his earnest devotion to duty and to God."

In 1863, while serving as an army chaplain in Mississippi, he was married to Mrs. S. H. Hamilton, near Brandon, Miss. Two children were born to them—Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. S. T. Harrison, of Nashville, Tenn.

In 1865 he transferred to the Mississippi Conference, and here spent the rest of life, honored by his brethren, loved by all, and conspicuously useful in his ministry. He had some distinguished virtues, but possibly he was best known and most admired for the balance and harmony of his faculties, the splendid poise and symmetry of his character. Gentleness and strength, tenderness and manliness, considerateness and positiveness, were in him singularly blended. He had the heart of a woman and the will of a martyr. With the grace of gentle speech and the warmth of Christly sympathy, he united a firmness of purpose that never compromised a principle or yielded an honest conviction. For the sorrowing he had a brother's tear; for the suffering, a soothing hand; for the fallen, the largest charity; for the wayward, the longest patience; but for the enemies of his Lord he had a strong arm and a mighty blade "of heavenly temper keen."

He was a man of clear, reliable judgment. His power of analysis made him discriminating, his broad catholicity preserved him from prejudice, his well-trained conscience sustained his native courage, and his clear convictions gave him firmness and decision—all eminently fitting him for wise counsel. On this account much of his later ministry was in demand for the presiding eldership.

Too self-denying ever to be controlled by personal ambitions, and too modest to think more highly of himself than he ought, he sought the good of others and not the attainment of private ends. It would have grieved him beyond measure to be suspected of selfish or unworthy motives in advising the appointment of any brother, or the filling of any station. The one who had his perfect confidence, and who is most bereaved in his death, says: "He told me that never, but one time, during a ministry of nearly forty-five years, did he try to influence his field of labor, and then, because of his first wife's illness, which he knew to be fatal, he asked for a work near the home of her son, where she could be properly cared for."

He was a man of clean lips and chaste speech. Impure words and ungenerous judgments never fell from his bridled and sanctified tongue. The now desolate widow, who for the past nine years has been nearest to him in hourly companionship, bears this delightful testimony, "I can never recall one unkind word, or harsh criticism of anyone, from his lips."

As a preacher, Bro. Ellis was eminently spiritual, distinctly scriptural, positively practical, and always helpful. His style was expository, his language pure and critically correct, and his manner earnest and reverent. I have often thought him specially felicitous in luminous statement and in the choice of apt, strong words. While lacking the graces of an elocutionist, he had the charm of unaffected earnestness and sanctified sympathy. One who sat under his ministry for a year or more—a member of his congregation—and for whose discriminating judgment I have the highest appreciation, thus speaks of him: "Reviewing the pulpit utterances that have helped me, spiritually, I discover a large indebtedness to Bro. Ellis. His sermons fed me. He seldom preached in my hearing that he did not give me, at least, one living thought of Christ and the Christian life. It may not always have been new or original, but the impression for good lingered and lingers. Every now and then, as the reading of a text of Scripture strangely warms me, or a sweet, refreshing, inspiring inner view of Christian life opens before me, I find Bro. Ellis and his ministry are intimately associated with it." Such generous and grateful testimony could, doubtless, be given by many others. And that is the true test and fairest measure of gospel preaching.

In November, 1884—his wife having died several years before—he was married to Miss M. E. Ellis, of Amite City, La., daughter of the late Judge Ellis. This was a happy union of hearts and hands for the glory of God. Theirs was "truly a life without clouds"—consecrated joyously to the service of the church.

After an illness of about two weeks, but not thought to be alarming until a few days before the end came, the faithful pastor, tender husband, loving father, and my honored friend of almost flawless character, sweetly fell on sleep Feb. 16, 1893, in the parsonage at Moss Point, Miss. His son and daughter reached there before he passed away. They heard him say with clear voice and unclouded faith, "There is rest," and saw the weary wheels of life stand still. We buried him at Amite City, La. He rests with an honored company, and with them, on the world's grandest early morning, will have part in the first resurrection.

Jackson, Miss.

From the Work.

Rev. H. R. Singleton: "We have had a week of prayer—I do not know how much self-denial—resulting in about $35 so far. Besides this, $15 has been remitted and $20 promised from this charge, which goes indirectly for the same purpose, making about $70 in all. I have not remitted, hoping to get more."

Rev. H. W. May, Lake Charles, La., March 14: "This will inform you that, after four weeks' illness, I am, in the good providence of God, permitted to engage again in my Master's work. The congregation is growing, and some evidences of spiritual life can be seen. We are praying for and expecting a revival. God bless you in your work, my brother."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Rector, Ark., March 18: "We are in one of the greatest revivals of religion at this place I have ever witnessed. At least 125 conversions and reclamations have been reported already, and the good work continues with increasing interest. There has never been such a work of grace in this part of Northeastern Arkansas. Glory to God! Pray for us."

Rev. J. W. Malone, Coldwater, Miss., March 20: "Hernando and Coldwater, Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, has not only redeemed my pledge made at Conference for the debt, but last Sunday and the Sunday before contributed ninety per cent. of the entire Conference assessment for all the claims. The remaining ten per cent. is in sight, and in a few weeks I hope to clear the decks."

Rev. S. H. Whatley, Pleasant Hill, March 18: "Five of the official members of our first Quarterly Conference. The presiding elder preached comfortingly of Providence. Nine accessions and seventy-six discessions reported. Forty-eight dollars by the Sunday-school for the missionary debt. Hope to have it all in the hands of the Board in time. Good things done the pastor in charge and family by these good people is not done for publication. Congregation increasing. Pray for us."

Rev. R. M. Standefer, Columbus, Miss., March 25: "The results of the Culpepper meeting abide. One hundred men at our mon's prayer meeting Tuesday night. The regular prayer meeting attendance would make a good Sunday morning congregation in ordinary times. We have had additions at almost every service since the meeting closed. Our class meeting is better attended than ever before. There are some of the results, together with the toning up of the entire community religiously."

Rev. P. M. Brown, Amite City, La., March 17: "Have just closed a protracted meeting at Tangipahoa. Meeting lasted eleven days. Bros. N. J. Roberts and W. M. Sullivan rendered efficient and much-appreciated aid. Results: Church quickened and revived; thirteen candidates for membership; many not members of the church professed to be greatly helped, and pledged themselves to lead better lives. The unanimous verdict of the people is, that it was the best meeting ever held in that place. To God be all the praise."

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, Trenton, Miss., March 20: "The first Quarterly Conference of this charge was held last Thursday, the sixteenth. Notwithstanding that it was the middle of the week, and everyone busy, the attendance was very good. Our presiding elder preached from the text, Matt. xvi, 24, and gave us an instructive and practical view of true Christianity. We feel very much encouraged by the beginning that our people have made. Our report for the first quarter of this year shows an advance over that of last year the same time. The people everywhere along the circuit have extended only kindness to their preacher, and he is praying and working for their spiritual good."

Rev. L. J. Jones, March 11: "Our first quarterly meeting convened on yesterday, the tenth day of March. The day was pretty, and by eleven o'clock there was a good congregation collected to enjoy another quarterly meeting at Pleasant Grove. All the churches on the work were represented. Bro. Woodward was present, and gave us a fine sermon. We had a revival in the Quarterly Conference. After listening to the sermon, there were many bathed in tears. Our people love their presiding elder. They pay him quarterly. His preaching is strengthening."

Rev. N. B. Young, Vancleave charge, Mississippi Conference: "This is my second year on this work. We had many tokens of kindness last year, and they continue this year. We have a great many devotedly pious people on Vancleave work. We are planning for a revival on all lines this year. We are building a new church at Red Hill, and hope to build others. Our new presiding elder, Bro. Partridge, was at his post on the occasion of our first Quarterly Conference. He is the right man for this district. He proposes to hold us all to the law of the church, and he does it in the spirit of the gospel. He preaches as he goes, night and day. He gave us three sermons, and the brethren are delighted with the spirit and power of his preaching. We are looking for a good work on our circuit and the Seashore district this year. Pray for us."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, P. C., Terry, Miss., March 16: "Our work has been moving upward for several months. Four Sunday-schools doing good work; prayer meetings better than at any time since I came to this work, and increase in numbers and interest every week. Our people are getting closer together as Christians, which results in much good work being done. We expect many souls to be saved here this year. Our first Quarterly Conference was held here on the fourth and fifth of this month, and we had very profitable meetings. Presiding Elder Woodward preached three sermons with usual power, getting very close to the people. They were edifying. We have all the materials ordered for a new church at this place, and the carpenters will commence work next week. The other appointments doing well. We are praying for and expecting a 'big' revival here at District Conference, which will be in July."

Rev. H. W. Day, Amite circuit, March 10: "I was sent as supply preacher of Amite circuit. I arranged business for the work, and started out. Filled my first appointment, and all of my appointments since; but, living fifteen miles from my nearest church, and thirty-two from the furthest one, I find I have got plenty to do, having four churches in all. Have had good congregations, and a good interest manifested. Sunday-schools going to work; prayer meeting commencing. A Church Conference is to be held at each church on my next round. People have received me kindly, with open arms and cheerful hearts, and praying for a revival of religion. I think assessments will be paid in full. I have found on this part of the work some very plain footprints of Revs. W. W. Simmons, Mark M. Moore, Wilson Brown, M. L. White, and others. God bless these brethren in other fields, that the Lord's work may still prosper in their hands. Pray for a young preacher on his first work."

Rev. W. M. Williams, Decatur, Miss., March 13: "This, the Decatur circuit, is my first appointment. Arrived on my work before the first Sunday in January. Have filled every appointment this year. Have had good congregations. Have raised enough money this year to pay for the parsonage, except about $60, which we will pay this Fall. We have also had to raise the rent on the parsonage for last year. We have inaugurated our financial system on this work. These people are well pleased with it, and it is working successfully. The preacher and family are bountifully provided for. We have been kindly received and well treated by these good people ever since we came. Nearly every time I come home my wife finds some token of their kindness in the buggy. For example: I brought home this evening two hams, one peck of dried apples, one pair of socks, and some fresh apples to eat, raised here and kept all the Winter. Am taking up my collection for Conference claimants. Yesterday, at Union, they gave me more than I asked for. We expect to pay our debts this year dollar for dollar, and that many sinners will be brought to Christ. Am doing everything I can for the ADVOCATE. I never lose an opportunity for speaking for it. I get a new subscriber every once in a while. Have held Church Conference at every church, and made an ADVOCATE speech at every one."

Good for you, brother.—EDITOR.

Woman's Missionary Society of the Meridian District.

Our district Woman's Missionary Society met at Waynesboro on the eleventh instant. We were met at the train by a committee of ladies, and appointed to our homes, feeling very much like the preachers do when they go to Conference. Bro. B. F. Lewis preached the opening sermon at 7:30 P. M. His discourse was pointed, well rounded, and much appreciated by all who heard it.

Saturday, at nine A. M., our meeting was called to order by our district secretary, and a secretary elected for the occasion. Mrs. Daisy Price being elected, walked forward with an easy grace and took the chair. Short talks were then called for from Bros. Lewis, Moore, Breland and Bradford, who spoke enthusiastically of woman's work, and bade us God-speed. Seven societies reported during our morning and afternoon sessions, Vossburg being ahead, and really the banner society. At 7:30 P. M., after singing, reading and prayer, Mrs. Davis, of Waynesboro, came forward and delivered the address of welcome in a sweet, elegant manner, making us feel thrice welcome to the hearts and homes of the good people of Waynesboro. Miss Bufkin, of Vossburg, responded in a most earnest manner, assuring them of our appreciation of such kindness and hospitality. Then came the address of our district secretary, Miss Sallie Smiley. To say that it was good would but faintly convey the idea of what it was. She spoke beautifully of woman's work, and urged us on to greater things in the future. Miss Evie Dunlap then came forward, looking as if she had just come from China, and sang "Over the Ocean Wave." She was so childlike, and yet graceful, that everyone present felt fully paid for going, if only to hear her sweet voice.

Sunday, at eleven A. M., Dr. Evans entertained the congregation for fully forty minutes. His sermon was "full and complete," and enjoyed by all. At 3:30 P. M. the ladies had a love-feast, and it was, indeed, "good to be there." One talk was especially interesting and soul-inspiring, from Mrs. Williams, who, in a sweet, Christ-like way, told how the Savior had led and guided her for nearly eighty-six years. How it then warmed our hearts to sing,

"E'en down to old age all my people shall prove Thy sovereign, eternal, unchangeable love."

Sunday evening, at half-past seven, we engaged in a Bible reading—subject, "Letting Your Light Shine," after which Miss Lucy Andrews gave us a recitation in a most bewitching and elegant way, making everyone to feel that her whole soul was in the poem, after which Mrs. Penn rendered a solo in a charming manner. The entire congregation then joined in singing "The Crowning Day." Dr. Evans pronounced the benediction.

Our meeting at Waynesboro will always be a bright jewel stowed away in memory's casket. Each of us delegates know that we had the best home, and we not only had a delightful social time, but our meetings were a spiritual blessing to each of us.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt thanks to the good people of Waynesboro for their kindness and hospitality shown the delegates and visitors to the district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society during our stay among them. May Heaven's benedictions be upon them!

Easter Christianity.

To the apostles every Sunday was an Easter Sunday. The resurrection of their Lord was too recent an event, and too large a one for them to await the circling year for its celebration; the return of their Lord was a hope too high, an anticipation too immediate to allow twelve months to intervene between the days of joyful prophecy. So memory and hope combined to make every first day of the week an Easter, and so to transform the day of rest into a day of life.

But to the apostles, especially to Paul, it was more than a monumental memory and a prophetic hope; it was a constantly recurring symbol of spiritual life. The physical fact of Christ's death might well have been less to Paul than to those who had walked the village streets and sailed the Galilean lake with him; and even the physical fact of his resurrection less than to those who had seen their sun set in blood and tears, with no hope of its rising on the morrow. Certain it is that to Paul the material fact was less than the spiritual verity; the truth of history less than the truth of spiritual life; the resurrection, achieved once for all, less than the perpetual resurrection which it symbolized. To Paul all history was allegorical, as to Christ all nature was parabolic. The story even of Christ's life was like Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," beautiful for itself, but yet more beautiful for the meaning hidden beneath it. Death in its highest sense was but a calm indifference to all things sensual and earthly; resurrection in its highest sense was the advent of an enfranchised soul into a new life of invincible immortality. The death of Christ was only the natural culmination of a life which had been throughout a death to the world, and his resurrection was only the assured expression of a divine life which from baptism to Golgotha had been in heaven. So, while Paul emphasizes the historical fact of the resurrection in a single eloquent chapter, he emphasizes in repeated utterances the spiritual fact which that historical resurrection expressed to the eye and the understanding. We are buried with Christ in baptism; our old man is crucified with him; I count all things but lost that I may be made conformable unto his death; we are dead, and our life is hid with God in Christ; we are crucified with Christ; the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world—this is Paul's Good Friday. Dead unto sin, but alive unto God, through our Lord Jesus Christ; risen with Christ, and, therefore, seeking those things which are above where Christ sitteth; having our conversation in heaven; dead, yet living, because Christ, the risen Christ, liveth in me—risen? rather rising, following after him daily, if by any means I may attain unto the resurrection of the dead—this is Paul's Easter Sunday.

Christianity, as taught by Christ, as taught by Paul, is neither ritual nor dogma. All forms and observances are but the natural expressions of the inward life; all creeds and confessions are but the tools that help or hinder its free and full development. Christianity is a new created world, springing up at God's command; a pilgrimage out of an old land of bondage into a new land of liberty; a birth out of a happily forgotten darkness of the past into the freedom of the Father's home and the inspiration of the Father's love; a death to the old life, a resurrection into a new and immortal life—the life of God in the soul of man.

I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loves me and gave himself for me. Look to Easter reverently, as to the most sacred of all monumental days, the day that points backward to the sacred attestation of invincible immortality; hopefully, as to the most sacred of all prophets, the day that points upward and forward to a risen and a returning Christ; but above all joyfully, as to the sublimest of all sacred symbols, the day that points inward to the soul's resurrection, the power of a divine life hid with Christ in God, that when he doth appear we shall appear with him in glory.—The Pulpit.

The soul and body are as strings of two musical instruments, set exactly at one height; if one be touched, the other trembles. They laugh and cry, are sick and well together.—Flavel.

THE HELP THAT COMES TOO LATE

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

'Tis a wearisome world, this world of ours,
With its tangles small and great,
Its weeds that smother the springing flowers,
And its hapless strifes with fate,
But the darkest day of its desolate days
Sees the help that comes too late.

Ah! woe for the word that is never said
Till the ear is deaf to hear,
And woe for the lack to the faluting head
Of the ringing shout of cheer;
Ah! woe for the laggard feet that tread
In the mournful wake of the bier.

What booteth help when the heart is numb?
What booteth a broken spar
Of love thrown out when the lips are dumb,
And life's barque drifteth far,
Oh! far and fast from the alien past,
Over the moaning bar?

A pitiful thing the gift to-day
That is dross and nothing worth,
Though if it had come but yesterday
It had brimmed with sweet the earth.
A fading rose in a death-cold hand,
That perished in want and dearth.

Who fain would help in this world of ours,
Where sorrowful steps must fall,
Bring help in time to the waning powers
Ere the bier is spread with the pall;
Nor send reserves when the flags are furled,
And the dead beyond your call.

For bafiling most in this dreary world,
With its tangles small and great,
Its lonesome nights and its weary days,
And its struggles forlorn with fate,
Is that bitterest grief, too deep for tears,
Of the help that comes too late.

Is the Devil Black?—No. 2.

BY JULIEN C. BROWN, D. D.

In a former article we endeavored to establish the position that it was not avarice which led Judas to betray his Master. In this view DeQuincy concurs and is endorsed by Dr. Chas. F. Deems, of New York, when he says: "He (Judas) may have had some self-seeking in all that he did, but not base treachery and certainly not petty avarice." . . . Without summarizing the argument of the former article, we insist that the charge of avarice as the controlling motive in his conduct has fallen for lack of both common and biblical evidence. And now, to find the true motive which lay as a silent, but intense secret in his bosom, and which finally prompted to his desperate action, must be our object. In determining this we must understand something of the spirit of the times which preceded and existed in Iscariot's day. Through long and dolorous years of submission and slavery, sorrows and sighings, blood and battles, the Israelitish people had been hoping and praying for the advent of their Messiah and the re-establishment of a Hebrew kingdom. Herod sat on the throne of Judea, and Augustus in Rome ruled in the palace of the Cæsars. At this time strange portents were in the air—signs in the heavens above and in the earth beneath—rabbis whispering of fulfilled prophecies—wise men expecting the culmination of remarkable events, and the public mind feverish and excited, while all eyes were looking and all ears listening for some new apparition or voice to move upon the world. Hope had been "long deferred," and the agonizing wail, "How long, oh Lord, how long!" was bursting with more than common force from sickened hearts, when on the frosty air of an early morn there broke over the Judean hills the glad heraldic cry of the Savior's birth. From infancy to youthhood, manhood, and then, the beginning of his ministry was quiet, but intensely serious. Miracles began to attest his divinity and attract a race of beggars, slaves and sick people, while his solemnly grand words fell upon their listening hearts as tones of music from another world, inspiring hope, reviving memories and awakening visions of their former glory as the "chosen people" of God. The days lengthened into months and the months into years while the influence, popularity and power of the wonderful Teacher and Healer increased. The oppressed millions began looking upon him indeed as the long-expected Deliverer, and felt assured that it must be he who "should redeem Israel." Knowing that David's blood ran in pure unsullied currents through his veins, and that a more than mortal voice spoke in his words of matchless wisdom, the people were quick enough to believe in the return of ancestral glory and the re-establishment of a Hebrew supremacy. His personal staff of twelve men, Judas among the number, who were admitted to companionship and the privacy of his quiet hours, shared, of course, in the popular belief and common expectation. So strong was their conviction that the kingdom would be established that it led to quarrelings among themselves as to who should stand highest in the Master's favor when he assumed the crown. In their controversy they involved even the good women. A loving, but ambitious mother was sent, perhaps at the suggestion of her sons, James and John, to ask of Christ that one might be exalted to his right and the other to his left hand in the new kingdom. Observe here—it was this same John who later called Judas a thief, and it was he and his brother who proposed to call down fire from heaven to consume the inhabitants of two Samaritan villages. If Judas was ever possessed of so diabolical a spirit as that, no mention is made of it, and we are tempted to believe him a better man than the one who so violently charged him with dishonesty. That Judas shared in the ambitious views of his brethren relative to the setting up of a temporal throne there can be little doubt. He was a Jew in every drop of his red blood. The tender memories of a holy past as connected with Jerusalem, the "Queen City of the Hills"—recollections of a long line of illustrious kings who poured lustre on Hebrew intellect, and heroic warriors who shed glory on Hebrew arms, mingled with sacred traditions and historic proofs of Jehovah's special and divine love, all fed the race pride of the son of Kerioth and stimulated the highest ambitions for the future of his people. In this perdonable pride and vaulting ambition we think is found the motive which actuated his every step and culminated at last in the wretched betrayal. Place and preferment were as a "burning bush," planted on holy, sacred and secret ground in his heart, always on fire, but never consumed. As the little band would follow Christ over the Palestine hills from village to village, watching with growing interest his increasing favor among the tribes of herdy toilers and busy traffickers, or marking with quiet joy the fiery enthusiasm of the thronging multitudes of all classes and conditions, it must often have been matter of impatient wonder with Judas why his Master did not assume at once his royal crown and announce to the people his kingly right. But so it was, Christ did not. By patient attentiveness, though with ill success, he sought to impress upon all that his kingdom was "not of this world." Their heads were thick and their hearts were sordid. The spirit light which glanced from his eye and the unearthly music which fell from his lips had no answering flash in their darkened minds and no responsive tone in their carnal affections. To the seaside they came by thousands—the Temple and synagogues were filled till they trod one upon another—on the mountain they gathered in dense masses to listen with expectancy to his spiritual truths or to shout and go wild with joy over his material miracles. Almighty is his influence with the people, and his power is omnipotent. Why then, thought Judas and the other disciples, why then does he not declare himself, why does he not end this long suspense and put a stop to this cruel waiting? Time went by. Plots against the life of Christ were thickening. Enemies were becoming bolder and more numerous. The people were beginning to despair of the kingdom and to doubt if Jesus would be their king. Perhaps throughout the land low mutterings of discontent were heard. Judas has become more impatient than anyone. As opportunities for the fulfillment of his most cherished plans and ardent wishes are let slip by the Master, he grows more restless and discontented. Time and again the temper of the public has invited and occasions have been auspicious, but still the Messiah moves on with quiet dignity, bestowing no thought upon the denouement so devoutly prayed for by his ambitious followers. Once they would have taken him by force and made him king, but he disappeared out of their hands and departed into a mountain alone.

Palm Sunday is at hand. The Jews are flocking to the feast at Jerusalem by the tens of thousands. The holy city is crowded with near three millions of eager pilgrims and pious worshipers. They hear that Jesus is coming to the city. Gathering up palm branches, they go forth to meet and escort him to the Temple. The people are wild with enthusiasm and crazed with joy. They have found their king and the entry is grand and triumphal. Alas! that their hopes should be blasted and their expectation disappointed. But so it was. Contrary to their earnest purpose, he again refused the advantage offered by the general enthusiasm and allowed the popular clamor to expend itself in boisterous praise and noisy hosannas. Poor Judas saw it all, and the last hope died within him. For three years he had faithfully followed the Christ in momentary expectation of his accession to regal power; and now with three millions of jubilant people to support the claim and a great nation ready to rise in revolt and shed their blood if need be in defense of his cause, the honor is declined and the kingship rejected. With the idea in his mind still uppermost that the kingdom of Christ is to be temporal, the decision of Judas is taken. The dilatory actions of the Master, if not his absolute indifference, not only surprises and disappoints his towering ambition, but suggests to his worldly-wise and astute political mind the thought of precipitating events and forcing the Savior to accept his destiny. He reasons in this way: Three years have now gone by—the people want a king and have offered the crown to Christ on more than one occasion—myself and brethren deserve some recognition for our three years of devotion and faithful service—there is a fitness, and since he will not of his own accord, we must compel him to ascend the throne of David—now is our highest opportunity while Jerusalem is crowded with three millions of ready subjects—I will precipitate the movement by betraying him to his enemies for any sum, large or small—they will arrest, but can not hold or harm him—I know he is powerful enough to defend himself and us—we have seen him raise the dead, still storms upon the seas, feed five thousand and more people on two loaves of bread and five little fishes, have seen him heal hundreds of the lame and sick by a word and even turn water into wine—he will scatter, strike dumb or dead his enemies by a breath of his mouth or a wave of his hand—the kingdom will be set up, and I particularly will be rewarded with place and preferment for my special service. . . . This chain of thought to the mind of Judas was conclusive, and immediately he set about his work, perhaps with more alacrity because of Christ's own words, "What thou doest do quickly." To consider the moral complexion of the betrayal, its right or wrong, he had no time. His ambitious eye was fastened alone upon the results to follow. The sale and delivery was soon effected and the trial begun. How terrible must have been the alternating states of hope and fear, agony and despair, desire and dread which moved the heart of Judas during those dark hours of the Master's arraignment, no one can ever know. That every act of the insulting mob, every move of the vindictive accusers and every decision of the cowardly judge was well known to him we can easily believe. It soon, however, became evident to him that his plan had failed. The quiet and silent demeanor of the Son of God who "opened not his mouth," nor raised his hand to strike dead his enemies, was conclusive proof that his own prophetic words concerning his death were certain of fulfillment. Judas sees clearly that everything is lost. The Lord whom he loved so tenderly, and for whose elevation to royal dignity he had so earnestly planned, would submit to die. For him now there is nothing more to live for—no hope, no future. With every ambition of his life hopelessly crushed out, with every expectation and desire disappointed, and with the added agonizing consciousness of having connived at the judicial murder of the best friend he had ever known, what could he do now but go and die? Grief, despair, sorrow, humiliation overwhelmed him and he died, the victim of a misguided and ill-judged ambition. Has he not had his counterpart in thousands of men since that ill-fated day?

The Influence of Literature on the Church, and the Importance of Colportage.

[This paper was read before the Preachers' Institute of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, and by resolution of that body sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.]

I.—THE INFLUENCE OF LITERATURE ON THE CHURCH.

1. It is conservative, gives stability to thought, and is the safeguard against fanaticism. A church without a literature would be like a balloon given to the winds without ballast, subject to roll and drift in every breeze, or be driven to destruction by every storm. The dignified and circumspect conservatism of the Presbyterian Church is largely due to a rich church literature. To a similar source may be traced the impregnable stability of Romanism. The great body of either of these old, historic churches, on account of church culture, is not easily swayed from its moorings. While small fragments may be thrown off, ever and anon, by the living forces of thought, the churches are largely free from fatal schism.

The greatest blessing of Methodism, next to converting grace, was the rise of literature simultaneously with the organization of the church. This is the sheet anchor which has held her safe in every adverse wind, and has enabled her to weather every storm. Through the wisdom of Providence, when England was visited with an unprecedented revival, there was gathered in it a coterie of sanctified intellects such as no other age had witnessed. John Wesley, the graceful scholar, the profound thinker, the great organizer; Charles Wesley, the theological poet of the ages; Watson, the theologian; Clark, the commentator; Fletcher, the sweet-spirited controversialist—these, and others, gave to Methodism at her very birth a culture which commanded the respect of that age, and will be the wonder of all ages. A church and a literature were born in a day.

2. Literature is stimulating and invigorating; promotes health and growth. It is itself a thing of growth. A growing church must have living, growing thought. A church whose thinking stops or crystallizes with any age loses its usefulness for all succeeding ages. A growing literature gathers up and sets in order the thoughts and feelings of each successive age, adding them to the already accumulated stock of mental treasures. Thus the seed-thoughts and the seed-bed from which the civilization of the future is to be developed grow richer from age to age.

3. Methodism has a noble literature, both periodical and book; one calculated to promote thought, deepen piety, and sanctify effort to the best ends and purposes of life. It is, as it should be, broad, liberal, strong, and Methodistic. It is constantly improving, and tends to make sanctified Christians and intelligent Methodists.

4. Our books and periodicals should be circulated among our people. This is of the very first importance. The people called Methodists can not be healthy and strong as such without Methodist reading. We would by no means have our people sectarian, but they should be denominational. We would have them drink deeply of the great current of modern thought, and then be so imbued with the literature of their church as to make all their learning subservient to the important enterprises of our Zion. Our people can not be carried by a robust and healthy faith into the activities of the church without reading our literature.

II.—OUR DUTY TO OUR COLPORTER.

1. After trying other methods, our church is now adopting colportage as the best means of bringing our publications into the homes of our people. In the early days of Methodism in this country all itinerant preachers were colporters. That was a very effective way of distributing our books. But this is no longer practicable. A division of labor is now demanded. A thorough system of colportage would now be the most effective method of distributing our books and periodicals.

2. Our colporter is doing an integral and important part of the work of the ministry in our church, to which he has received a regular and legitimate appointment. His is a work which requires the co-operation of all the pastors. He is to do his work in their fields of labor. A brotherly welcome and hearty co-operation when he comes into our respective charges will greatly aid him in his labors.

W. S. HARRISON.

The Minutes, and Some Suggestions.

The Minutes of the Louisiana Conference, while a little late, have come out in good style, and the secretary deserves our thanks for his painstaking fidelity in their make-up.

Would it not be better to have more copies printed? I suppose about two thousand copies are sent out, which is about two-fifths the number we ought to have in order to put one copy in each family in the church within our Conference bounds. If we need the Minutes published at all, we need enough to meet the demand.

I have another suggestion, which seems to me of some importance, although it will bring about some radical changes in our statistical reporting methods. I would suggest that the statistical secretary have nothing to do with any financial tables, but that his labors be confined to the items of membership, baptisms, Sunday-school statistics, church property, etc. Let all financial items be reported through the respective Boards. For instance, ministerial support items, including Conference claimants and Bishops' funds, can be reported through the Joint Board. The Board of Missions can furnish the figures on that subject, the Church Extension Board its figures, and so on through the list. It seems to me that the furnishing of statistics is the legitimate work of these Boards.

There are advantages to be derived from this method. The first one is to economize labor. It would lighten the labor of the statistical secretary, and these Boards do not have their labors increased thereby, for they must keep their own statistics anyway. In the next place, it would make our Minutes more intelligible and easy of reference. We would do away with that cumbersome extension page. The Boards could make their exhibits on a single page table, the reference would be easy, and there would be no useless repetitions.

More important than all, there would not be those ugly discrepancies between the footings of the statistical tables and our treasurer's reports. There is no question that brethren report to the statistical secretary every year moneys collected which they do not report to the Boards. This is done inadvertently, no doubt, but it does not look well all the same. And to secure more perfect accuracy and avoid all possible mistakes, it would not be amiss for the secretary to furnish the Boards with blank receipts, so that every preacher would have his own showing for the moneys he has paid in.

I make these suggestions in the hope they may lead to better methods in our Conference reporting. If this plan is not good, suggest a better. If it is good, why not adopt it?

"Dancing for the Church."

We were startled by the heading, "Dancing for the Church," in the last issue of our dear ADVOCATE. We had heard of devices not a few, and some very questionable devices for promoting the temporal interests of the church, but this caps the climax. And as it is a new departure, and has been heralded abroad with considerable eclat, it will, perhaps, become prevalent. First in the denomination in which it originated, and then, if successful, the disease will spread like a cholera epidemic, which confines itself to no zone, color nor people. We say, perhaps. In view of the possibility of this, we pause and ask, Whither may we drift? It has been a matter of surprise to us for years why amidst the advance of civilization and enlightenment and spread of Christianity, that balls retain their popularity and are in such general use. Bishop Pierce in his published sermon, entitled, "The World in the Church," expresses our mind fully. Speaking of dancing, he says: "I confess I have no patience with it, no toleration of it. I think it the silliest, most nonsensical amusement that rational beings, so-called, ever engaged in. It is heathenish in its origin, a pastime of savages. It is a part of idolatrous worship—lewd, sensual, obscene. This is its history. I confess to no little humiliation that our weddings, dinners, etc., for friends and visitors are so many of them degraded by this heathenish, idolatrous, barbarian pastime. It is a reflection upon our intelligence—as if we could not be polite and entertaining without a hop."

It is strange, yet not so very strange, when we consider that we never have a governor, in this State at least, nor a man to preside over this land of the free and home of the brave, this proud Christian nation, without the concurrent inaugural ball. No matter who he is or to what church he may belong, or how much he may be opposed to such entertainments when at home, when he is elected and goes to Baton Rouge or Washington City, in accordance with a time-honored custom, he submits with due deference to the inaugural ball, costing the government hundreds of thousands of dollars. The example is set by our State and National governments, and as long as this custom exists, we may not be surprised that balls and dancing are popular with worldly people in and out of the church. To change the minds of the masses upon this subject, the change should begin at headquarters. When will such reform begin? We answer, Not before the people demand it. Do we, as ministers and laymen, boldly condemn this custom at the inauguration of our governors and presidents? Is it our duty to do so? If not, whose duty is it? H. ARMSTRONG.

Evangelists.

I consider this question to be timely and of vital importance; and, as a church that is alive and not dead, that is awake to the demands of the nineteenth century, we have this question confronting us. To act upon it is gain; delay is loss and very dangerous. We have the evangelists among us; they are here, and the question is, What shall we do with them? We see them passing to and fro as a blazing comet, all aflame with the love of God, and jealous of the souls of men, laboring day and night for the salvation of sinners. Their labors are approved of God through the ingathering of souls; and shall we rise up against this host of God, and, as a church, put them to silence, or hamper their usefulness by confining their labors to a modern circuit or station, when God says to them to move forward, not as pastor, but as evangelist?

I see in the ADVOCATE, of March 9, from the pen of "Gilderoy," this language, "Certainly the apostles knew nothing of evangelists as we have them now." Why not? We find that Webster defines the word, "evangelist," first, "One who preaches the gospel;" second, "A preacher or publisher of the gospel of Jesus Christ, licensed to preach, but not having charge of a particular church."

It's an undisputable fact that all true expounders of the gospel of Christ, from his day to the present time, are of the first; and none the less true, from his day until this men of the second class referred to have and do exist. Then are we to infer the method to be the issue in question? To this I agree, and consider it to be a question of the most vital importance, and the reason why we, as a church, should take action, assign them a place in the church as evangelist, regulating, as far as practical, their method of work, thereby retain our men, the integrity of our church, harmonize the discord, perpetuate purity and advance the cause of Christ by the ingathering of souls, and through this system build up and strengthen our Methodism.

Yours for peace, harmony and prosperity, CHAS. R. MONTGOMERY.

Note from Dr. Carradine.

MR. EDITOR: There has appeared recently in a number of prominent secular journals a statement that it has been the custom of some young people to dance and waltz in one of the side-rooms in First Church while the organ was playing during the hour of worship. My stewards meet to-night to decide whether they will publicly deny this slander through the press, or patiently endure this additional one out of many untrue statements made in regard to us. Letters received this week from Ohio and Louisiana have decided me to request you please to state for the satisfaction of my friends in the South that no such thing, or anything like it, has ever occurred. My audience is a large one, with every seat occupied and with the five aisles lined with chairs; but a more orderly and quiet congregation I never addressed. A mole-hill of an occurrence in the vestibule one Sunday evening has been magnified into a mountain by the imagination of one excited individual and the fertile fancies of three or four youthful reporters.

I have just concluded a wonderful five weeks' revival season in First Church. This is the third great protracted meeting I have held since my arrival in St. Louis. We had fully three hundred people converted, reclaimed and sanctified. Every morning service was a Pentecost.

This will be my last year in the pastorate. God's call is upon me to become an evangelist. At the next meeting of the St. Louis Conference I shall sever a relation that has been tender, delightful and heaven-blessed, and enter upon a new work for which Christ has been fitting me and to which he is now calling me. Yours "in his real,"

B. CARRADINE.

Woman's Work.

Let us, by unceasing, prayerful efforts, roll away the stones from dead auxiliaries, instill new life into existing ones, prepare for and observe the appointed "Easter service" more grandly than ever before.

Oh, that every church would comply with this request of the Woman's Board of Missions—if it be only a prayer and praise service with a collection—which has given the collections of that day to the Scarritt Bible and Training-school; the result of the joint action of that Board and the Parent Board of Missions selecting "Easter as Woman's Day—a day when the work of the Woman's Board of Missions shall be presented to the whole church by special services and collections. . . . If any individual church can not hold the services on Easter, let the next Sunday thereafter that is practicable be observed."

Individual consecration and culture is the pressing demand. Oh, for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon each individual who bears the name of Christ; then shall we arise from our deadness, and prove unmistakably, as he did, that we are alive! Then the great stone—the missionary debt—will not only crumble, but cease to be.

Agents for the Woman's Missionary Advocate and the Little Worker should improve this opportunity whilst the waters are being troubled, for ignorance of our work is another hindering stone. The distribution of missionary literature on and prior to the day would be helpful. Many old leaflets could be resurrected, for they would be new to those who have not read them. Let every member strive to add, at least, one new member to the society. Leave no stone unturned beneath which there is life.

We are to work out our "own salvation with fear and trembling." Are not our idols as heinous in the sight of our gracious heavenly Father as those who have not had the blessed privileges of our glorious gospel?

May we all be prepared to receive the sacred message, and have the power to go and tell it, that it may resurrect dead souls, remembering that woman who, after having first seen the risen Lord, received the commission to "go tell" the glad news! Shall we, at this advanced age, be "disobedient to the heavenly vision?"

We trust that secretaries will forward reports after the Easter service to MRS. E. D. JONES.

Carlisle, Miss.

Let us all carry with us, deeply stamped upon our hearts and minds, a sense of shame for the great plague of drunkenness which goes through the land, sapping and undermining character, breaking up the peace of families, oftentimes choosing for its victims, not the men or the women originally the worst, but persons of strong social susceptibility, and open, in special respects, to temptation. This great plague and curse, gentlemen, let us all remember, is a national curse, calamity, and scandal."—Gladstone.

If you wish to set up for a first-class horo, get a grievance, no matter how small at first, for it will grow larger every time you tell it; then be sure to give it an airing whenever you can find half a chance. Herp upon it industriously, and you will succeed before long in making yourself thoroughly miserable, and disturbing the peace of everybody about you. It is an excellent recipe, and was never known to fail. Try it!—Zion's Herald.

INTRODUCTORY.

TIME.—Two dates are involved in the lessons on Job: (1) The date of the author of the poem and (2) the date of Job's life. Both are very uncertain, and the only thing to be done is to decide upon the most probable of the varying theories of biblical scholars. (1) As to the time of the author of the book, some have placed it as early as the time of Moses, and others as late as the Babylonian captivity. It seems not improbable that the book was composed between the captivity of the ten tribes (721 B. C.) and the captivity of the two tribes (588 B. C.). (2) As to the time of Job's life, the same diverse speculation is to be found. Let us decide, as not improbable, that Job lived at the time of—or shortly before—the writing of the book, and was personally known to the author.

PERSONS.—As in the case of the time, two persons are conspicuous: (1) The author, and (2) the hero of the poem. The former is unnamed and unknown. The widest research has failed to throw any light upon the subject. The latter we know only by name. That he was a real person does not, I think, admit of reasonable doubt.

PLACE.—The exact location of "the land of Uz" is almost as uncertain as the time and persons, although we can locate it in general as the northern part of the Arabian desert and east of Palestine.

THE BOOK.—The book is a poem of exquisite beauty, having somewhat the character of an epic, and somewhat the character of a dramatic poem. It records the sufferings and triumphs of a righteous man, and consists, in most part, of dialogues between the hero and his friends. It is a vindication of the ways of God to man, grappling with the great problem of the existence of evil, and proving for all time that suffering and adversity are not indications of God's anger. It raises the divine sanctions above the mere afflictions of the body, and is a step in the direction of Him who said: "Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents, that he was born blind." (John ix, 3.) We must bear in mind that the book is a poem, and not a literal biography; that while the name, character and experiences of the hero were real, the divinely inspired imagination of the poet has painted the character and scenes with ideal beauty.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—SATAN BEFORE THE LORD.

Ver. 1. "Again there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord." We have given us here the second scene in heaven; the angels, those spiritual beings created before the world was formed, came, as if periodically summoned into the divine presence, to give an account of their work. "Satan came also." "Though malignant and evil, this spirit is evidently counted among the angels by origin and nature. He comes among them as one of their order. His presence is evidently expected and realized. Like them, he has to give an account of what he has observed." (Cook.) From this verse we may learn that good and evil spirits exist, and that the latter, as well as the former, are under divine control. Their power is finite, the activities are limited, and all they do is done by the permission of him who is Lord over all.

Ver. 2. "From whence cometh thou?" We have here a repetition of the question given in chapter i, verse 7. We are not to understand the question to imply a want of information, but rather as an exhibition of divine authority, and a command to Satan to give an account of his doings. The answer seems sullen and evasive—possibly petulant. I find here no spirit of conscious pride as if the earth were his peculiar dominion, but rather a sullen confession of having observed the limitation to which he had been subjected.

Ver. 3. "Hast thou considered my servant Job?" This is the question of chapter i, verse 8. The perfection of Job is the ideal of the poet, and should not, I think, be understood as actually existing in the character of the patriarch whose life and character form the basis of the poem. The author is not discussing sanctification, but the problem of sin and suffering. "And still he holdeth fast his integrity." The unwavering faith and steadfast integrity of the sufferer vindicate the high praise of the Lord and demonstrate the slander of the adversary.

Ver. 4. "Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life." The first part of his answer is a proverbial expression, difficult of literal interpretation, but plain enough in its general meaning, and is made clear by the latter part of the answer.

Ver. 5. "But put forth thy hand now and touch his bone and his flesh." The malignant accuser refuses to accept the result of his own test. With sullen obstinacy or malevolent scorn he belittles his own former efforts, and proposes a severer trial of the good man's piety. Only his property, only his circumstances have been affected; I have not been allowed to touch him. Let his body be afflicted, let life itself be made miserable, and his piety will be forgotten and he will curse thee to thy face.

Ver. 6. "Behold he is in thine hand, but save his life." Even this test will be allowed, but touch not his life. The divine permission is granted and accepted; the divine limitation commanded and acknowledged.

II.—SATAN AFFLICTS JOB.

Ver. 7. "So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord." The desired permission granted, the adversary proceeds to the accomplishment of his malicious purposes. "Smote Job with sore boils." Commentators are not agreed as to the diagnosis of Job's case. Some say it was a form of leprosy; others suggest small-pox. The Hebrew means literally a burning sore. Painful and repulsive ulcers covered his body.

Ver. 8. "And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal." Utterly humiliated and utterly miserable, the good man leaves his home and, sitting down in the dust and ashes, scratches his itching and festering body with the fragment of a broken pot.

Ver. 9. "Dost thou still retain thine integrity? Curse God and die." Benson says Satan had spared Job's wife, "that she might be a trouble and tempter to him," and he certainly seems to have left the case in her hands. The wife who should have been a source of encouragement to him rebukes his faith and tempts him to blasphemy.

Ver. 10. "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh." The nobility of his character is strongly brought out in the calm dignity and unmoved patience with which he reproves the petulant and wicked suggestion and declares his unshaken confidence in God. "Shall we receive good at the hands of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil?" We have received good fortune at God's hands, now when adversity comes, shall we not accept it without murmuring?

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. God is not indifferent to the acts of angels and men. He, before whom the angels presented themselves, will judge also the works of men. (Verse 1.)

2. It is pleasant to believe that the wicked as well as the righteous are under God's control; the former, indeed, unwillingly and the latter gladly; but both really. (Verse 2.)

3. Satan may or may not have considered Job; but no faithful child of God ever escapes our Father's eye. (Verse 3.)

4. Satan had no conception of a loyalty to God that would gladly lay down life for his sake. (Verse 4.)

5. Satan is not God's rival, but God's servant. His power to hurt us is dependent upon God's will. (Verse 6.)

6. Job was better than his wife—a rather unusual state of things and a very unfortunate one. (Verse 9.)

7. If it were a commercial transaction, and we paid for what we received from God, we might complain; but when all we have is a gracious gift of God, and when God's desire is our good, shall we murmur at our lot? (Verse 10.)

W. Gunsaulus, D. D.

The Conqueror.

But all kings of earth have sought to leave something to mark their sovereignty, to give their regency distinction in history; and Jesus Christ is King of kings because of what he does for his people. Peter the Great builded the immense ditches in Russia, William of Orange stood there upon the edge of old Holland, and said: "Let us level the dykes, give Holland back to the ocean that it should be free." Cromwell, in his commonwealth, could humiliate Spain and the Duke of Savoy, and the Charles' and Henrys and Edwards have all of them sought distinction by some great act of kingship. All the way through the history of kings there has been one foe before which every one of them has stood bewildered, and then terrified, and then silent; that foe is death. He has knocked at the door of the cottager with the same courtesy that he knocks at the door of kings; he has come shambling his way along royal palaces with the same effrontery and arrogance with which he has gone down some wooded lane toward some little place where the thatched roof hid the head from storm. He has sought out kings and gone on scorning kings and thrones and crowns; kings have learned that death is the king of terrors. Charlemagne and Alfred, Charles the First, great souls of the world on thrones, have bowed before him. Through all the ages up to that moment of that hour of crucifixion, through its darkness in the midst of the awful three days of midnight that followed it, death was king of terrors; but Jesus Christ our Lord met death in his citadel, found him in his own place, the grave, saw him close to his own throne crowned and sceptered. For three days that awful contest went on until at last, Mary, in the morning, found her way to an open tomb; angels were there and they told her, "He is not here, he is risen," and from that hour to this, and on through the ages, as it will be, that king of terrors has been a conquered king, and by the power of Christ to every soul who believes in the name of Jesus death is not; his empire is vacated; his crown is lost, and his sceptre is forever broken.—F. W. Gunsaulus, D. D.

Among the April Magazines.

MOTHERHOOD is a new monthly devoted to the interests of mothers. The following articles appear: The Physical Culture of Children, by Miss Christine Terhune Herrick; The Art of Story Telling, by Miss Nora A. Smith; Baby's Corner; Dressing Our Daughters; Thoughts for Mothers; Editorial, etc. Motherhood Publishing Company, New York. Price, $1.

THE MAGAZINE OF ART is a splendid number. The history of The National Gallery of British Art is of intense interest both as to matter and illustrations. It is by M. H. Spielman. Another paper of interest is The Home-life of John Leech, by Henry Silver. The other articles are: Formal Gardens, Indian Metal Work Exhibition at the Imperial Institute, by Sir George Birdwood; and Our Illustrated Note Book. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $3.50.

THE QUIVER, published by Cassell Publishing Company, New York, for the low price of $1 50 a year, is usually the first of the monthlies to reach our desk, and is always heartily welcomed. The April number contains the beginning of a new serial, The Wisdom of Alice, by Edith Lister, and continues The Wilful Willoughbys, by Evelyn Everett Green. These stories are excellently pure in thought and language. Among other articles of interest we mention: The Stone Rolled Away, by Rev. W. P. Walsh, Bishop of Ossory; New Lights on the Sacred Story, by Rev. R. P. Smith, Dean of Canterbury; Character, by Rev. W. M. Johnston; Last Words of Noted People, by the author of How to Be Happy; A Children's Sermon, by Rev. J. R. Macduff, D. D.; Scripture Lessons for School and Home; Short Arrows, etc. We regard this monthly as one of great value in the home. It is a great favorite in the editor's family circle.

WORTHINGTON'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE comes to hand with a generous supply of good things for the entertainment of its rapidly growing circle of readers. The April number of this vigorous young magazine is the best that has yet been published, its table of contents showing great diversity of material and a most excellent list of contributors. The interest and value of its leading articles, the exceptional literary quality of its stories, poems, and department matter, are admirably supplemented by fine press work and artistic illustrations which make this number as attractive as it is readable. The chief articles are: American Warships of To-day, by S. G. W. Benjamin; The Glaciers of Alaska, by Prof. G. F. Wright; In "Ole Virginny" Fifty Years Ago, by Mary A. Livermore; Did Shakespeare Write Bacon's Works? by Arthur Dudley Vinton. A. D. Worthington & Co., Hartford, Conn. Price, $2 50.

THE MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD opens up with two interesting articles on India. The first, by Prof. T. M. Lindsey, of Glasgow, Scotland, on Brahmanism, Past and Present, is the first of a series on that subject. It demonstrates that the "arm-chair" Hinduism expounded by theorists is very different from the practical idolatrous form of worship of India. The second, on India of To-day, by Rev. James Johnston, is chiefly statistical, and shows that the barbarous customs of self-immolation of widows, female infanticide, etc., are fast being swept away. Other articles in the Department of Literature of Missions are: Something about the Pwos, by Rev. L. W. Cronkhite, Bassein, Burma; The End of a Mormon Delusion, by Rev D. L. Leonard; At a Missionary's Grave, some reflections by the Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., on Rev. David Brainerd; Third Decennial Conference—India, by Rev. Homer C. Stuntz, Nalnee Tal, India. The other departments, Interrational. Christian Endeavor, Editorial, Monthly Concert of Missions, and General Missionary Intelligence are full of timely discussions. Published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York, N. Y., at $2 per year.

"Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."

"Christ the first fruits." The first fruits and the harvest are alike. "Who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his own glorious body."

"Christ's resurrection proved that he was the Son of God; that God approved of his work on earth; that there is a life beyond the grave; that we have a living Savior, and that we shall be raised, see him, know him, know each other and have blessed communion together."

There is not the faintest shadow of a doubt in all that wonderful fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. There is no hesitation of speech, no tremor of voice. One spirit pervades it from beginning to close, and that is the spirit of triumphant assurance shouting its pean of praise: "Thanks be unto God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The latest invention is the telautograph. It has been perfected by Prof. Elisha Gray, and is an instrument which connected with the telegraph wire enables a person to transmit instantaneously a fac-simile of his handwriting or sketching. You do your writing at your end of the wire, and it immediately appears at the other end. It will work a revolution in some business methods.

Another thing which promises to work a change is the use of the pneumatic tube for sending letters and packages. At a recent trial in Philadelphia a Bible, wrapped in the United States flag, was sent a distance of one-half mile in one minute and three seconds, under a pressure of six pounds to the square inch. Verily, we shall soon have the flying machines.

We have received from L. Prang and Company, Boston, a package of samples of their Easter publications, consisting of cards, satin art prints, art novelties and booklets. The refined taste, chaste and delicate designs, and appropriate selections which characterize these productions will surely secure for them popular favor. Their beauty and richness and variety speak in high praise of the skill and inventiveness of this popular house.

As far as the modern pulpit goes, the pleading power is lost. The teacher has taken the place of the advocate. This has entailed a loss, and, no doubt, accounts largely for the falling off in our congregations. The people like a pleader in the pulpit. Among the many sayings of the late Marmaduke Miller, which I treasure, is one he gave me in passing criticism on a sermon of mine; it was this, "Never sacrifice your application." Some modern preachers have done this. They have exalted instruction at the expense of conviction; and this accounts largely for the passing away of those sensations which I have referred to above, and which our fathers called unction. We don't get from modern preaching the thrills; and, therefore, people go where they can have them—to the theatre, to the opera, to the political gathering.—Free Methodist.

A New Church Dedicated.

Last Sunday was a high day among the Methodists of this city. It was the occasion of the opening and dedication of our new house of worship on Louisiana avenue. This congregation has had an eventful history. It started first on Laurel street, but after several years was removed to corner of Magazine and Louisiana avenue. The project for building a new house has been on hand a long time and has been prosecuted under many difficulties and much discouragement. Dr. Werlein laid the foundation in 1884, and there was no further progress made in the matter of building until about two years ago. The Board of Trustees then resolved to go forward. Dr. Sawyer took hold of the enterprise last January, a year ago, and, in co-operation with the trustees and the Building Committee, brought it to a successful completion last week. Everybody in the church worked harmoniously together to this end, and all rejoiced together when the last work was finished.

It is one of our most beautiful churches, and is richly finished and furnished. The ladies of the congregation have won special praises for their part of the work in the selection and purchase of the carpetings, which are all in tasteful harmony with the furniture and finish of the audience-room. Very generously, Bro. Harry, manager of the great music house of Philip Werlein, placed a magnificent Pelonbet church organ in the organ gallery for the dedicatory services, and it was handled dextrously and to the delight of all by one of our Methodist young ladies, Miss Nettie Sutcliffe.

The services had been advertised to begin at 3:30 P. M., and when that time arrived every available inch of space was occupied, large numbers of ladies and gentlemen being compelled to stand. We have never seen a church in this city so completely full. At the time appointed the services began with a solo, "Art thou weary, art thou languid?" rendered with exquisite pathos by Miss Priess, of the Carondelet choir. Bishop Keener announced, and the choir and congregation sung with great feeling, the hymn, "Eternal depth of love divine," after which Dr. J. B. Walker, a former pastor, offered an appropriate prayer. The Scripture lessons—Psalm lxxxiv and Rev. iii, 7-22—were read by the presiding elder, Rev. C. W. Carter. The Bishop then announced his text: "To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches."

For one hour the vast audience listened with rapt attention to the great thoughts with which the man of God built up one of his massive and towering sermons, and when he ceased everybody had a clearer conception of redeeming grace and a new appreciation of the worth of a human soul. We will give a full synopsis of the sermon in our next issue.

Bro. Sawyer followed with the collection. After a few remarks, he asked, "Who will start the collection by giving $1,000?" and hardly had he ceased before there was a response from the audience; then a brother arose and gave $1,500, and then another $1,000, and then another $1,000, and then $500, and then $250, and then eleven persons gave $100 each, and then came the fifties and the twenty-fives and tens and fives, and in a few minutes the pastor who had asked for $5,500 found himself in possession of about $7,200. It was beautiful and encouraging and inspiring to see such generous, hearty and quick giving. It demonstrated that there is considerable vitality in New Orleans Christianity yet.

The trustees presented the building, and the Bishop pronounced the sentence of dedication, and another beautiful structure was enrolled among the monuments of Methodist enterprise in the Crescent City.

Our brethren of Louisiana Avenue have won the praises of all the churches for their brave persistence in this enterprise. They have done well, and the dedication services have filled them all with joy.

Immigration--Acreage.

Two important conventions were held in this city last week, the results of each promising much toward the advancement of the varied interests of Louisiana. Both conventions were well attended by representative men from every section of the State. The subject of immigration has engaged the attention of thoughtful citizens for quite a while, and in various parts of the State something has been done to bring before the outside world the many advantages which Louisiana offers to persons seeking new homes to better their fortunes. This General Convention which was held here last week will serve to emphasize the work already done and to widen its influence abroad, so that many more may have the opportunity to know what our State offers in the way of climate, soil, productions, etc., to induce immigration to turn its tides toward us. The convention listened to some able speeches on the subject and formed a permanent organization with committees to work up the matter to a success. To us there seems to have been an oversight in the work of the convention, which will, we fear, hinder the success of that work. We want, of course, the best class of immigrants, but that class will hardly come to us in any great numbers until we can give assurance that all our laws will be administered impartially, and that some now on the statute book will be repealed.

Louisiana is now the dumping-ground for all the roughs and toughs and sports and prize fighters of the country, and decent and respectable people such as we desire will not come in droves to her soil until the laws which permit such persons to carry on their blighting business shall be expunged from the statute books. If the convention had passed some ringing resolutions that it committed itself thoroughly to the repeal of the law that permits prize fighting on the pretense of glove contests, and that it would give its aid and support to every effort to administer all laws impartially, it would have done a good deal toward securing the immigration of a healthy and solid body of citizens to take up our vacant soil. So we think decidedly.

The Acreage Convention did its work by issuing an address on the subject of less cotton and more of other crops. It based its work upon Senator George's recent address to the farmers of the South. The trouble in this matter is the insane love of money which has taken hold upon everybody. It is money, more money with every man, woman and child in the country. As far as the farmers are concerned, cotton is the only thing that will bring money, and they want a grip on the shining silver or gold. And this very covetousness has brought them to the edge of the precipice, and not a few have toppled over. The great majority of them see no money in their hands, coming from a diversity of crops. Too many of them have never learned that an equivalent for money is better than money. Some prefer to raise cotton at eight cents per pound and have the feeling engendered by a few dollars to their credit, and then pay fifteen cents per pound for meat to sustain life, rather than miss that feeling and have bread and meat in abundance with only cents to their credit. But public agitation is a wonderful mover of men, and we do most heartily exhort our readers who are engaged in agricultural pursuits to think seriously of these matters. There is no doubt the convention is on the right tack, and if the people generally will adopt its suggestions, a greater day of prosperity will soon dawn upon our State. The farmers need to learn only one lesson. You can't raise your meat and bread and butter and cheese in your cotton patch.

What We Are Reading.

Some people profess to be able to judge the character of a man by the books he reads. There may be something in this. At any rate, the literary tastes of a people are very well gauged by the number and kind of books which are published and sold among them. Book News gives us some interesting facts and figures in regard to this matter during the year 1892. During that year 4,074 new books were published, and 788 new editions of books. This is a larger number by 86 than has ever been published in one year before. These, however, are not all by American authors, but include reprints from the English and other sources, translations, importations and new editions. The growing number of books published indicates a growing number of readers.

Now, it is interesting to note what kind of books we read most. Here works of fiction largely outnumber any other one kind. There were published 1,102 works of this kind, which is more than double that of any other kind, and this shows that while we are in the main a practical, matter-of-fact sort of people, when we read we desire to get out of and away from the prosaic things of every-day life. This is simply the swing of the pendulum from the humdrum of daily toil to a recreation in which the imagination plays the larger part.

The next largest number of books published is classed under Theology and Religion, of which the number is 464 new books, and 38 new edititions. That we should read more books on Religion than on any other subject, except Fiction, may be a surprise to some persons, but it is a clear indication that religious subjects occupy one of the first places in the American mind. When we remember that about one-third of our population are members of some Christian denomination this fact need not surprise us. The surprise is, that we don't read more of that kind of books.

The next on the list are the Juvenile books, of which the number published is 448 new books, and 18 new editions. There has been a large growth along this line of literature during the last decade, and in consequence our children have greater facilities in the matter of books than their parents enjoyed. Blessed are the parents who know how to guide their children to a wise choice from the multitude of books which are published for the young. In some instances, if not in most, the direction the current of reading takes in youth will be maintained and make or mar the character for all after life.

After these the classification runs in the following order: Law, education and language, biography, political and social science, fine arts, travel, poetry and the drama, history, medicine, useful arts, physical and mathematical science, domestic and rural, sports, mental and moral philosophy, humor and satire.

In comparing this list with that of our English cousins for the same year, we find there is some difference in the number of books published, and in the order by numbers. Like us, they read more fiction, but next to fiction come books on educational subjects, and then theology, and then history and biography, and then juvenile books. Books on law seem to occupy a very low place, as only 36 were published against our 334. So that the fact appears that two distinct people under two different governments and with different histories and different customs, yet using the same language, read very nearly the same kind of books and very nearly the same number of books. As, however, our population is much larger, the fact is apparent that the English are greater readers than we are.

On the Wing.

The first Sunday in March was spent with Bros. Evans and Hopper and their good people at Meridian. The cyclone had just swept away Pachuta, Marion and Toomsuba, besides laying waste several miles of farming territory tributary to Meridian. I found everybody working for the relief of the cyclone sufferers, nevertheless the Lord had $40 still to give to Millsaps' endowment. Monday night found us at Waynesboro. Here Bro. Penn and his people are busy building a parsonage. The high school, under Rev. W. W. Moore, is in a flourishing condition. This school gave $9 toward the endowment, and the Waynesboro congregation $15.

East Mississippi Female College is located at Meridian. It has ample buildings, a fine corps of teachers and one of the best educators in the South, Prof. C. W. Anderson, for its president. Every department is complete. The young ladies gave a collection of $15.

The second Sunday in March found us at Vicksburg. Here Dr. Andrews and Bro. Robertson are leading the hosts of our Methodism on to victory. A new parsonage is all the talk in Vicksburg. Bro. Robertson is trying to solve a knotty problem. During the past two months he has received $24.90 and paid out $25 for house rent. He wants to know how he can economize so as to live off the balance and keep out of debt. Can some of your readers tell him? Vicksburg came to our help with a collection of $74.

The third Sunday we spent with Bros. Lewis and Ellis and their good people at Natchez. Here everything moves forward with life and energy. Some special features of the Sunday-school I commend to all our superintendents. Among the items reported are these: The number of Bibles in each class; the number who attended the church services on the past Sunday; the number who attended prayer meeting. My own personal liking for the superintendent might betray me into fulsome praise, so I drop the subject.

Jefferson Street listened kindly to my appeal and gave us $91. A large audience greeted us at Wesley Chapel and added $10 to our fund. One hundred and one dollars for Natchez.

Now, brother, now is your time. Three thousand three hundred dollars will complete our work. Send on your money now. Do not wait, do not hesitate. Help us just now.

O how many hearts are breaking,
O how many hearts are aching
For a loving touch and token,
For the word you might have spoken!
Say not in the time of sorrow,
"I will soothe their grief to-morrow;"
Prove your friendship, lest they doubt it;
Go at once; be quick about it!

We have secured reduced rates on the certificate plan on Georgia Pacific and Mobile and Ohio railroads for the annual meeting of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Macon, April 7-9. All who attend, whether as delegates or visitors, can get this reduction. When a change of cars is made a new certificate should be gotten, as the roads honor their own certificates only. We have asked for reduction on Illinois Central also.

NOTES.

Speaking of expenses at the World's Columbian Exposition, the Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "The entrance fee for every part of the Exposition proper will be fifty cents, and it will be easy for an economist to find a room at $2 50 a week and to feed himself for seventy-five cents a day." That's cheap enough to suit the editor of a church paper.

The disciples were the best witnesses to prove the resurrection of their Lord. They did not believe that he would die; when he did die they were so thoroughly convinced that he was dead that they were sunk in the deepest despair and were the hardest to convince of his resurrection. But when convinced, these opposite states of mind through which they had gone so rapidly gave them the best qualifications to testify to the truth. They said at last, "He is risen."

A good deal is being published in regard to spiritualism. In fact, the thing is being revived. On this subject we stand with Josiah Allen's wife. She said:

It does seem to me, that if my father or mother sot out frum heaven to come down to this bearding-house that they would rather come to me than to a passel of strangers who would be all indifferent to them. They would as lief come into my room as yourn, and rather too. And I believe that if God wanted to speak to a human soul, he could get his voice to the ear of that soul without any extra performances and foolishness.

The Gospel among the Slavos. Compiled by Rev. W. P. Harrison, Book Editor. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.25.

This is a record in part of what was done in "times before the war" to give the gospel to the slave population. The work was begun early, and kept up with increasing interest and success until there were no slaves in the land. The Christian Church in the South put herself on record in this work, and that record abides. These pages are full of interest to the reader, and will, doubtless, be read by thousands.

Mississippi Orphans' Home.

At a recent session of the Mississippi Conference a committee, consisting of W. A. Gunning, Peter James, M. L. Burton, H. M. Ellis and A. F. Watkins, was appointed to consider the advisability of establishing an Orphans' Home within the bounds of the Conference, and, if expedient, to formulate plans for the advancement of the enterprise. The committee met before the adjournment of the Conference, and organized with W. A. Gunning, chairman; A. F. Watkins, secretary, and M. L. Burton, treasurer, and adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

A called meeting of the committee was held in Jackson on March 1, and, after some consideration of the subject, the secretary was ordered to correspond with certain parties who had shown an interest in the enterprise and had made propositions to the committee looking to the establishment of such a home, and through the columns of the ADVOCATE to invite any suggestions, bids or proposals calculated to show the duty of the church in this important matter, or to aid in the foundation and equipment of such an institution.

When we consider the responsibilities which rest upon the Methodist Church in Mississippi, in view of its numerical and financial strength, we can not but feel that in every work which is calculated to bless our people she must be a leader. This does not mean that she is to rush precipitately into any enterprise in which her energies are not needed, but simply that in every wise and needed work she is to show herself a true friend to humanity and a loyal representative of her Lord. There are many poor people among the Methodists of Mississippi, and it has ever been the glory of Methodism that she has preached the gospel to the poor.

That the orphans must be cared for, the poor relieved, and the homeless sheltered, does not admit of question. The only question that the church can ask is: How shall this be done? Is the establishment of a home for the fatherless and poor the best way to care for them? If so, how and where? It is to ask an answer to these questions that this paper is written.

A. F. WATKINS, Sec.

History of Methodism in the Greenville District.

No book in the course of study for young preachers did me so much good as the "History of Methodism," by Bishop McTyeire. Others have given the same testimony. If there be anything worthy of record besides mere statistics and generalized reports in the current events and progress of Methodism that would be a guide and inspiration to future generations, we should have it in such a shape that the future historian would have sufficient and accurate material at hand to draw from.

There are many incidents worthy of record, many deeds of heroism performed by our men and women in the Greenville district, and, as for that matter, all over the State, that not only deserve to be preserved, but we owe this to the future church. The incidents most worthy are well nigh forgotten. I have been assigned the duty of getting up a paper on the History of Methodism in the Greenville District, that must be prepared within the next twenty days. If you want your charges represented, and take an honest pride in the church, let every preacher in the district, and all who have been here, and every layman that is in possession of any fact of interest, send the same to me at once. Inquire when each charge was organized, and by whom, and especially of the difficulties encountered. Inquire concerning those who have fallen at their posts. I want not only facts relative to preachers and their wives, but of those laymen and women who have been and are yet pillars in the temple of our God. Without the aid of every individual who is in possession of facts or who can obtain them, this effort will fall short of what it should be.

The Sunday-school Conference of Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South, will convene at Hernando, Miss., at 9:30 A. M., April 21, 1893, for the purpose of considering this important interest in our bounds. The following topics are suggested to bring the subject before the body:

1. The Sunday-school as an Instrument in the Salvation of Souls—T. B. Hargrove.

2. Vital Godliness an Essential Qualification for Sunday-school Work—J. M. Wyatt.

3. The Duty of the Whole Church to the Sunday-school—E. B. Ferrington, Eugene Johnson.

4. How May the Sunday-school Children Be Influenced to Attend Sunday Morning Preaching—T. W. Dye.

5. Importance of Thorough Preparation of the Lesson, and Careful Study of the Best Methods of Teaching on the Part of Superintendents and Teachers—J. D. Cameron.

6. How to Hold Our Young People in the Sunday-school—J. W. Malone.

7. How to Prevent Our Country Schools from Going into "Winter-quarters."—B. P. Jace, A. J. Jones.

The brethren whose names follow the topics are expected to prepare papers on same as introductory to discussion. All the preachers, both traveling and local, together with the officers and teachers throughout the district, are kindly, but earnestly requested to give the above program thoughtful attention and to be present and participate in the exercises. Sardis District.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me to add a few words about the work as it moves grandly forward in the district? Several of the preachers have held special services in their charges, as indicated by Week of Prayer and Self-denial, with fair results financially and with much profit to the church otherwise. Others have called attention to the fact and have lifted collections. Senatobia is making desirable and needed repairs on their parsonage. Of course, Dr. Cameron and family are happy. Nearly five hundred dollars have been added to the salaries of the preachers over last year. Now it is in order for the stewards to see that it is paid quarterly. Oh, for a baptism of the presence and power of the Holy Ghost on preachers and people!

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

Some of the brethren seem to think that, because contributions were made in their pastoral charges last year, they were exempted from observing the Week of Prayer and Self-denial. "Turn on the light," brethren, whether you take up collections or not.

FUCHSIA, TRAILING QUEEN.

This new Fuchsia is the most fascinatingly beautiful of all new plants. Instead of growing erect, its branches are vine-like and trail down over the sides of the pot or basket to a length of two or three feet. The flowers are of enormous size, buds, tubes and sepals being untenanted, while the corolla is a deep rich purple, changing to a fine crimson—flowers of both colors showing on a plant to great advantage. Plants bloom all the time both summer and winter, and frequently show hundreds of flowers at once in enormous drooping clusters. It is the easiest of all plants to grow, as it thrives in any soil or situation. It is the most beautiful window plant we have. Strong plants for blooming at once, by mail, prepaid, 20c. each, 2 for 35c., 5 for $1.00. To offer only one, we will mail one plant each of this Fuchsia and the Charming Mexican Primrose. ORDER NOW. WOMAN'S WORDS TO WOMEN.

Certainly the Most Unusual That Ever Were Penned.

MRS. HENDERSON OF PORT CHESTER.

She Graphically Tells of Her Troubles, Her Struggles and Her Triumphs.

One of the most wonderful letters ever written is that which follows. Any one who reads it is certain to be absorbingly interested. It is from Mrs. J. Henderson, of Port Chester, N. Y. She says:

"I am a woman and I wish to speak frankly and freely to women. There are thousands of young girls, middle-aged, and even elderly ladies to-day in the greatest danger, and they do not know it. They are standing upon the brink of a precipice and do not realise it. It is in the hope that the wonderful experience through which I have passed may be a blessing and a warning to them, that causes me to write it.

"About two years ago, it being the 'change of life' with me, I was treated by three of the best physicians in this place. At first I was treated for bronchitis, growing worse all the time, coughing constantly, until my voice was only a whisper. My head pained me, I had little if any appetite, I felt tired most of the time and yet was sleepless and restless. I was weak, nervous, unstrung; I lost all interest in life, felt despondent, and yet could not understand the reason. I did not suffer acute pain, but felt a constant misery. Finally my body began to bloat terribly, accompanied with pain. At this time a further examination on the part of the doctors revealed the terrible fact that I was suffering from Bright's disease of the kidneys in its most aggravated form. The doctor was urged to do all he could for me. He visited me several times daily and finally said to my husband: 'I might as well tell you plainly that your wife will not live the day out.' At that time my condition was fearful. My right side was paralyzed, my face distorted, and my tongue stiffened so that I could not speak. It was while in this deplorable condition that my husband, who had been my constant attendant and nurse, resolved if I lived until daylight to try a remedy of which we had heard much, but concerning which we knew but little. I felt the effects of it at once. The tone of my stomach restored so that I could retain the nourishment given me. I continued to improve, the paralysis left me, the bloating ceased, my strength returned, and I am a well woman to day, all through the use of Warner's Safe Cure, which took me from a condition of hopeless misery and restored me to health and happiness.

"Since my recovery, over which I feel so rejoiced, I have had opportunities to see much of the effects of this wonderful Safe Cure, in many of my friends and acquaintances. I know there are many women who do not realize their danger even at all conditions of life. The young woman is in peril even when on the threshold of womanhood. The wife has a legion of dangers, threatening to overcome her at any time. The mother is beset by perils, as a horde of troubles consequent upon maternity continually menace her. When, after passing through all these dangers, a woman arrives at the time when change of life occurs, she is again beset by the severest of all trials, and, indeed, through all her life a woman needs a friend upon which she can lean, on which she can depend. I believe that friend, the best friend known to woman, is Warner's Safe Cure. I know little concerning it except what it has done for me and what I have seen it has done for others, but I do know that it saved my life, that it has made me happy, and that wherever it has been used I have seen the same grand, beneficial results.

"I make the above statement frankly and freely, and from a desire that others may be benefited as I have been. If suffering, and the danger which surrounds every woman's life can be avoided, or even softened, the happiness of life can be increased and the world made vastly better."

HOME CIRCLE.

LOVE LIGHTENS LABOR.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn
And thought, with a nervous dread,
Of the piles of clothes to be washed, and more
Than a dozen mouths to be fed;
The meals to get for the men in the field,
The children to fix away
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned—
And all to be done this day.

It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be;
There were puddings and pies to bake, besides
A loaf of cake for tea.
And the day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbed wearily, as she said,
"If maidens but knew what good wives know
They would be in no haste to wed."

"Jenny, what think you I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well;
And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow,
And his eyes half bashfully fell;
"It was this," he said, and coming near,
He smiled, and stooping down
Kissed her cheek—"'Twas this, that you were the best
And the dearest woman in town!"

The farmer went back to the field, and the wife,
In a smiling and absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs
She'd not sung for many a day;
And the pain in her head was forgot, and the clothes
Were white as the foam of the sea;
Her bread was light, and her butter was sweet
And as golden as it could be.

"Just think!" the children all called in a breath,
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!
He wouldn't, we know, if he only had
As happy a home as we."
The night came down, and the good wife smiled
To herself as she softly said,
"'Tis so sweet to labor for those we love,
It's not strange that maids will wed!"

Get In Somewhere.

Find your place in some Christian Church as soon as possible. Do not delay, but go at once to some godly minister and tell him that you are on the Lord's side and want to get into rank with his people. I once heard of a little child who had recently been converted. She was one day talking to her grandfather, who was questioning her about her new faith and, no doubt, giving her some good advice. Finally she said, "Grandpa, are you a Christian?"

"Yes, my dear, I hope I am."

"What church do you belong to, grandpa?"

"Oh, I belong to the church of Christ."

"But what is that? Are you a member of the same church that mama and I are—the Episcopal Church?"

"No, my dear, I am not an Episcopalian."

"Are you a Presbyterian, then?"

"No, I am not a Presbyterian."

"Are you a Baptist, then?"

"No."

"Are you a Methodist?"

"No, dear, I do not belong to any of the churches; I just belong to Christ."

After a pause, in which the little one was thinking it all over, she turned her face up to her grandfather's and said: "Well, grandpa, if I were you, I would try and get in somewhere."

Now, I think the little Christian was right, and the old one was wrong. I known there are many who, from various reasons, stand apart from organized relation to the church of God. No church is perfect. No doubt we might all find things in the churches to which we are allied which we could wish might be changed, and certainly we see things in other bodies which we do not approve, but at the same time I would say that it is better to be in than out. Imperfect as the outward church is, nevertheless it is the church of God, and among its members are to be found the true people of God, and within her organization are found the ordinances of God. I repeat the little girl's advice, "Get in somewhere."—Dr. Pentecost.

Where Did Love Come from?

There is goodness here in the earth: how did it get here? And there is wisdom and justice and truth and love. Whence did these originate, or where did they come from? Would you call these accidents? They can not be lapses. Sin is a lapse, and folly and wrong and falsehood. Goodness surely can be no mistake; it is sin that is the mistake. A curse is on the ground, and in the air, and in the skies of earth. A spell of derangement, a touch of palsy, a taint of leprosy is felt in all human and earthly things. We see degeneration in nature—a falling down. We see nowhere any spontaneous regenerating or recuperative tendency or force; there is no falling up. There are struggles upward, but the original height fallen from is never attained unto. Loss is ever unto loss, more and more swiftly and surely; never unto full recovery. Nature itself being witness, therefore, the good in it is original and normal. It is evil that is an accident; wrong is abnormal. And, given this, may we not say that nature even contains the promise and prophecy of Redemption? Since God who made the world is good, he will not allow evil to rule in it forever. There must be a new heaven and a new earth. The poor, vague, broken dream of the poet is assured and ever-swelling strain of the gospel song. Love came from God; it grew not out of the ground; it sprang from no earthly mound, it can never die. And with love goodness lives, and justice and truth. No Paradise is ever lost out of the realm of God. To the godly it is even now, in God and through God, a glorious Paradise gloriously regained.—Rev. W. J. Skillman, in Christian at Work.

A Bulwark.

The word "bulwark" is akin to two German words, which mean plank and defense; hence has come to mean any means of defense or that which protects. A bulwark is something that surrounds, is outside. A certain place is made more or less impregnable to attack by its fortifications, ramparts, or bulwarks. Character must have its bulwark. There must be a defense around every man's life that is not found in himself. In war the more open to attack the strategic position, the stronger must the bulwarks be made. So in character and life, the greater the inner weakness the greater defense is needed. We hear much about strength of character, noble manhood, "manly men," and so on, these days, but however strong the character, nobly or manly the man may be, he is weak compared with the forces of evil around him. There are evils within, but it is not of them we are now speaking. The natural heart must be renewed, which is a work of grace that can not be omitted, but if we leave that out of our thought, it is still true that the enemy that has laid siege to the soul will gain the victory over a man without a bulwark round about him. Blackstone says: "The royal navy of England hath ever been its greatest defense, the floating bulwark of our island." Even so there must be a royal bulwark around every man who is to succeed in resisting evil. What shall that bulwark be?

The word "boulevard" originally meant the same as bulwark—the rampart of a fortification. It also meant a walk, once the site of a demolished fortification. Now the word is used as a name of a broad street or drive around a city, and is usually considered a place of pleasure. There is a lesson in what might be called a descent in the meaning of this word. How many there are who, as far as they are concerned, destroy the only real fortification of life and turn it into a place of pleasure-seeking! There is only one impregnable rock of defense. Christ alone in the royal bulwark of the soul that trusts him. He surrounds the man as the royal navy surrounds England, "the floating bulwark" of the island. Many things may help, but none other than Jesus can save. The man in Christ, while he has part in resisting temptation, can laugh his enemies to scorn because the Lord is his defense, and though legions of devils besiege the citadel of his soul, he can calmly say: "O God, the Lord, the strength of my salvation, thou hast covered my head in the day of battle."—Young Men's Era.

We have ceased to be astonished at finding women in unexpected places. And yet the change of the position and manner of women in society is so great that we have not yet fully comprehended it. The old habit of dependence on the other sex has almost vanished, and would no longer be described as lady-like. The change is most marked in the new generation. The young woman is practically independent; the lady of fashion has her own check-book and orders her own establishment as completely as the shop girl who has neither check-book nor establishment orders her own life. The maiden at her college is almost as independent as the bachelor at his. The traveler notices a great difference in the appearance and manner of women within the last ten years. The woman who travels has a more business-like and self-contained air. She is no longer helpless; she is scarcely ever timid. The timid, flustered woman has almost gone out of fashion. When she comes into a crowded railway station she comes with a straightforward, resolute, unassuming air, like a man. She knows exactly what she wants; she is not hurried; she does not need to go about nervously asking questions of stupid men. She has her watch and her time table, and quietly takes her place and her rights. Only one thing she has not learned, and that is, not to break into the head of a line waiting at the ticket office or the postoffice window. In time she will fall into the ordered line of life by learning to respect the rights of others, although they may be men. She is so clever and practical and business-like that she has less and less occasion to presume upon the accident of her sex. A company of young girls traveling to their college have much the manner and ease of a company of "men" traveling to their college, though, of course, with infinitely more grace and attractiveness. All this is not a spasmodic movement, a mere leap-year freak. It indicates a radical change going on in the structure of society, an advance along the whole line of the great body of women to independence, the great body that may not care a rap for suffrage, and that do not make the least noise about their "rights." They simply take them.—Editor's Study in Harper's Magazine.

A personal Jesus accepted is salvation; a personal Jesus obeyed is sanctification; a personal Jesus trusted is a perpetual joy; a personal Jesus possessed is our only power. Without him all preaching is empty clamor; without him all church machineries but clatter. If we covet a genuine revival of spiritual life and power, let us open our lips, our purses, our hands and our hearts, to this deepest, grandest, most heaven-born of petitions, "Come, Lord Jesus!"—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Let the mantle of worldly enjoyment hang loose about you, that it may be safely dropped when death comes to carry you into another world. When the fruit is ripe it falls off the tree easily. So when a Christian's heart is truly weaned from the world, he is prepared for death. A heart disengaged from the world is a heavenly one, and then we are ready for heaven when our heart is there before us.—Anon.

It is certain, that either wise bearing, or ignorant carriage, is caught, as men take diseases, one of another; therefore, let men take heed of their company.—Shakspeare.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

BABY.

BY GEORGE M'DONALD.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into the here.

Where did you get those eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheeks like a warm, white rose?
I saw something better than anyone knows.

Whence that three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get this pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into bonds and hands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all just come to be you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought about you, and so I am here.

In Japan.

MY WINTER VACATION.

In the Winter vacation I went back to my native country, apart thirty miles from Matsuyama. To my delight my old benevolent parents ware very healthy, and my dear brothers and sisters were very brave, and my family was peaceful. I paid my visits to my relations and I talked various stories with them; or, passing to and fro with my intimate friends, we did happy games and narrations, and we were glad with each other and deepened our intimacy. Also I would read amusing romances sitting down by my old mother, who is very fond of romance, and letting her hear me reading. Considering this as one branch of filial conduct, I always was very glad to read it.

Thus my Winter vacation passed, and the day in which began my lessons neared; therefore, I prepared to leave my home.

When I started from my home my old mother said to me: "O, my boy! You must take care about your drinking and eating, and study your lesson."

I replied: "Mother, don't mind it; I will keep your admonition."

The above composition was written by a student. He is not good-looking at all, but stands at the head of his class. He comes to my house frequently to read and listen and inquire.

H. G. HAWKINS.

Jan. 28, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: As my last letter met with success, and as I see so few letters in the children's column, I thought I would write again, and tell you about our flourishing little town, Enterprise. It is divided into two parts, East and West Enterprise, by the Chickasawhay river. The N. O. and N. E. R. R. runs through the west side, and the M. and O. R. R. the east side. There are four churches—the Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Episcopal—and ten or twelve stores. A knitting factory and turpentine still is being built. We have a fine school. The building is situated on a large sand flat. Mr. Editor, in my last letter, by some mistake, the name of my youngest brother, Ira, was left out, and as I had the names of the rest of my brothers and sisters in it, I hated his not being in it. He was a member of this Conference last year, and preached in Anguilla; but this year he is taking a course at the Vanderbilt University. We are very proud of him. I am glad some of the readers are interested in my brother, Henry, in Japan. I will answer Nora G. Edmondson's question: The word "organ" is found in Job. xxi, 12, and in Genesis iv, 21. I will leave this question with the readers: Which is the book in the Bible in which the word "God" is not mentioned?

MATTIE B. HAWKINS.

MR. EDITOR: Jefferson county, in my knowledge, is the poorest county in the great State of Mississippi to support schools for her rising generation. She only has money enough in the treasury each year to support her schools for the short time of four months, while her sister, "brave old Claiborne," has from six to eight months each year. I live on the line between Jefferson and Claiborne; therefore, I have the right to go to school in either county, and, as the school in Claiborne is much nearer than the one in Jefferson, I go to it. Miss Jennie M. Berry, of Port Gibson, is my teacher. She is an excellent teacher and a nice young lady. We had the pleasure of seeing our worthy superintendent, Prof. Charles K. Regan, last Friday morning. He seemed very much pleased with our school. I had the misfortune to get my arms badly broken at my father's steam gin last Fall; so, as I can not do farm work, and have to do something for my livelihood, I have decided to make a school teacher of myself; so I am studying hard and improving every opportunity I can.

Yours forever and ever,

LEONARD H. WILKINSON, JR.

Tillman Station, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am seven years old, and this is my first letter. I go to school to Miss Lydia Austin. I like her very much. My Sunday-school teacher is Mrs. Mary Hutchins. Our preacher is Bro. Guice. I have never seen any letters from any of the cousins in this part of this country. I hope mine will not reach the waste-basket. I have three sisters and one brother. I love grandma better than anybody, because I am her little girl. My papa is a steward in the church here.

Your little friend, CE. ANDERSON.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME.—Mother (severely)—"Johnny, where is that piece of cake I left here when I went out?"

Johnny—"I gave it to a hungry little boy, mama, and oh, he was so glad to get it!"

Mother—"Come to my arms, you dear, dear angel. Who was the little boy?"

Johnny—"Me."

"Now tell me why I punished you?" said a stern father, who had painfully found it necessary to punish his son Johnnie.

"That's it," sobbed Johnnie, "you've nearly pounded the life out of me, and now you don't know why you did it."

A 6-8 RHYME.

A queer little boy who had been to school,
And wise up to all sorts of tricks,
Discovered that nine, when upside down,
Would pass for the figure six.

So when asked his age by a good old dame,
The comical youngster said,
"I'm nine when I stand on my feet like this,
But six when I stand on my head!"

At the House of Correction.

"Oh, Ted," cried mama Mayson, looking deploringly at her six-year old, "how did you tear such a rent in those new bicycle pants?"

"'Trousers,' mama Mayson," said good-humored papa looking up from his morning paper.

"It's better English, you know," explained college Will, passing his mother's chair and giving the little curls in the nape of her neck a surreptitious pull.

"It's as much affront to call a good pair of trousers or pantaloons, 'pants,' as to designate your husband and son, who, let us hope, are not too far from being gentlemen, 'gents,'" added papa Mayson, with much irony.

"Indeed," deprecated mama, "I did not think. Please excuse me, I"—

"'Please excuse me' is a phrase fast being relegated to the obsolete. The expression in vogue is, 'I beg your pardon,'" laughed Will.

"Ted, go and see how Kate is getting on with the breakfast."

"Breakfast will be ready in five minutes," reported Ted, when he came back from the kitchen.

"Breakfast will be 'served' in five minutes, my son," corrected papa. "Let us use polite language."

"I will help to steak, but will you dish out the toast, mama?" said this forgetful head of the family, later at the table.

"I will 'servo' the toast," replied mama, demurely. "Methinks 'dish out' is fast being relegated to the obsolete. The expression in vogue"—

Will gallantly came to the rescue. "Oh, by the way, Bert Smith's engagement to Lisa Monroe is out."

"'Announced' is the more polite term to use," mildly interposed mama, her eyes on her plate. Will took a sip of his coffee.

"Lena Carew has been asked to be bridesmaid"—

"'Maid of honor' is the more modern name," put in the feminine head of the household.

"They are to reside in Brookline and"—

"'Live' in Brookline. 'Reside' has a flavor of newspapers! People who prefer the best English, you know, seldom use the word."

"Oh, I say, papa," exclaimed Ted, as they rose from the table, "this is getting to be a regular house of correction."

"Short terms, kind officials," began papa, glancing at mama's twinkling eyes and bending to give her his good-by kiss, before leaving for the office.

"And sure reform!" solemnly completed Will, on his way to the library for a quiet hour with Guizot and "The History of Civilization."—Martha Fairbanks Blanchard.

"I DO NOT HAVE TO LIE."—"I do not have to lie; I am not afraid of anybody," said a boy when falsely accused of something which he had not done. It is a great thing for a man or boy to so live that he does not have to lie.

The beginning of a lie is frequently away back. It begins with some evil purpose, some wicked act, some wrong doing; and the boy who has got into the devil's net and finds himself crippled and tangled, then thinks the easiest way is to lie himself out of it. The liar has a hard road to travel, and a very long one. He lies himself into a dozen troubles before he lies himself out of one, one lie calls for another, and there is no end to the entanglements which come through falsehood.

The best, the surest way to "put away lying," is to do nothing that you need to conceal, or deny, or lie about. Tell the truth and live the truth. As long as a man or boy will tell the truth, there is some hope for him; but when he gives himself up to lying what else is there to be done? What can you do with a liar? Where can you place him? What is he good for?—Little Christian.

HARD TO PRONOUNCE.—"George!" she screamed; "my neck!"

"What's the matter?"

"There's a pillaeatter——"

"A what?"

"A tappekiller——"

"What in the world do you mean?"

"O, dear!" she moaned, as she clutched him frantically; "a kitterpaller! You know, George! A patterkiller!"

"O!" said George, with evident relief, and he proceeded to brush the future butterfly away. —Life.

NOT ASKING A GREAT DEAL.—"I am afraid, Bobby," said his mother, "that when I tell your papa what a naughty boy you've been today, he will punish you."

"Have you got to tell him?" asked Bobby anxiously.

"Oh, yes; I shall tell him immediately after dinner."

The look of concern upon Bobby's face deepened, until a bright thought struck him. "Well, ma," he said, "give him a better dinner than usual. You might do that much for me."

AFTER HIM TOO.—A child story comes from the lively little suburb of Harrison. A bad small boy there crawled under the bed when his mother wanted to punish him. She couldn't get him out, and she left him there until his father returned that evening from the city. When the father came and was told about the case, he started to crawl under the bed to bring forth his disobedient son, but was almost paralyzed when the little fellow asked: "Hello, is she after you too?"—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Thoughts! whence do they arise? what stuff are they made of? and what vigor is it that gives them such an instantaneous production? They are conceived in full maturity, and step into perfection at first. They scorn the gradation of bodies and the heavy successions of motion. They gain the race at a start, outstretch the speed of gunpowder, and distance light and lightning. Thoughts take up no room. When they are right, they afford a portable pleasure, which one may travel with, without any trouble or incumbrance.—Collier.

Some boys were asked what they knew about the Pharisees. "They are a mean lot, sir," said one boy. "Why do you say so?" "Because some of them brought a penny to Christ once, and he took it in his hand, looked at it, and said, 'Whose subscription is this?'"

When four-year-old Carl saw waffles for the first time, he cried out, "O, mama, look at the cut-glass pan cakes!" And nothing could more accurately describe the peculiar indentations which the waffle-irons leave.

"Honesty is the best policy." Nobody contradicts that. Your dealer can get lamp chimneys that almost never break from heat, or those that break continually. Which does he get? Which do you get?

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" tough against heat; not one in a hundred in use. The glass is clear as well as tough. They are accurate, uniform.

Be willing to pay more for chimneys that last till they rot, unless some accident happens to them.

LLS–On Oct. 13, 1892, death, the insatiate r, came to wring an aged mother's loving with sorrow, and rob two little ones of a er's care and wetchful tenderness, by re- ng from life Mrs. VICTORIA C. WELLS, who on the above dete at Old Vernon, in Madi- coonty, Miss. She was the daughter of ndo and Amanda Pack, born on Feb. 8, and reared in this county, where a few ago she married Mr. R. H. Wells, who sur- and mourns her loss.

e Pack family were among the earliest est residents of this county near Vernon e ante-bellum days, when that town was f the most flourishing villages, surrounded ealth, intelligence, beauty and chivalry. Bennett, her grandfather, was a man of e and sterling integrity, from Tennessee, ng at an early day near Canton, in this y. Bravest of the breve, ho lived en ex- ry life, died past eighty, and left an un- hed name to his family.

e subject of this sketch was possessed of e attributes that constitute a happy home- ffectionate, domestic and industrious— plifying the Scriptnre, "She looketh well ways of her household, and eateth not read of idleness." The aching void in the mother's heart nothing can fill, nor time, tern arbiter of events, efface from her ry the image of her dearly loved, dutiful ffectionate daughter. No hands can, or ever minister to the little orphans as y, willingly or lovingly as would the lost er have done. Yet, however the heart che, and the loss seem irreparable, it is e's stern decree that all must die, and we bow in submission to the inexorable e of the great God of the universe, and that all that is loved and lost here may nsed and reunited beyond the twilight's e hills.

Each lovely scene shall thee restore,
For thee the tear he duly shed;
Beloved till life could charm no more,
And mourned till pity's self he dead.

* * * * * * *

Oh! thou who dry'st the mourner's tear,
How dark the world would he when deceived and wounded here,
We could not fly to thee!

Blot thou will heel thát hrokon heart
Which, like the plants that throw heir fragrance from the wounded part,
Breathe sweetness out of woe."

LOWERY—G. L. LOWERY was born in Union parish, La., Oct. 2, 1857. He was married Dec. 18, 1880, and died at his home, near Shiloh, La., Nov. 7, 1892.

Bro. Lowery was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and lived a consistent Christian life up to the day of his death. The writer of this article was his pastor for two years; visited him during the last days of his sickness, and conversed with him upon the subject of death. During one of my visits to see him (about two months before he died) he said to me: "I have often thought of this hour, and have thought that it would be a fearful thing to die; but I find that I was mistaken. I know that I can never get well; but I realize that Jesus is with me, and thet he sustains me, and I am not afraid to die. My way is clear. There are no clouds. The only thing that I have to regret is the thought of leaving my wife and little children; but I leave them in the hands of the Lord, who is able to care for them." Later on, about two days before he died, he said to a friend who stood by his bedside, "The Lord is with me." How like Wesley, who, in his last moments, could exclaim, "The best of all is, God is with us." Our people continue to die well.

Bro. Lowery has gone and is no longer with us. He will be missed by his church and community; but most of all by his sorrowing wife and children. We can do no more than commend them to the God of all grace, who is able to comfort and sustain them in their sorrow. While he is no longer with you, your loss is his eternal gain. You may meet him again on the shores of eternal deliverance, where parting will be no more. We conducted his funeral sermon in the presence of a large and weeping congregation, after which his body was quietly laid away in the cemetery at old Alabama Church, where it will await the resurrection morn. J. O. BENNETT.

BOILS—Died, Jan. 15, 1893, WALTER BOILS, aged eight months and eight days. Death found strange beauty on that polished brow and dashed it out. Only a murmur was heard and the spoiler set his seal of silence; but there beamed a smile, so fixed, so holy from that cherub brow. Death gazed and left it there. He dared not steal the signet ring of heavon.

Little Walter was the pride of his parents and the pet of his three sisters; but he was too fair a bud to blossom in this blighting world, so the hand of the angel of mercy has transplanted him with his two little brothers in a better world than this. Fond parents, let the story of Jesus taking little children in his arms and blessing them, comfort you and teach you to hope that he who so graciously received these children has not forgotten yours, and that they are sweetly fallen asleep in him, and will be the everlasting object of his care and love.

When death calls the parents and sisters of these little babes, God grant that they may behold on their faces the signet ring of heaven!

Their sincere friend, ALICE MILLER.

Dobson, Miss.

REYNOLDS—THOMAS H. REYNOLDS, son of T. P. and F. A. Reynolds, was born Feb. 8, 1851, and died Nov. 6, 1892, near Lisbon, Claiborne parish, La. He was happily married, in 1876, to Miss Lizzie Williams, and has ever been a kind husband and affectionate father. He was the father of five children, of which four survive him. After an illness of only a few days he was snatched from the home in which he was so much needed by the angel of death and carried beyond where tears and suffering are unknown. A more consistent Christian I never saw. Although he never made any public demonstration, he was a devout, earnest and every-day Christian.

He leaves a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss, and, above all others, a dear mother and wife. But be comforted, dear ones; we grieve, but not as those who have no hope, for we expect to see him again in the land of happiness, and meet to part no more, but live in eternal bliss. His sister, KATIE.

HUMPHREY—Mrs. MARY JANE HUMPHREY was born in Holmes county, Miss., in the year 1851, and died of pneumonia at her home, in Morehouse parish, La., Feb. 1, 1893.

She had been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, about twelve years, and was a zealous Sunday-school worker. She leaves a number of relatives and a host of friends to mourn her death, which was triumphant. As God vouchsafed dying grace, her sun went down without an intervening cloud. The writer conducted the burial service, which was attended by a large congregation, who wept bitterly as we committed her body to the grave in Bon Idee Cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just. J. J. KELLY, P. C.

PARKER - Little ERVIN PARKER, son of T. M. and A. S. Parker, was born July 20, 1890, and died Nov. 30, 1892.

Little Ervin was a good child. He was so affectionate to his father and mother, and when he died they said, "How can we give him up?" He loved to sing and hear singing, though so young. He said to those watching him die, "Sing," but a few minutes before the little fellow fell asleep in Jesus. Little Ervin was a remarkably sprightly child. Dear parents and relatives, weep not; but meet the little boy in heaven. LILLIE ROBERTS.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race-street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

CHRIST WALKING ON THE SEA OF GALILEE.

AMONG the great religious paintings of modern times, Christ Walking on the Sea, by Charles Francer, is a masterpiece. The text from which the picture was taken is this: When even was come, his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship. And it was dark, and the ship was in the midst of the sea, and Jesus alone was on the land and was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew. And he saw them toiling in rowing, for the wind was contrary unto them, and the ship was now in the midst of the sea tossed with the waves. Jesus cometh unto them, walking upon the sea and would have passed them, but when the disciples saw him walking on the sea and drawing nigh unto the ship, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out for fear. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid."

This beautiful biblical description the painter has chosen for his subject, and his wonderful painting appeals in the highest degree to the religious sentiment, as well as the artistic taste and refinement of every nationality and every creed.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

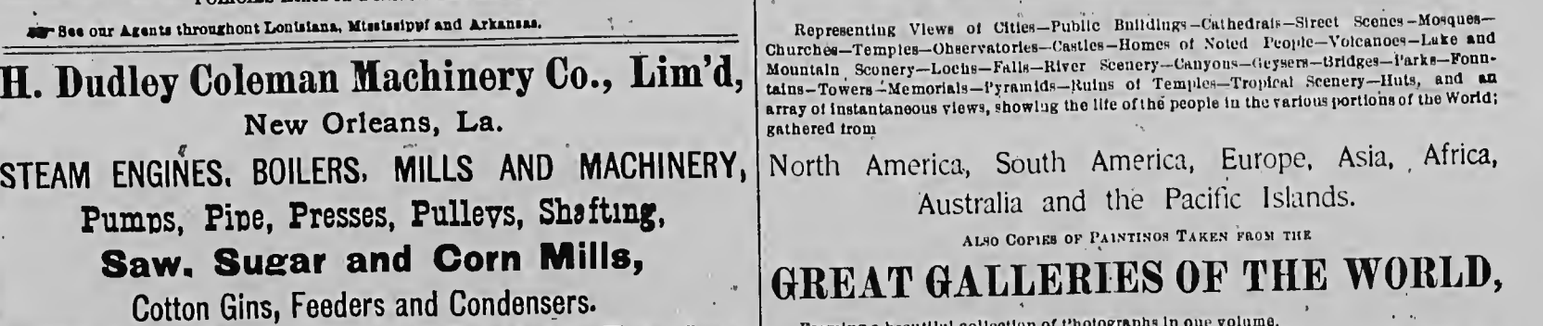
Forming a beautiful collection of photographs in one volume.

To the vast army of stay-at-homes the world, beyond the sea, which once seemed so far away from them, has now become nearer. Events that take place in South Africa are known a few hours afterwards in America, and a feeling of familiarity with distant lands thus seems to have been created by telegraph. Besides this, we have books of travel, lectures by explorers and pictures to fall back upon, so that if "we can not go strange countries for to see," we have them brought home to our doors.

This GREAT NEW BOOK, containing a vast collection of photographs, gathered from every corner of the globe, is printed on enamelled paper, bound in the most durable manner, and sold at $4 per copy.

Latest Styles -- Lowest Prices!



This handsome Parlor Suit is upholstered on solid walnut frames with Imported Marbleized Silk Plush and the seats are all Spring Edge. Colors are Red, Red and Old Gold, Blue and Old Gold or each piece of a different color. For $45 I will sell seven pieces of this suit:—one Sofa, one Divan, one Patent Rocker, one Arm Chair and three Reception Chairs. $65 buys the complete suit of ten pieces consisting of two Sofas, one Divan, one Patent Rocker, one Arm Chair, and five Reception Chairs. Same suit covered with Hair Cloth, seven pieces $35 or ten pieces $55. Every other article in my store at proportionately low prices. Bedroom suits, twelve pieces, from $40 up to $1000. Dining room suits, eight pieces, from $17 upwards. Complete Kitchen outfits from $20 upwards. Quality at top—prices at bottom. I have an immense variety of strictly reliable goods and purchasers can depend upon getting the very latest styles. Everything guaranteed to be exactly as represented or money will be promptly refunded.

Employment for All.

We want active men and women in every county in the South to represent us and to sell our publications. We pay high commissions, and in addition allow our canvassers the privilege of general agents, which insures them extra profits. In this way you can make as much and even more than on your own sales. Our books are written by standard authors, and are just what the public want, as shown by our agents' reports. One agent sold $165 worth in four days last week. Our self-pronouncing Bibles are unsurpassed, and meet with high favor. Now is the time to enter the work. Write for terms and catalogue. Homer Publishing Co., Wm. Cooksey, manager, Homer, La.

A cyclone swept over Clarke and De Soto counties, Miss., last week, destroying much property and killing many people. Richland parish, La., also suffered much damage and loss of life from the storm.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Colonel Elliot Fitch Shepard, editor of the Mail and Express, died suddenly, on March 24, at his home in New York City.

The wholesale lumbermen of this city have formed an organization known as the Pine Lumber Manufacturer's Association of New Orleans.

The great strike of the Monongahela Valley coal miners has practically ended, and before the end of the week it is expected that all of the 7,000 old men will be back at work.

A great gathering of Irishmen in New York City was held, on March 26, to pledge Mr. Gladstone their most vigorous support and sympathy to carry through the Home Rule bill.

The new cruiser, New York, was given a trial off Delaware Breakwater last week. A speed of 19.67 nautical miles was developed over the measured course, with a speed in the open sea of from 20.38 to 20.57 knots an hour. The trip proves the vessel the fastest armored vessel in the world.

The news that the President has decided to reconvene the International Monetary Conference at Brussels, on May 30, is received with approbation by senators who have interested themselves in the silver question. The impression prevails that the United States delegation will not be materially changed in personnel.

It was discovered, on March 24, that one of the most important rulings ever made in the administration of pension matters has remained unpromulgated so far as the public was concerned for more than five months past, and that this decision reverses a ruling under which fully $2,000,000 have been wrongfully paid out.

Secretary Herbert will soon take up the question of changing the color of warships. The present shade of white for the vessels of the American navy is found to be doubly as expensive as the former black. It is difficult to keep the hulls clean in appearance, and the shade is not considered sufficiently deceptive, day or night, to elude an eye.

It is reported that ex-President Harrison has been, or is to be, offered the presidency of the State University of Indiana, at Bloomington, Ind., which was recently vacated. The plan of the trustees is to make General Harrison president of the institution with the understanding that he will give it but a limited part of his time, his attention to be devoted to the law department especially.

The New York Advertiser is doing a work of estimable value for the poor people of that city. It instituted lately a careful inquiry as to the prices which the butchers paid for meat and those that they charged their customers, and made the discovery that they were making a profit of from 50 to 75 per cent. It proceeded to publish the figures which it had obtained, and demanded that the prices be reduced. One large establishment has made a large cut in consequence, and the rest will soon be compelled to follow suit.

FOREIGN.

The great cotton strike in Lancaster, England, which lasted many months, has been settled.

The German government will raise the Washington legation to an embassy in view of a similar change being made in the representation of the United States in Berlin.

The city of Rome was thrown into a state of great excitement over an assault which was made upon King Humbert on March 25. The assailant threw a stone at the king, the missile almost striking the monarch. The assailant is now in prison.

The clauses in the canal contract were drawn and will soon be signed by the Colombian government. The contract, it is believed, imposes conditions which will not be accepted by the canal liquidator. The government has no faith in the ability of the company to reorganize on a new basis, and is only giving that corporation a last chance, and when failure is absolutely apparent, it will take possession of the canal.

It has been officially announced from London that the British government has decided to raise the rank of the British Minister at Washington to that of ambassador, the highest grade in the diplomatic service. Sir Julian Pauncefote will, therefore, be known in future as the British Ambassador to the United States. It is also reported that the French government, not to be outdone by Great Britain, will also immediately erect the French legation at Washington into an embassy of the first class.

"The Blood Is the Life,"

Runs the old saying, and everything that ever makes part of any organ of the body must reach its place therein through the blood. Therefore, if the blood is purified and kept in good condition by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, it necessarily follows that the benefit of the medicine is imparted to every organ of the body. Can anything be simpler than this method by which this excellent medicine gives good health to all who will try it fairly and patiently?

The cloth cuirass, invented by a Mannheim tailor, to resist the small caliber bullets, and recently approved by the war department, was tested in repeated trials at Mannheim. Uniforms of the new cloth placed on wooden effigies were not pierced by balls shot from points 100, 200 and 400 meters distant. At shorter range the wooden figures were so deeply dented that the officers concluded that the force of the impact was sufficient to stun a man. To make the cuirass the tailor merely applies a secret preparation to an ordinary cloth tunic.

It is stated that the French-Canadian promoters of annexation to the United States intend to organize regular committees in all the French-Canadian centers of the United States with a view to induce the Canadians there to correspond regularly with their friends and relatives in Canada, impressing upon them the advantages to be derived from living under the stars and stripes.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW

—OF—

THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

W. P. HARRISON, D. D., LL.D., Editor.

Published quarterly. Each number has 216 beautifully printed pages on best book paper, making a volume of more than 800 pages for the year. QUARTERLY is not commended by the ablest of our clergy and laity only, it is mentioned with the highest respect by the editors of the best periodical literature throughout our country and abroad. It is a needed medium for the discussion of subjects too large for adequate treatment in the columns of weekly papers. It should be unanimously supported by our preachers, widely distributed among the thoughtful of our laity. The subscription price of the QUARTERLY is $2. Your subscription is solicited.

Dedication Sermon by Bishop J. C. Keener.

The following is a synopsis only of the sermon preached by Bishop Keener at the dedication of our new church on Louisiana Avenue, Sunday, March 26. Our readers can easily see what a magnificent sermon the Bishop must have made out of this grand framework. Indeed, several have expressed the opinion that the Bishop never preached a greater sermon than the one he gave from this synopsis as a basis. His text was Rev. iii, 21, 22.

At this highly favorable hour, brethren, I invite your prayerful attention to the words of our risen Savior, the two last verses of the third chapter of Revelation: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I overcame and sat down with my Father on his throne. He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches." Words which are for the church in every age and phase of Christian experience. The book in which this passage is found is the magnificent end and flower of the sacred canon. It presents the Son of God incarnate, as the fulfillment of all prophecy and as the basis of all future human history.

The church, by reason of the great events, the coming and the going of Christ, has had an expectation of the life hereafter as being much more substantial than any premessianic faith could have imagined, even more than that of the patriarchs who looked for a city whose builder and maker is God."

The departure of the body of Christ, in his ascension, and its entrance into heaven, to the conception of all believers, must, of necessity, give reality to all its present surroundings. It dissipates the spectral atmosphere in which we naturally suppose all invisible things and persons to be. It demands heaven to be a realm of distances, voices, motion, color and living flames.

One of the purposes of the Spirit in giving such a revelation as this book, must have been to give a firmer quality to the hope of God's people, yet not so as to narrow the horizon of their faith. No creation of the human mind, inspired or uninspired, has ever equalled the brilliant periods and the sublime visions of St. John on Patmos. Their glory flashes far out over the ages, reaching to the land where the morning sits in his beauty.

Accordingly, we find all we wished to know of the unseen world in this divine epic, addressed to the eye rather than to the ear. It gives to heaven a real habitation. All is scenic, and all is filled with reality.

The Father is seen on his throne; the Holy Spirit in the prismatic flames of his sevenfold glory, and the Son incarnate standing in the midst of the seven golden churches.

Hosts of holy angels and redeemed intelligencies move upon its plane, and their voices are heard in anthems as the ocean surf. The whole angelic world, in ascending terraces, is disposed in throngs, seats, heights, bronzes expressive of degrees of holiness and power.

A city of ineffable wealth and beauty descends from God, already built, of indestructible and most precious material.

The martyrs, sealed of God, are heard and seen amid songs, odors, lights, streams and fruits of perpetual love.

And on the other hand, ranks and buried illes of compact deville, with their dark king, Abaddon, who would swallow up the church of God, are seen in their rout, ruin and eternal prison-house. The scarlet beast, the horn seated upon it, the false prophet, Satan, all cast alive into a lake burning with fire and brimstone. A great white throne, and him that sat on it, is seen; the dead, small and great, from the sea and the grave, stand before it; all are judged out of the books that were opened. All that we might seek to know of ages to come is here unrolled in panoramic succession. And the whole sublime vision is at length closed by the Son of God in the announcement, "Surely I come quickly."

To Christ enthroned, the perfect glory of the Son, we call attention. The incarnation of the Son was incomplete until he entered into his glory. By his ascension the wonder of his body was transferred from earth to heaven. The opening scene of this revelation is a repetition of that on Sermon, line for line; the sun splendor of his face and form; his limbs of liquid light; the unearthly whiteness of his raiment; his attendants out of the millions of the dead, each in his own distance; the empurpled mount, the intelligent converse, the contemplated drama of Calvary, the atmosphere of divine love which filled the disciples, the majesty of the voice inducting the new law giver, the high priest, the king of men into office as the anointed of God—all this, which transpired on the mount Hermon, was now become the abiding expression of the incarnate Son.

The same person who is now seen in the heights of Godhead was seen in the "Holy Mount." Between that time and this forty years have passed, but he abides a man, unconsumed in eternity. His countenance, form and dress are all his own. We see the eternity into which he has gone. His manhood has now a divine quality, his Godhead a human expression. The inheritance that was his own by natural right he now resumes as an award due him, the one mediator. This insures to us forever the shelter of the one offering, and constitutes the throne a throne of grace, in the midst of which is the "Lamb as it had been slain." The atonement is seen at the highest point of the universe, the throne becomes an altar, and the whole universe a tabernacle of God for men.

"I heard," says St. John, "the voice of angels, cherubims, elders, ten thousand times ten thousand, saying, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing; and every creature in heaven, earth and the sea, say Amen!"

What boundless wealth to mankind is there in that form, in that place, to be used by the Holy Spirit in changing us "into the same image, from glory to glory!" We are not only immortal, but in these sublime periods the very style of our immortality is seen. The glorified Son holds the new covenant for his race; all its provisions have now the breadth and power of the resurrection.

II. It is now that the official installation of the Spirit is revealed, and his princely investiture by the Son as the one administrator of the New Testament in his blood. Here we have the glory of his dispensation as it speaks from heaven, "Hear him." He gives permanent force to the incarnation through all time. He gives personal application to it. He is the spirit of adoption. He gives apostolic expression to the church, and is the cohesive attraction of its life. "Ubi spiritus, ibi ecclesia." All the formulas of law and gospel are by him. In the Acts of the Apostles, in the Epistles, and throughout the New Testament, to the very end of the canon, he maintains the divinity and glory of the Old Testament in all their influence and beauty.

He has charged human speech with a divine power. He convicts and creates by the word. By his tongue of fire he reaches every human heart, wherever there is an "ear to hear." He translates the slaves of sin into the sons of God. He delivers the nations from the thraldom of darkness and brings them into "the kingdom of God's dear Son." He reveals, abides, transforms. He is full of sympathy, rebuke, warning and encouragement for the churches in Asia. He is aggressive against sensuality, the doctrines of Balaam, the lukewarm and the false. He lays bare the depths of Satan, and knows the mind of God.

He is full of reward to them "that overcome;" the "tree of life" in the paradise of God, the "hidden manna," "the New Name," "the Morning Star," "the white raiment;" "I will make him that overcomes a pillar in the temple of my God." He shall sit enthroned with Christ.

III. But God "rejoices in the habitable parts of his earth, and his delights are with the sons of men," and in this Apocalypse he reveals to us the church in its final triumph—"with me in my throne." What a golden company, in the light of his glory, are those bought by his blood! By their testimony, co-operative with the Spirit, the kingdom of Christ is to be advanced against all the powers of evil. By preaching the Word only, with its imprisoned wisdom, life and love, the world, the flesh and the devil are to be conquered.

Christ has humanized all these divine qualities, and they are all now available to the man of God in the unrelenting force of the Word. The king now speaks through his embassadors. They constitute "the ministry of reconciliation." All things are now possible by prayer, by patient endurance, by joyful suffering to him that believeth. The world is their field. What room! what resource! what inspiration! as they hear the rallying notes of their divine Head, "Even as I have overcome." High above all else are heard these letters of life and death, these voices of honor and shame, as they linger among the arches of the Cathedral of Patmos. Sinai, with its trump, never uttered the syllables of God more searchingly. There sings through them a divine support. At that hour the fierce crucible of Roman persecution lay just in advance of the church. For full 300 years after no saint of God expected to die a natural death. But of this period was formed that noble army of the martyrs that conquered the empire for Christ. "Their works follow them." Indeed, this divine epic is full of these conflicts and darkened histories of the church, in its encounters with the political powers, the wealth and pride of this world, and with the unbelief and enmity of the human heart against God. The life of Christianity is a battle unrelieved. It is now, and ever will be, nothing less than what it ever has been. It must needs win its crown only by the arts the Savior himself won his.

Yet still beyond these storms there is a calm, an expanse of peace—Eden, where all is life. There "the spirits of the just made perfect" move in blessed and perpetual harmony. Their warfare is ended!

There crowns and palms and thrones await the conquerors of earth, and the whole company of the redeemed becomes "a habitation of God through the Spirit."

"I see a world of spirits bright,
Who reap the pleasures there!
They all are robed in spotless white,
And conquering palms they bear.
Adorn'd by their Redeemer's grace,
They close pursue the Lamb,
And every shining front displays
The unutterable name."

The Great Exposition.

After three years of preparation the World's Columbian Exposition is about to close the period of its creation. Only one month will intervene before the formal opening. Thirty days will be devoted to installation, and then the public will be asked to see and render its verdict. So much has been said of the Fair, and so many million words have been written concerning it, that many intent after the truth have unconsciously come to misjudge its character and scope. The original plans were so broad that the world inclined to the belief that they could not be followed to a success. And yet for a year the rule has been rather to compress than to expand. To the Director General and Chief of Departments was assigned the arduous task of building within Jackson Park space for the display of all the wonders of the world. How well this task has been performed will be demonstrated when the gates are thrown open May 1.

Over 900 carloads of exhibits arrived at Jackson Park last week. Not only have the cars arrived, but they have been distributed among the various departments, their contents unloaded, and empties returned. To accomplish this work, a thoroughly equipped transportation department has been required.

Although the highest point reached in carload receipts for any one day as yet only approximates 200, the department is capable of handling, with its present force, at least 500 cars per day. This amount of exhibits has not been reached as yet, but, from the increase in this week's receipts, during April it is expected that the daily arrival of exhibits will exceed 500 cars. If put to its utmost capacity, the department can handle 1,000 cars per day.

It is impossible to arrive at the actual number of exhibits contained in 900 cars which arrived this week. One authority on the subject estimated that the average was about thirty packages per car, although many cars contained only one exhibit, and some of the exhibits came in upon two cars, so large were they. Computing thirty packages to the car, there came into the park during the week 27,000 packages by railroad, not to mention the various packages delivered by the express companies.

In the park there are nearly thirty miles of track now in operation, which will accommodate 1,000 cars, and give room for handling 1,000 more without interfering with unloading and disposing of empties.

Figures regarding freight charges accruing upon the immense mass of exhibits received up to date have not been given out. It is safe to say that the transportation charges for construction material and exhibits handled into the park up to date would astonish a Croesus. Not less than 32,000 cars of building material have been handled by the Transportation Department in the past two years, and as the major part of the exhibits have come from long distances, the charges have been proportionately heavy.

This week's shipments include six cars to the Fisheries Department, and nearly two hundred cars to the Manufactures Building, about fifty cars to the Mines Building, and as many to the Transportation Exhibits Department; thirty-five cars to Machinery Hall, eleven cars to the Government Building, and twenty-three cars to the Forestry Building.

The work of installation in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building is well advanced, and there is every reason to believe that the work will be completed by May 1. There will then be presented to the eyes of visitors one of the greatest surprises in all the history of the arts of peace, for the handicraft of man will be massed together in the most attractive environment and under conditions well calculated to enhance the curiosity and interest which they would naturally excite. It is no exaggeration to say that in the department of manufactures will be seen the greatest, the most comprehensive and most thoroughly representative show of the tangible results of human progress that the century has witnessed. This department will present the best and most characteristic products of the world's ingenuity, as indicated in the following assignments that have been made to foreign countries, whose representatives are now engaged in placing their exhibits in the most attractive manner within the several inclosures allotted to them. These will be arranged and installed on a scale of elaboration never attained in previous expositions, and the interior of the Manufactures Building will present the most thoroughly international display, promoted by a spirit of friendly rivalry such as the world has never seen. Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Japan, Belgium, Russia, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Persia, Servia, Siam, Greece, Netherlands, Switzerland, Denmark, Canada, Norway, Turkey, Hungary, China, Korea, Brazil, Mexico, Equador, Venezuela, Chili, Peru, Columbia, Hayti, Argentine Republic, Salvador, New South Wales, Uruguay, India, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, San Domingo, Porto Rico, Cuba, Bolivia, Paraguay, Jamaica, Guatemala, Ceylon, British Honduras, British Guiana, Trinidad, Windward Islands, Bermudas, Barbadoes, Bahamas, Mauritius, Leeward Islands, Bulgaria. The indications are that the American section will not suffer in comparison with these.

In the Department of Transportation there are over two and one-half miles of track, upon which locomotives and cars are to stand. These are taken into the building by means of a great transfer table, which handles promptly and quickly passenger cars seventy-five feet in length and the heaviest locomotives.

Every effort has been made by the department to place exhibits so as to facilitate installation. The completeness of the exhibit has increased from day to day, and even at this date some interesting and important application is made almost daily.

In all the other departments of the Exposition progress is reported by the chiefs of the different bureaus, and the public is promised on the opening day a completeness of installation that will surprise the many doubtful ones.

The argument has been advanced by those who have taken part in other great expositions in Europe, that the time is too short to permit of the installation of exhibits, with anything approaching a degree of completeness. But the management have answered this question by stating that the American methods are so much more rapid than European, that no exact comparison can be instituted. They say that what in Europe would require six months will be done in America in two. H. B. C.

Chicago, March 30.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. L. S. Jones, Canton, Miss., March 27: "Our work at Canton is progressing grandly. The whole church seems to be taking on new life. Congregations are large and enthusiastic. Our Sabbath-school is doing fine work. The prayer meeting is well attended, and very spiritual. Thirty-seven have been received into the church since Conference. Finances are fully up. Our lines have certainly fallen to us in pleasant places. We expect to give a whole week soon to the ADVOCATE. Pray for us."

Rev. J. A. Parker, Homer, March 27: "We are now in the fifth week of a protracted meeting. Have had the efficient help of Bro. Harper, of Ruston. Bro. Blocker is still with me. The work is growing. The Baptist brethren begun a protracted meeting yesterday on the next block. Homer is very much stirred on the subject of religion. Seven conversions have been certified to us. Twelve have joined the church to date. The good work in the membership is inestimable. Bro. Sheppard has helped as his other duties permitted. There is no talk of closing the meeting."

Rev. C. M. Crossley, Brookhaven circuit, Mississippi Conference, March 25: "Our first quarterly meeting was held at Bethel, March 18 and 19, Bro. R. S. Woodward in the chair. Only two of our churches were represented, and we were somewhat disappointed; but, as disappointments sometimes prove a blessing in disguise, we did not complain. We are behind with our pastoral work, owing to sickness. We have a large and inviting field of labor, and we are digging away as best we can; but have more invitations to preach than we can possibly accept. As this is our first year in the itinerancy, we feel that there is much for us to learn; but we thank God for such promises as, 'Ask, and it shall be given you,' and again, 'If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not.' The burden of our hearts is, that we may have wisdom to guide our people aright. Brethren, pray for me and my work."

Rev. H. W. Wallace, Covington, La., March 28: "Our first Quarterly Conference was held on Feb. 18 and 19, at Slidell. We were in a protracted meeting at that place at the time. Bro. Partridge was with us, and preached two days for us. We had large congregations from first to last. The Lord was with us to own and to bless. Church revived, and several were added. We closed Wednesday last; members to be received into full connection next regular appointment. Last Sunday, March 26, was my regular appointment for Mandeville. Large congregations. Received into the church ten adults, baptizing four of them. We have raised and forwarded to Bro. T. L. Mellen $12, to be applied to liquidating mission debt. Have trimmed up trees, purchased and erected a bell for the Mandeville Church; total cost of improvements about $80." At Covington we are repairing our church, and expect to have the same painted for meeting of second Quarterly Conference. Will expend about $150 upon the same. The Lord is greatly blessing us upon this charge, and, brother (I address you in the singular), will you not appeal to your people to send me a contribution toward building a church at Slidell? We have a band of forty-six little workers and the ladies at work in this cause. Send amount either direct to me, or W. O. Wilder, at Slidell. I think if the church is built this year, Slidell will take a station's place the next; so, brother or sister, send us a contribution, and may God bless you, yours, and your gifts! Pray for us."

Rev. J. J. Smylie, Wilkinson circuit, March 19: "We are living in the old Bethel parsonage. With the exception of one year, it has been a long time since a preacher lived here. Things, however, have put on a new appearance. The old plastering has been torn off and nice new ceiling put in its place, and furnished nicely throughout. Fences around yard, garden and pasture have been put up; stable, crib and buggy house built. In all, the good people of the circuit have increased the value of their parsonage three or four hundred dollars. Our presiding elder says it is the most comfortable and desirable preacher's home in the district. Concerning our reception, Doctor, I will take your modest hint in regard to storms. I am not going to say anything about the half a dozen baked chickens, hams, cakes, 'pies and things,' nor the pantry full of just such things as a preacher's family have need of; but will just say that we were warmly welcomed to our new field of labor. Such a welcome and reception we have never received before. There are many good people on this work; and when I say good, I mean it in its true acceptation. Noble, good people. We have here at Bethel, ten miles in the country, a regular Wednesday afternoon prayer meeting, well attended, which has been in successful operation for several years. As a general thing, people in the country think it is too great an undertaking to run a regular weekly prayer meeting. The brethren here say that they do not see how they could get along without it. And, Doctor, it is a very poor get-along anywhere without this source of spiritual uplifting. We have also a monthly itinerant prayer meeting, which lasts all day, and these are occasions of great refreshing from God's presence. All day, once each month, we tarry at a throne of divine Grace for power and blessing, in consequence of which the church is alive. Our first Quarterly Conference has come and gone, but will be long remembered, for it was a season of great spiritual power. Our beloved presiding elder is certainly a man of God, and his successes prove that he is eminently qualified for the high and important office which he occupies in the church. When he comes he brings a ray of sunshine, and leaves his impress on all our hearts. He meets all his appointments, and is thoroughly alive to all the interests of the church. We feel safe under the leadership of such a man as Bro. Johnston, and when he shouts, 'Forward!' we obey, for we feel like that there is something back of the command more than human power. He is very happy and hopeful over the bright prospects for a glorious year's work all over the district. The contract to build a tabernacle at Old Bethel Camp Grounds has been let, and it will be ready for our meeting commencing Thursday before the fifth Sunday in July. There are a number of tents already erected, and many more to be built soon. We expect a glorious time on the occasion of our camp meeting; everybody invited to attend. We expect to have ample accommodation for all visitors who may attend. There will be no gate fee."

Rev. J. M. Davenport, P. C., Saltillo charge, North Mississippi Conference, March 25: "This is our field. If we discharge every duty incumbent upon us as preacher and pastor, and the charge supports us liberally, there is no occasion, much less Scripture, for blowing it. We preach because 'necessity is laid upon us.' The church supports us for the same reason; the Christ spirit actuate both; 'the love of Christ constraineth us' to minister rather than be ministered unto, and the church 'to give than to receive.' When both church and pastor have done all Christ commanded, they have only done their duty, and should say, 'We are unprofitable servants.' The obligation is as binding on one as the other, and the church can, with as much propriety (and Scripture), blow the preacher through the ADVOCATE as the preacher the church. To occupy any place in the church (be it in single or double harness), and sounding a trumpet for 'self,' or 'anybody else,' is opposed to the spirit of Christ. The columns of a weekly 'paper' is not a 'market place;' but it is the most public way of sounding praise possible. Duty needs no approbation; loyalty to Christ wants no commendation except that which comes from God. The preacher or church that is agonizing beneath the weight of souls, and wearing the yoke of the lowly Nazarene, receives not honor of men. 'How can you believe which receive honor one of another?' A Christian gives because Jesus says so, and, to be acceptable to him, it must be done in his way—in secret, as unto him. Our Savior said some very plain things about 'being seen,' 'being heard.' The prominence of 'self' in the church is appalling; the greatest barrier to-day in the way of vital religion is this strife after reputation. It has dwarfed the pulpit, paralyzed the pew, and shorn the church of much power. Dr. Sawyer turned the eye of the church inward, and discovered much of the world. Doubtless, if some godly man, fired by the Holy Ghost, would institute a search for the 'egos,' he would find not all, even in the pulpit, 'crucified with Christ' and 'dead to the world.' Have we forgotten 'that he that would be greatest among you, let him be your servant?' 'I am the vine, ye are the branches,' expresses the scriptural way of success. As some one has said, 'It is not God alone'—that would mean human idleness; or 'we' alone—that would mean human presumption. It is not even 'we and God'—that would mean human pride. It is, 'God and we.' 'My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.' We need more of the 'touch of God' in our letters that appear from time to time in the ADVOCATE. There must be more 'abiding in the Lord,' 'confiding in his Word,' honoring the Holy Ghost, and 'lifting up Jesus,' in what we publish to the world, if men are to be drawn to Christ. 'There is a time for all things' that glorify God, and, assuredly, magnifying 'self' or a 'church' for doing her duty is not in keeping with the teachings and spirit of the great Head. There is no room in the 'narrow way' for 'self' or 'reputation.' Let us keep everything in the background except 'Christ and him crucified.' If we glory, let us glory in God. If we have sorrow, trials, or tribulations, 'tell them to Jesus alone.' Let us rather look forward to the Canaan of perfect love to God and immortal souls than back to the 'flesh pots,' 'garlic and onions of Egypt;' doing all things 'in singleness of heart as unto Christ.' Christ is with us, and we shall come out conqueror, and more than conqueror, through him who loved us and washed us from our sins in his own precious blood. To whom be glory forever! Have faith for us."

AN EMPTY PRAYER.

BY KATHARINE C. PENFIELD.

I breathed a prayer one day.
I had nor faith nor love to hear it on;
It had no thought of God, but words alone;
I sent it on its way.

It rose on heavy wing,
But could not pierce the walls that shut it in;
It seemed oppressed by weight as though of sin.
It fell, a useless thing.

And as it slowly fell,
So sank my heart in deep humility.
I longed to burst my fetters and be free;
I longed in Christ to dwell.

I crushed it where it lay
And, lo! from out its fragments seemed to grow,
As incense rising from an altar glow,
The blessed power to pray.

The fragrance of my prayer,
It floated now on wings of faith and love;
It reached the Father on his throne above;
It bore my spirit there.

Henceforth, be this my strife:
That all my failures, lying at my feet,
May be but rounds by which I climb to meet
My higher, fuller life.

A Pure Church.

This seems now to be a great need—one grand essential for the success of the cause of Christ. Some are writing about and calling for it; more are earnestly desiring it; perhaps many more are languishing and despondent because it does not come. The want is a great desideratum; the possession would be perfect attainment.

After this diagnosis of the condition of Zion, the doctors assign the cause and prescribe the remedy. To them the cause is patent: "Cheap membership," and "Failure to enforce discipline." The remedy is simple: "Raise the standard," and "Execute discipline."

Now, in the church of Christ the standard of membership has been fixed, definitely and unchangeably. It is simple and easy. We may say it is cheap, too—"without money and without price," and without previous qualification. "Faith in Christ as a personal Savior."

This church also executes its own discipline. By its inherent virtue and vital power it educates, develops, purifies and perfects all who remain vitally connected with it. By the same force and process it cuts off all unworthy members, as decayed and rotten branches. A divine pruning is continually going on, and this church is pure and kept pure. There is no need here for doorkeepers to guard the door and elevate the standard of membership. There is no need here for overseers, with their lictors, to lash the backs of the unworthy and purge this church.

But it is the Methodist Church for whose purity some are in travail, and for which this diagnosis and prescription have been given. This church is one of the great organizations of the working forces of Christians who hold a commission to preach the gospel, administer the sacraments of Christ, and labor for the salvation of the world. Its mission is to bring men to faith in Christ, and thus into the church of Christ. All, no doubt, are in sympathy with the desire that the Methodist Church should be pure. It is better for all men to be pure. Purity gives power, efficiency and success. There may be, there is no doubt, a great deal of impurity in the church, and because of this its success may be hindered; but is the prescription given the proper one, the remedy proposed best?

One suggestion is, membership is too cheap, and the remedy is, elevate the standard. The great object of the church, it seems, should be to get members, and to retain members. The success of the church is most hopeful when persons join it and place themselves under its care. When this is not done, the prospect of success is reduced to a minimum. When it is, there is, at least, a promise of success.

In view of its great mission to bring men to Christ, the only rational condition of membership is simply an agreement of the individual with the church in its design, and a promise of co-operation. "A desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from sin." When an applicant presents himself for membership, with this desire, the pastor can do nothing else, legitimately, but to receive him. To do anything else would be inconsistent, unreasonable, and presumptuous. Inconsistent, because this is just what he has been laboring to persuade the person to do, and has urged him to do, that he might avail himself of the help of the church; unreasonable, because it would be to turn him away, and send him out into a wicked world to get better and prepare himself for membership; presumptuous, because it would assume that the Methodist Church is a sanctuary into whose sacred precincts no unclean shall enter. But this makes membership too cheap, and unworthy persons come into the church. The remedy is, raise the standard; make the conditions harder and the terms more exacting. This might keep some out; but would it prevent improper persons from coming into the church? It would keep out the ignorant, the timid; those who feel the burden of sin, and know they are unworthy. But designing persons, therefore the most unworthy and corrupt, those who scruple not to be hypocrites and false at heart, can assume and presume to come up to any standard, and cross over any bars the pastor may put up. They are admitted, of course, and under the sanctions of such an elevated standard they are recognized as worthy members. If we want fish, would it not be better to throw out a net and catch both bad and good, than to fish with a hook baited only for gars?

There is not much hope of purifying the Methodist Church under this regime, while by it its efficiency and success would be limited. Besides, a pastor standing at the church door with flaming sword turning every way to guard the entrance, is not his normal position. He should be there rather to open, invite and welcome.

The enforcement of discipline is prescribed as the means of purifying the Methodist Church. This is urged by some with all the earnestness and zeal that full faith in its absolute efficiency can inspire. To cut off, by expulsion, after a season of trial, all who violate the rules of the church, it is urged, will give us a pure church. This course might cut off or cure all the dancing girls and boys in the church. But would that make it pure? We know that the worst sinners, the most corrupt characters, the most vicious class in the church are beyond the reach of such discipline. The covetous, the self-righteous, those who have the form, but deny the power of godliness, the proud, the worldly-minded, the base and corrupt at heart in the church, are incased in a covering no pastor's knife of discipline can penetrate. He may guard, with sacred care and fiery zeal, the rules of the church, and with his sword cut off the rebellious hand laid upon them. This would rid the church of the "publicans and harlots," the openly wicked, but the horde of "Pharisees and hypocrites," if they be in the church, would remain. Christ gave preference to the former, and recognized them as being much nearer the kingdom of heaven. There is but little hope from this of a pure church; and if the necessity of a pure church is as great and far-reaching as some seem to think and urge, and this prescription is the only means of obtaining it, then we can only say, "Be merciful to us sinners."

The "Jacked-up" Sermon.

If I am not greatly mistaken, our young preachers of this day and time are "jacking up" too much with books of illustrations and quotations. In some cases these helps, so plentiful now, form the warp and most of the woof of their sermons. These helps are used, perhaps abused, by young preachers in all the churches. In some cases it seems the sermon was framed to show off the quotations. Some young preachers have an awkward and bungling way of fitting them in, and some fit them in nicely. In some instances, the quotations constitute one-half, in some two-thirds, some three-fourths, and some nine-tenths of the discourse. The quotations, I am glad to say, are fine—as fine as "split silk." When the joints are not well made, or are made out of raw and ragged material, as often happens, the contrast between the fine material used and the rough work done is apparent, even to the uninitiated. I am sorry to see our young men "padding" their sermons in this way—"padding" until their sermons are "fluffy" and as light as chaff. They are chaff; at least the few grains of wheat in them are all borrowed. Now and then I hear a sermon with from fifty to one hundred quotations in it, and the text is the only quotation from the Word of God. In some cases the text is really only a pretext to get in these fine things. These illustrations and quotations are taken from science, history, poetry, biography, and largely from books of anecdotes. They make some people gape and wonder and stare and laugh and cry, and send them home full of admiration for the breadth and depth of the learning of the young preacher, for his eloquence and erudition, and wondering how one small head can hold so much. Those who "jack up" in this way are, generally, small headed. "The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than a two-edged sword." One need not limit the term "Word of God" to the printed, written or spoken word. It means that and more too. And yet somehow there is great power in the Word of God written, printed and repeated. The sermon that has the most Scripture in it contains the most truth. It is truth exhibited according to God's formula. The Spirit, the Holy Ghost, may use science, poetry, history, philosophy, biography, anecdotes, and the like of that. I will not say he does not use these things, for I do not know that he does not. I do know that his main weapon is the Word of God. With this he pierces, goes in between the joints of the harness, between soul and spirit, into the very bones and marrow of men, and finds out, discovers, lays bare the thoughts and intents of the heart.

A sermon crammed full of fine quotations from the books will attract more attention, create greater admiration and receive far greater praise from the average congregation than one filled with apt and appropriate quotations from the Scriptures. Most people had rather have their fancy tickled than to have their hearts pricked; their imaginations excited than to have their consciences stirred. Some fifteen years ago I had a young preacher friend who was considered a fine preacher, eloquent, beautiful and all of that. He was praised by everybody and was much sought after. Lame! how he adorned his speeches—they were not sermons—with poetry, fiction, philosophy, geology, anatomy and physiology and specially with astronomy. It was wonderful to hear him. He was the center of attraction. The cross could not be seen for looking at the preacher—the young prodigy. Few, if any, souls were led to Christ by his ministry. Those who did come joined the preacher instead of joining Christ and his church. That young man got under conviction, spent quite a while in penitence and prayer, and resolved that from that day on all his quotations and illustrations would be taken from the Word of God, and that he would not quote any other author or book in the pulpit. So he began, and straightway the power of God fell on him, and on his ministry, and on God's Word spoken by him, and to-day he is one among the most useful, instructive and powerful evangelists on this continent. Tens of thousands of souls have been led to Christ by him. I have heard him often since this change, and never once have I heard him draw an illustration from any other source than the Bible, or quote any author or book except the Word of God and a few hymns. Perhaps, this man has gone too far the other way; maybe he has gone to the other extreme, if it be possible for a preacher to be extreme in using God's God's holy Word. He is emphatically a man of one book. He does not belong to my church; but he is a man of God and mighty in the Scriptures. In one sense of the word he is not a great preacher, and yet in another, perhaps the best sense, he is a great preacher. The woof and warp of all his sermons is the inspired Word of God. The preacher is little and Christ and the cross are great. I have never since this change came over my friend heard one word said or seen one line printed about his eloquence or learning or things of that kind. He is a flame of fire everywhere he goes. Sinners are convicted, souls converted and Christians edified. In the true sense he is both an eloquent and learned preacher of the gospel; learned in God's Word and eloquent in presenting salvation by faith in Christ. Perhaps the transformation inside of this man had more or as much to do with his success as a change in his style of preaching. This happened to Mr. Wesley. It might be well for the church and for the cause of God in the world if the same were to happen to some thousands of preachers now.

Preachers ought not to be afraid to use the Word of God in preaching. More Scripture and less science, more truth and less poetry, more faith and less fancy, will help all our sermons.

The Children.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me space in your columns to say a few words concerning evangelizing the children. Paul says, "Ye see your calling, brethren." I suppose he means that we see our calling by the direction in which we are influenced to go by the good Spirit.

Christ was led by the Spirit while in his mission on earth, and the apostle assures us that "as many as are led by the Spirit of God are the sons of God." (Rom. viii, 14.) Therefore, feeling satisfied that I am led by the good Spirit, I will hereby give to your readers a few thoughts that have burdened my mind for some time, and maybe what I shall say will serve to call, in some measure, at least, the attention of the brethren to a closer consideration of the subject, if nothing more. In a recent issue of your paper I read what Bishop Keener said under the caption, "Must we lose our children?" The article was copied by the editor of our Texas Advocate, and I read it again, and then called the attention of my congregation to it.

I really feel like if I could go up and down this world and spend my life in preaching the simple story of the cross to millions of children, the height of my religious vocation would be reached, so far as preaching the gospel in this world is concerned. The number of children in one station or circuit does not satisfy me. I feel like I imagine Mr. Wesley felt when he said, "The world is my parish," and I also feel like Peter ought to have felt when Christ said to him, "Feed my lambs." I love Methodism with her grand itinerant system, but I am persuaded to believe that we, as a church, fail to give sufficient attention to the conversion of the children. "Must we lose our children?" The ear of Southern Methodism—yea, all Protestantism—ought to catch the thrilling vibrations coming from that timely and prophetical sentence. And the reply should be, No. If we do, we will lose our church. Under Protestant administration a nation can be born unto God quicker by feeding the lambs than by any other process. Romanism gained her hold on so large a portion of the human race by educating her children early in the doctrines to which they continue to adhere through succeeding generations. Christ gave the children a great deal of prominence during the establishment of his kingdom among men. He loved them, he illustrated by them, he blessed them, and then left special instruction for them. Methodism began her mission among the children of Mrs. Susannah Wesley's family, and when we get to the proper appreciation of these fundamental facts, upon which the future success of church and governments depend, and turn our attention more directly to the children, it won't take long to bring this world back to God.

I am but a young preacher; but I have seen hundreds of precious children rejoicing in God their Savior, and have taken hundreds of them into the church, as the charges I have served both in Mississippi and Texas well know, and I do feel enthusiastic on the subject.

But some will ask, Does he want to be an evangelist? Yes, I will answer, if I could be what you might call a preacher whose entire time could be given to the children, I had rather be that than anything else, provided I could have the endorsement of my church. But I am not a believer in this abnormal way of doing things. If the General Conference ever sees fit to enact any law by which to recognize an evangelistic office in Methodist economy—more than she already has—I think church authorities will be as fully competent to put the right men in the right places then as they are now. I think the church should become responsible for evangelists in their work, and they should be responsible to the church. Timothy labored in obedience to Paul. As to my individual notion with reference to preaching to the children, I reckon it is original, to some extent, as it was my custom in my childhood days to assemble the children and preach to them.

It is a delight for me to announce to the children into whose homes these lines perchance may fall, that the children have no better friends than their faithful pastors, and, thank God, whether we preach in America or China, we can feed the lambs. Every pastor should hold special meetings and preach special sermons to the children. Pastors should not hide the Bread of Life from the little ones by preaching the philosophy of men. The gospel of Christ is quite plain and practical. We have no commission whatever to preach anything but the simple words of our Master.

In conclusion, let me say that I hope the Orphan Home Committee meeting held at Jackson, Miss., was successful in devising some plans whereby to meet with the accomplishment of the enterprise.

Will also say to my brethren of North Mississippi that I have a nice little western station and am doing well. God bless them all!

The Unbaptized Infant.

The great prelate of the Catholic Church in America, Cardinal Gibbons, in expounding the doctrine of his church on the state of an infant dying unbaptized, teaches this strange doctrine: "Though the church (the Roman Church), in obedience to God's Word, declares that unbaptized infants are excluded from the kingdom of heaven, it should not hence be concluded that they are consigned to the place of the reprobate. None are condemned to the torments of the damned but such as merit divine vengeance by their personal sins. All that the church holds on this point is, that unregenerate children are deprived of the beatific vision, or the possession of God, which constitutes the essential happiness of the blessed. Now, between the supreme bliss of heaven and the torment of the reprobate there is a very wide margin. All admit the condition of the unbaptized child is better than non-existence. There are some Catholics, writers of distinction, who even assert that the unbaptized infants enjoy a certain degree of natural beatitude—that is, a happiness which is based on the natural knowledge and love of God."

It seems that it would be a strange kind of a Savior, who is said to be all goodness and mercy, that would hold an innocent, helpless child responsible for the negligence of its parents, or for something it could not help.

It is still more strange the Savior of the world, while on earth, would compare the kingdom of heaven to a little child, and then exclude it from the kingdom of heaven because it happened not to be baptized. Say a Catholic mother were to die immediately after the birth of her child, as many do, and in a few minutes the child were to die also, before it could be baptized; or say there were no one who would perform the rite, then the mother and child would be forever separated through all ages. The mother would enjoy perfect bliss and the child only partial happiness. The faithful might get the child with the mother by their suffrage, or stop the mother on her way from purgatory to the regions of bliss with the child in its partial state of happiness. The place of perfect bliss, the place of partial happiness for the unbaptized child, the place of purgatory and the place of the reprobate, are all clearly taught by the Roman Catholic Church, and there is not a single Scripture text to prove the existence of two of these, and the only place there is any doctrine found is in the teachings of the Catholic Church of Rome. The Church of Rome has invented as many strange doctrines as she has images and rites.

WILLIAM HORACE.

Pay That Thou Owest.

In the ADVOCATE, of March 2, I noticed a letter containing this expression, "I am yet to learn that I am compelled to pay an assessment placed upon me by the stewards without my consent."

The Discipline provides for these assessments to be made by the consent of the members. Paragraph 309, page 181, says: "Each member of the church is expected to pay according to his or her several ability for the support of the ministry . . . They, (the stewards) shall ascertain how much each member is able and willing to pay in the installment fixed by the stewards, and whatever amount each member agrees to pay, he or she shall be under solemn obligation to pay, and can only be released from this obligation by order of the stewards or by vote of the Church Conference for good cause shown."

Now, we are not writing to or for the one that used this expression; for, of course, she, being a preacher's wife, pays her assessment, if any is imposed upon her, either with or without her consent. However, there are a great many people who do not realize the obligations of church membership, nor their duty to God in the payment of assessments. They seem to think all that is necessary for them to do in order to reach the "haven of eternal rest" is to unite themselves with the church and then drift quietly along down the current of time.

What is the cause of so many of our plans to Christianize the heathen world being thwarted? It is the lack of debt-paying religion. I say debt, because I consider it one of the most solemn and obligatory debts one can owe.

But are the fields at home all clear? Is there nothing in the way in our own civilized and, I had liked to have said, Christianized land? What means this cry for help all over our own country, and from whence cometh it? It is, in a great measure, due to the fact that so many of our people fail to realize their obligation to God and the church.

Again: What is the great cause of such financial depression among our own people? I believe it is because the people are withholding from God what is justly his. And we are taught to render unto God the things that are God's, and are assured in so doing that we shall be rewarded according to our rendering. If we would so do, I verily believe instead of our lands being cursed, our crops being blighted and our prosperity so decreased, that God would bless the work of our hands. Our barns would be filled with plenty, and prosperity would again come upon us. May the Holy Ghost enlighten the people on this point!

Pray for the Teachers.

Often have I wondered why preachers seem to take so little interest in our public schools. At places where there are high schools or colleges, it is quite a common thing to hear ministers pray God's blessings upon the "institution of learning at this place;" but how seldom does one hear a prayer for a little country school!

I have been a country teacher for several years, and have often felt that I needed the prayers of God's people in behalf of my school. Feeling thus, I have listened to hear some little prayer wafted above for the public schools of our land; but, alas! my listening has been in vain, and my desire remains unsatisfied. Why is it? Can it be that God's ministers have never realized the close relation that exists between the church and the public school? Do not the circuit rider and the pedagogue deal with the same people? Are they not both teachers by actual example as well as by precept? And surely neither one can be a true teacher without the love of God shining constantly and steadily into his heart.

The pedagogue deals principally with the children; the preacher with the grown-up people. One takes the piece of clay while it is yet pliable, and molds and fashions it into a character that is hard for the other to change. Is one position more responsible than the other?

All true Christians believe in the efficiency of prayer. If they would unite in sending up daily petitions to the heavenly Father in behalf of the public schools—in the country as well as in the towns and cities—what might not be accomplished! The preacher would gain divine strength by it; the teachers would be inspired with purer, holier motives, and bow quickly would the students catch the new inspiration! Their highest emotions being appealed to, what glorious results would follow!

Let all who read this pray earnestly and faithfully for the public schools and their teachers.

Ministers' Institute.

The Ministers' Institute of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, convened in the Methodist Church, Starkville, Miss., Mar. 15. Dr. T. C. Wier, P. E., was elected president, and J. H. Mitchell, secretary. Five of the pastors of the district were not present. Bros. G. W. Bachman, colporter, and Sunday-school agent; J. M. Barnes, P. C., Prairie circuit, Aberdeen district, were with us and took part in the discussions. Preaching was a prominent feature of the institute. The opening sermon, preached by Bro. Amos Kendall, I did not hear, but had good reports of it. The sermons of Bros. J. M. Barnes, R. M. Standefer and J. M. Harrison were all good to the use of edifying. God's presence was manifested at each service, and our hearts were stirred. The closing sermon, by Bro. R. I. Allen, I did not hear, but felt sure he gave the audience something to think of. The papers and addresses of the brethren upon the various subjects were all creditable, showing thought and investigation. Many suggestions made if heeded will, no doubt, be productive of fruit. Bro. W. S. Harrison's paper, "The Literature of the Church and the Importance of Its Circulation," was very good indeed. The Institute requested him to furnish the ADVOCATE with a copy for publication (has been published.—ED.) Bro. J. M. Standefer's talk, "The Pastor and the Young People of his Flock," impressed us with the great responsibility resting upon the pastor. He further showed that responsibility rested upon others as well, for said: "The pastor is powerless with the young people unless he has the well-qualified endorsement of the parents."

Bro. D. L. Cogdell, in a paper, "Pastoral Visiting," showed from the Word of God that all pastors should visit their people as often as possible, practicing some of his methods. They may work well, for he is a model pastor. Bro. Amos Kendall, in his talk, "How the Minister Is to Keep from Crossing the Dead Line," I think answered the question correctly. He said: He must (1) refrain from riding hobbies. (2) Preach new sermons. (3) Preach short sermons. (4) Preach on a variety of subjects. (5) Pray short prayers in public. (6) Read everything within reading. One fact was apparent. He has not, nor is there any danger of him crossing the dead line.

Bro. R. M. Harrison presented a strong paper, "On the Importance of Preaching the Doctrines of the Church." Bro. A. P. Sage gave us a good talk on "Sanctification: the Bible View of the Subject." Bro. J. W. Dorman's paper, "On the Prayer Meeting, and How to Conduct It," ought to do good. A paper, "How Can the Pastor Utilize All the Members of His Flock in the Advancement of Church Work," was also presented. There followed the prescuting of these leaders free discussion of the subjects by all the brethren.

The institute was a decided success, and we decided to hold one each year, making the presiding elder of the district permanent president, whose business it shall be to arrange the program from year to year. Also resolutions of thanks to the kind people of Starkville, the institute adjourned to meet next year at Brooksville, Miss., the time set by the presiding elder.

J. H. MITCHELL, Sec.

A religious exchange says: "Teachers of infant classes should use only such hymns as the little ones can comprehend, and be sure that they do comprehend them. A lady related how she heard from little lips the singing refrain, 'And we'll all smell the holy!' She afterward discovered that the line read, 'And wo'll all swell the harmony.' Another lady says she was visited by some of her own little scholars on a holiday, who stood before her window and sang with great earnestness a chorus ending with the line, 'Souse round the washrag!' Instead of what she thought she had taught them, 'Sound aloud the watch-cry.' She learned more from them that day than they had learned from her. How many of our infant teachers need to learn the same lesson?"

Afflictions Sanctified.
(Job v, 17-27.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth." (Heb. xii, 6.)

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. God Sanctifies the Present Sorrows of His Submissive Children (vs. 17-21). II. And Delivers Them from Future Afflictions (vs. 22-27).

CENTRAL THOUGHT.—The Chastening of the Lord.

HOME READINGS.

Sunday (April 2)—Afflictions Sanctified. (Job v, 17-27.)
Monday—Blessedness of Affliction. (Psa. cxiv, 1-14.)
Tuesday—The Chastening of Sons. (Heb. xii, 1-11.)
Wednesday—Affliction and Temptation. (Jas. i, 1-17.)
Thursday—Submission to Chastening. (Prov. iii, 1-11.)
Friday—The Lord Delivereth. (Psa. xxxiv, 1-22.)
Saturday—The Shadow of the Almighty. (Psa. xci, 1-16.)

INTRODUCTORY.

Our last lesson gave us the picture of Job pleading with unshaken integrity the repeated attack of Satan, and rebuking with gentle dignity the taunts and reproaches of his wife. Then the narrative tells of the visit of his three friends, who, having heard of his bereavements and afflictions, have come to comfort him. At the sight of his great grief they are speechless, and, sitting down, they mourn with him seven days and seven nights. Touched by this evidence of their sympathy, Job begins to talk, and, like many another man before and since, when he ventured to speak he lost his self-control, and said rash, bitter, and foolish things. There are times when men are in no condition to talk. Job's outbreak seems to his friends almost blasphemous, and they think that he whom they had come to comfort needs reproof and correction. Accordingly, Eliphaz, the venerable patriarch of Teman, a city famed for the wisdom of its inhabitants, undertakes, in a discourse of great beauty and force, to give the needed instruction. His speech takes up the train of the book, ending with the ten verses which have been selected as our lesson. He takes the position that sin is the cause of suffering; that prosperity is an evidence of divine favor, and divine favor is an indication of righteousness, and argues that even in the case of as good a man as Job, affliction is the correction of the Lord administered on account of sin, and to be endured submissively. He concludes his speech with the assurance that, if properly exercised thereby, Job will finally be blessed with prosperity and peace. There is much of truth and beauty in the discourse, and its weakness is found in the conclusion that the mere fact of sorrow is an evidence of personal guilt, and that the degree of sin is indicated by the severity of the affliction. The last verse assures Job that there is no doubt about this, and that it is to his interest to take this view of the case.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—GOD SANCTIFIES THE PRESENT AFFLICTIONS OF HIS SUBMISSIVE CHILDREN.

Ver. 17. "Behold happy is the man whom the Lord correcteth." This verse sounds like the words of our Savior, and might find place among the beatitudes of the sermon on the mount. The fullness of its meaning is found in Heb. xii, 1-12. The correction of God is the correction of a loving father. It indicates his favor and the worth of his soul, and is the means of "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." They who are partakers of his suffering shall be partakers of his glory. (See I. Peter iv, 13.) "Therefore, despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty." Do not murmur, nor be impatient nor rebel. The present affliction is "not joyous, but grievous;" yet in view of the blessedness that follows, be patient and submissive. The peaceable fruits of righteousness will follow them.

Ver. 18. "For he maketh sore and bindeth up." The same hand that makes the wound gently binds it up. The knife is needed, and the hand is not less kind when the blade is used than when the soothing and healing ointment is bound about the wound. He who lovingly hurts also tenderly heals.

Ver. 19. "He shall deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee." Peter wondered if the magnanimity of Christian love would not forgive even seven times (Matt. xviii, 21, 22) and doubtless his idea of helping was as generous. Christ taught that Christian love is inexhaustible—"until seventy times seven." The verse teaches in like manner the infinite goodness of God. The words "six" and "seven" are not intended to limit God's help; but to indicate that his deliverance will be given as often as it is needed. His patience is inexhaustible, his love infinite.

Ver. 20. "In famine he shall deliver thee from death." In this verse are mentioned two of the troubles from which God will preserve his righteous servant. Gaunt famine is subject to him who ties the children of men. (See Psalm xxxvii, 3.) "The power (literally, the hands) of the sword." By a figure of speech the sword, as an agency of destruction, is said to have hands. The famine and the sword are made to do service as the agencies of correction, and are used only when needed. The very providence that takes the afflictions shields us from them unless our perverseness makes them necessary.

Ver. 21. "Thou shalt be hid from the scourge of the tongue." Even from this evil, more deadly than famine, more cruel than the sword, shalt thou be hid. These poetic words of Eliphaz are not to be taken too literally; for before his trials are ended Job will have felt the scourge of the tongues of his friends. But Solomon says: "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." (Prov. xvi, 7.) "Let him who would plead this promise see to it that his tongue is not a scourge to his brethren. The merciful, as a common rule, obtain mercy." (Rev. J. H. Carlisle). Our Savior says: "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." (Matt. vii, 2.)

II.—"AND DELIVERS THEM FROM FUTURE AFFLICTIONS."

Ver. 22. "At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh." Thou shalt rejoice in thy perfect security from these evils, and shalt laugh at their fruitless effort to harm thee. This is a strong expression of perfect security. "A man in a trance saw himself locked up in a house of steel, through the walls of which, as through walls of glass, he could see his enemies assailing him with swords, spears, and bayonets; but his life was safe, for his fortress was locked within. So is the Christian amid all assaults." (Power.)

Ver. 23. "For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field." Thou shalt be as free from the stones as if they had entered into a covenant to be at peace with thee, and not only shall the beasts not destroy thy flocks, but they shall actually befriend and serve thee.

Ver. 24. "Thou shalt know that thy tabernacle shall be in peace." The assurance of divine favor shall not be confined to thy person, but shall extend to thy possessions. Not only thee, but thine, shall be kept within the hollow of his hand. Peace shall dwell in thy home, and under his protection thy possessions shall be secure. "And shalt not sin." This, in the Revised Version, is more accurately rendered "shalt miss nothing." The idea seems to be that the flocks shall be undisturbed.

Ver. 25 "Thou shalt know that thy seed shall be great." In nothing was the favor of God thought to be shown more than in the giving of children, and hence the enumeration of the blessings to be given to the righteous reaches its climax in the promise of an abundant posterity. "Blessed with peace and plenty, and surrounded by his children and his children's children, the good man shall end his days on earth. Such was the promise of the Temanite.

Ver. 26. "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season." Full of years and wisdom, the work of a long and honored life completed, the righteous man comes to his grave in peace. The stalk of corn, heavy with its golden grain, bows its head; then the reapers come, and the harvest song is heard, and the grain is gathered into the garner. How beautifully the lesson ends. Eliphaz may have erred in trying to supply his general principles to every particular case; but he was a philosopher and a saint.

Ver. 27. "Lo this, we have searched it, so it is; hear it and know it for thy good." He has thoroughly investigated the subject and has no doubt of the correctness of his conclusion. Job ought to know better now than to murmur.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Correction from a wise friend is good; how much better God's correction! (Verse 17.)
2. A friend can not always heal the wound he makes; God always can and does. (Verse 18.)
3. A friend might grow weary or impatient; God's help will never fail us. (Verse 19.)
4. The very things that we feared would hurt are made to help us. (Verse 23.)
5. Every man has reached "full age" when he has finished his work and is ready for heaven. (Verse 26.)

Official Call.

The seventh International (twelfth National) Sunday-school Convention of the United States, the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland will be held (D. V.) in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, U. S. A., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 and 2, 1893, in connection with the second World's Sunday-school Convention, to be held in the same place, upon Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 4, 5 and 6, 1893. The sessions of the convention will be held in the Exposition Building.

The number of delegates from each of the States and Territories of the United States will be equal to four times the representation in Congress (both houses), or four delegates for each 150,000 of the population, with a corresponding number from the Provinces and Territories of the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland.

The number of delegates from foreign lands is unlimited, but restricted to such as bear credentials from National and International Sunday-school organizations, where they exist.

All foreign missionaries visiting the United States, duly accredited by their appointing Boards, will be entitled to seats in the conventions, and are cordially invited to attend the sessions.

Delegates from the States, Territories and Provinces must bear credentials from their State, Territorial or Provincial interdenominational organizations, and such delegates should be appointed at the convention next preceding the meetings in St. Louis. But if from any cause such appointments have not been made, application should be made to the chairman of the State, Territorial or Provincial Executive Committee, and in case of failure then, to the chairman of the International Sunday-school Executive Committee at Chicago.

In any of the Southern States of the United States, where there exists a separate interdenominational organization of colored people, a fair proportion of the delegates from such State may be chosen by such colored organization, providing such organization has been reported to the chairman of the International Sunday-school Executive Committee, and is recognized by him.

In making appointments, preference should be given to well-known Sunday-school workers who are identified with the State, Provincial or county organizations, care being taken to represent the various sections of the field, and also the different evangelical denominations, in order that the best representative workers, whether pastors or laymen, men or women, may be selected.

The members of the International Sunday-school Executive Committee, the members of the International Lesson Committee, the president, statistical secretary, treasurer and field superintendent, chosen by the sixth International (Pittsburg) Convention, are members ex-officio of this convention. The members of the World's Sunday-school Executive, the World's Sunday-school Committee, and the president of the first (London) World's Sunday-school Convention, are members ex-officio of this convention.

By the action of the International Sunday-school Executive Committee, the delegates to the International Convention are made the delegates from the United States and Canada to the World's Convention, and all delegates from foreign lands to the World's Convention are invited to seats in the International Convention, and to participate in the discussions and addresses. It is the wish of the committee to have the business of each convention confined to the morning sessions, and so to arrange the topics for discussion as to make the conventions as nearly one as possible.

The Sunday-school workers of the city of Saint Louis tender Christian hospitality to all duly accredited delegates, provided the names of, such delegates and their addresses are received by the Entertainment Committee in Saint Louis, on or before Monday, Aug. 21, 1893.

The time for holding the conventions, viz., Aug. 31 to Sept. 6, has been selected because it best suited the delegates from Europe, and will, it is believed, secure the largest attendance from abroad. It is also the time of college and school vacations, and about the time of closing the Summer assemblies, and will afford many Sunday-school workers the looked-for privilege of attending these conventions. The choice of the city of Saint Louis, Mo., as the place for holding the conventions, was made by the sixth International (Pittsburg) Convention, after due consideration.

It will be the first World's Sunday-school Convention held in America. The preceding convention held in London, England, in July, 1889, was attended by over four hundred delegates from the United States and Canada, and our brethren across the sea are now to visit us.

By One name are we called, in One name we meet. From many lands and climes and from all parts of the United States and Canada Sunday-school workers, who believe in God the Father Almighty, in the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, in his death, his resurrection and his return; who believe in the personal presence and power of the Holy Spirit, and in the inspiration and authority of the Bible, the Word of God, and who believe in the importance of the work in which we are engaged, are invited to come not as denominationalists, but as Christians, to this Interdenominational Convention, to engage in its deliberations and to share in its blessings.

We gather, not for the discussion of reforms, nor to consider many subjects, but to study measures and methods for the improvement and extension of Sunday-schools throughout the world. From a small beginning made by Robert Raikes, of Gloucester, England, in 1780, the numbers have increased to more than twenty millions. We believe that we have a great work to do, and that it is important and necessary to meet, consult, compare and plan, that in the future the work may be more successfully and happily carried on than in the past.

Reports of the work from many lands will be presented, and the most important topics will be selected for presentation by qualified speakers, and as far as possible these topics will be open for discussion.

An outline program will be prepared in due time, and a circular issued giving particulars concerning transportation, names and addresses of local committees, etc.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Mary Schubert, Kansas City, Ks., writes:

"I am convinced that after having been sick a whole year from liver complaint, Ayer's Sarsaparilla saved my life. The best physicians being unable to help me, and having tried three other proprietary medicines without benefit, I at last took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The result was a complete cure. Since then I have recommended this medicine to others, and always with success."

The Growing South.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 31.—The quarterly statement of Southern industries, prepared by the Tradesman of Tennessee, shows that for the first quarter of 1893 the new industries established exceed those of the first quarter of 1892 by 198. While for this year only 8 development companies have been incorporated, during the same period last year 27 were formed. The quarter just ended also shows 76 cotton and woolen mills established, 59 flour and grist mills, 29 canning factories, 40 oil mills and the building of 32 waterworks plants. That the extensive timber interests of the South are not only attracting attention, but capital, is shown by the fact that 195 new wood working plants have been established during the past quarter, as against 122 in 1892 and 141 in the first quarter of 1891. Tennessee leads the list with 33 new industries in this line to her credit; Georgia and North Carolina are close rivals, with 24 and 23, respectively. All of the Southern States; however, are well represented in this development, Mississippi, with 7, being the smallest number. Seventy-six textile industries were established in the quarter, as against 28 in the first quarter of 1892 and 45 in the same period of 1891; and the very general character of this development is shown by the fact that only 3 States, Arkansas, Kentucky and West Virginia, are not represented in this total. Alabama leads the list with 22, North Carolina 16, Georgia 13, South Carolina 8, Virginia 5, Mississippi 4, Tennessee and Texas 3 each, and Florida and Louisiana 1 each.

This quarter shows 58 flour and grist mills established as against twenty-nine for the same quarter of 1892. The increasing demand for cotton-seed oil and its products, together with the advance in price, which has recently taken place, accounts for the large number of new oil mills organized during the quarter. A total of forty is shown as against 10 in 1892 and 8 in the same quarter of 1891, over one-half of the total number being located in Texas, and the remainder scattered throughout the other cotton-growing States. Twelve brick and tile plants are reported, 22 cotton compresses, 21 electric light plants, 22 foundries and machine shops, 7 ice factories, 32 waterworks plants, with 93 other miscellaneous industries.

We find the following notice of Millsaps College in the Clarion Ledger, of March 30:

This institution of learning is prospering beyond the most sanguine expectations of its friends. Young men are coming from almost every section of the State to attend the college. Its president, Rev. Dr. Murrah, is constantly growing in the estimation of the people of the State; a divine of distinguished ability, scholarly, conservative, modest, firm and self reliant. The wisdom of the trustees is clearly demonstrated in his selection to preside over the college. Its success is a just matter of pride to its founder, Major R. W. Millsaps, and in this connection it may be said that in appropriating a portion of his wealth to the great cause of education he has accomplished much good while living, and erected a monument to his name that will stand for ages to come.

It is reported that. William Astor will give $1,000,000 to found a university for colored people in Oklahoma.

The Increase of Crime.

No one who reads the newspapers can remain oblivious to the fact that crimes of almost every kind are on the increase in every part of the land. In the face of the facts and figures given in the extract below no one can deny that the enforcement of law has become almost a nullity, and this lack of enforcement of the law to punish crime is, in a large measure, the reason that crime is multiplying so fearfully. There is no discounting the great fact taught in the history of the criminal jurisprudence of the world, that the best and most effective curb to the passions and vices of men is a rigid and impartial and inflexible administration of justice between man and man.

The only deterrent from crime is the certain infliction of the penalty upon the criminal. No amount of sickly sentimentalism—no matter how much it holds up its hands in pretended righteousness at the sacredness of human life—can controvert a fact which is so abundantly proved in all the courts of the country. And the increase in crime always means a decrease in the feeling of safety to the individual, and of security to the best interests of the community. When this increase is realized its paralyzing effects are felt in the home, in the social circle, in the community and in business. The unrest that is seen to-day in every direction can, in a large part, be traced to the fact that the people do not see the law standing at every man's door "as a faithful sentinel, armed with the drawn sword of justice and saying to all sorts of crime and to all sorts of criminals, 'Thus far and no further.'"

We quote from I. C. Parker, United States District Judge, to show how fearfully crime is increasing. In his charge to the Grand Jury at Fort Smith, Ark., he produced the following statistics:

Let me say to you that in the year 1889 there were committed in the United States murders that were discovered, 3,568; in 1890 there were committed 4,290 known murders, an increase of 722, or about 20 per cent. over those of 1889. But in 1891 and in 1892 the red-handed demon seemed to fully get in his work. In 1891 the number of known murders was 5,908, nearly 6,000, over one-half as many more as was committed in 1889. The total number of murders known to have been committed in 1892 was 6,791, an increase of 793 over the year 1891, being an increase of a fraction over 11 per cent. During these four years there has been an aggregate of 20,557 murders.

How much security for human life is there in this country in the face of these facts? When we consider that the undiscovered murders in the four years I have named will make up, at least, one-fourth as many more as those which are known, it is safe to say that 25,000 human beings have been murdered in the United States in four years.

There are other startling facts, and they show almost a failure to enforce the law in cases where these high crimes have been committed. For the 4,290 murders committed in 1890 there were executed by the law 102 persons, and there were lynched by mobs in that year 127 persons, more persons punished by mob violence than by the juries and courts.

In 1891 there were for the 5,906 murders committed tried by the law and executed 123 persons, while there were lynched by mobs 195. In 1890 twenty-five more persons were lynched than were punished by verdicts of juries, and in 1891 seventy-two more persons were lynched than were punished by law. In 1892 for the 6,791 murders committed 107 persons were tried by the law and executed, while 236 were lynched by mobs, 231 of them being men and five women; 129 more persons were lynched last year by mobs than were executed under the law.

In these figures we find a growing menace to the best interests of the country. In these figures we find the strongest reason that the people everywhere should rise up and demand the enforcement of the law. The safety of the individual and the security of the body politic alike cry out for a vigorous administration of the criminal jurisprudence of the land. Away with that disgusting sentiment, which vainly tries to wear the garb of sympathy for villains whose hearts are black with crime and whose hands are red with blood! Away with that silly pretension that the enforcement of law is an act of tyranny to the oppressed, and that shielding the criminal from merited punishment is an act of humaneness! Let the people rise up and enforce the laws.

Some Thoughts on the Resurrection of Christ.

The self-humiliation of Christ, as set forth by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Philippians, consisted in his incarnation first, and then his becoming "obedient unto death." There, at the grave, the whole process of abasement ended; the sacrifice was complete. All the limitations of humanity, save only such as are consequent upon sin, had been submitted to by him. God had swept down into the lowest sinless abyss of suffering and shame, and paused amid the horrors of it all that he might, in his chosen human body, experience to the utmost all possible agony of human experience; "yet without sin." There the downward process ended. Lower than the grave a sinless one could not descend. Nothing but the weight of conscious guilt could sink man deeper than that, and there the descent of the Lord was stayed.

The disposition of this "temple" which men had "destroyed" became at once the question of the whole universe of God. The Psalmist had said, in prophetic mood, "Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." Christ himself had declared concerning this same temple, "In three days I will raise it up." Not only did all the tremendous claims of Christ wait now and here for final justification and emphasis; not only did it now remain to be seen whether as St. Paul afterward declared, "our faith" should be "vain;" but the whole question of the temporary or the eternal nature of the incarnation of God was at issue. The mystery of the relation of divine and human; the problem of the spiritual union of heaven and earth; the vast possibilities of all rational creation—all these were bound up with the body of Christ in Joseph's tomb, and all these were made manifest by his resurrection and ascension.

The relation of the resurrection of Christ to the facts of his birth, his teachings, his claims, his vicarious sacrifice, as well as to the various prophecies concerning him, is matter of frequent discussion, and is of most profound importance. But we do not so frequently consider the declarative and prophetic features of his resurrection, of his second entrance into a body, a human body, a glorified human body, with which he also ascended and which shares, with his human soul and his divine nature, the throne of his eternal Father.

The assumption again of the body by the divine Christ declared, as nothing else could declare, the full meaning of God when he said, "Let us make man in our own image." A divine man is the ideal man. Christ is the true head of the race. Of all who through obedience and faith "abide in him" the risen Christ, by the Holy Spirit, is the fountain of life, the spiritual progenitor. They are "risen with him." The old forces of evil whereby they inherited "the corruption that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam," are put to death; the "old man" dies and is buried—the "new man," the real life, is "hid with Christ in God." The risen Lord, in his human nature, is a declaration of the inability of Death to cope with spiritual forces or to hold in its grasp, permanently, any part of anyone in whom dwells "the spirit of Christ." The "law of sin and death," in all the scope of its operation on body, mind and spirit, is superseded by "the law of the Spirit," which is "life in Christ Jesus"—in a living Christ and a living Jesus—a living divine-human being who was as truly "raised again for our justification" as he was "delivered for our offenses," and whose resurrection body types our own as certainly as his crucified body bore our sins. So that literally, and in all regards, the redeemed of the Lord shall be "in his image;" created anew in Christ Jesus, bearing in body as well as in spirit the likeness of him who "was created in righteousness and true holiness."

Just as the risen body of our Lord is the declaration and type of our redemption, of body as well as soul, so it is a prophecy and assurance of our supreme exaltation. The birth of one "conceived by the Holy Ghost," but born of a virgin, declared the fact of the incarnation; the resurrection and ascension of that human body of the divine Christ declares the continuance of the incarnation through the eternal future. The Son of God is always, henceforth, the Son of man also. In the person of his Son the Eternal Father presses to his heart always the children of men; in his person, as human, humanity is "enthroned far above all principalities and powers." And as the divine partakes of the human in the ascended and enthroned person of Jesus Christ, so, by faith in him, and so joined with him, the human, redeemed through him, partakes of the divine. Since our Lord rose from the dead we see a new meaning in the parable of the vine; we understand better the doctrine of the fatherhood of God. Being bound by ties of human sort to the exalted God-man, our Elder Brother forever, we can say, "Abba, Father," with double sense of kinship; for not only are we "born of the Spirit," but also we are brethren human of our enthroned divine-human brother.

Missionary Matters.

Dear Brethren: It grieves me to say that Dr. John is critically ill. Though seized while attending District Conference, at Dickson, Tenn., he is now in his own home at Nashville, where he receives every attention. May your prayers be poured out in behalf of this faithful man of God and his afflicted family!

There need be no uneasiness concerning the business of the office. The Annual Report is being prepared for the press and will be out in good time. The Estimate Committee will hold its meeting as usual. The April number of the Missionary Reporter has just been thrown off, and the issue for May is being provided for. The same is true of the Sowers and Reapers.

With a thankful heart I give you the statement of our treasurer that the regular collections for the year ending March 31 will not fall short of the same for the previous year. This, in the face of almost universal shrinkage in values and monetary stringency, is doing well.

Even though the debt may not be entirely extinguished, it is to be devoutly hoped that it will not be necessary to mention the matter after our annual meeting. Rather let us plan and press forward an educational campaign for missions which shall culminate in an awakened conscience, a return of the church to her first love, and a baptism of the Holy Ghost.

In view of drafts to be signed, and other important demands of the office, the Board held a meeting yesterday and authorized me to act as corresponding secretary, pro tem.

With great diffidence, brethren, do I accept the responsibilities thus placed upon me; but leaning upon an omnipotent arm, and trusting in the Holy Spirit as an infallible counselor, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
W. R. LAMBUTH.

Nashville, Tenn., March 29.

Work for the Children.

Rev. A. E. Clay has favored us with a copy of the First Annual Report of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. In this report we find some interesting facts and evidence of much good work done along the line of humaneness. The object of the society is clearly stated in the second article of its charter:

The prevention of cruelty to children and to assist in bringing to justice and securing the conviction of all persons guilty of, or party to, such cruelty; and generally to do all things to promote the mental and physical welfare and advancement of minors, and to take such steps as may be necessary for their protection, and to promote humane sentiments among all classes.

The first year's work resulted in investigating and bettering the condition of 304 children and placing 176 in private homes or asylums. Eleven lost children were restored to their parents, and thirty-one girls were taken from immoral houses. There have been forty-eight prosecutions and twenty-two convictions. Since its inception the society has been interested in 690 children.

This is a record of good work which is commendable. The society, like all other benevolent institutions, has had to fight its way over doubts and discouragements and difficulties, but it is now prominently in the front rank and constantly growing in public favor. It enters upon its second year under very favorable auspices, and if it will give Bro. Clay a support, so that he can give his entire time to its work, it will do the thing which will secure its permanent progress and success.

There will be a Sunday-school mass meeting, for all Sunday-school workers of New Orleans and young peoples' societies especially, at the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church, Sunday, April 9, at four P. M. It will be conducted by Prof. H. M. Hamill, of Chicago, under the direction of the International and Louisiana State Sunday-school Associations. Everybody is invited.

Children's Day.

We have printed for the Sunday-school Department the usual programme of songs, recitations, and readings for our Children's Day. The editors have been exceptionally happy in their selections of words and music for this important annual service. We hope the day will be observed in all our churches, as the Discipline enjoins, and that this entertaining programme will be as generally used. Orders are now solicited. The price is 60 cents a hundred copies; 10 cents per dozen.

Important to You.

Pastors and Sunday-school Superintendents in the Mississippi Conference:

If you want free programs for Children's Day, send your application and address at once to Laird & Dominick, Jackson, Miss., or to me. When applying be sure to give plainly the names of the district, the charge, the Sunday-school, the pastor and the superintendent. Give also the number of scholars in the school and the number of programs needed. If you want programs, follow these instructions.

Woman's Missionary Society of Sardis District.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to announce through the ADVOCATE that Thursday, April 20, the day before the session of the Sardis District Conference, the district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Sardis district will be held at Hernando. Let each auxiliary and juvenile society send a delegate, and forward the names of the delegates to the undersigned as soon as possible. Ample arrangements will be made for the entertainment of all, but we must have the names of those who intend to come. Our brethren of the ministry are cordially and urgently invited to be present.

MRS. J. W. MALONE,
Dist. Sec. Sardis District.

A Dry City.

To-night at 12 o'clock the last saloons in this city close their doors, and Meridian becomes a prohibition town for all time to come, we hope. Quietly, but persistently, prayerfully, the good work has been wrought. Bro. L. P. Brown has led in the good work, and Messrs. Hamm, Witherspoon & Witherspoon have been his legal advisers.

T. L. MELLEN.

March 31.

Notice.

The district meeting of the Greenville District Parsonage and Home Mission Society will be held in Greenville, Thursday, April 20. Delegates will please send their names to Mrs. D. C. Montgomery.

HATTIE D. CHAMBERS,
Dist. Sec.

Notice.

Columbus District Conference will meet at Mayhew, April 27-30. Program of topics will appear later. The first day, Thursday, will be given to Sunday-school interests. We will look for you.

NOTES.

The Interior says: "Our church and country need mothers who will not turn the training of their children over to the servant girls."

If people will ponder the question, how to get evil out of the world, as much as they perplex themselves with the question, how evil came into the world, the world will be much better off.

A man in New Jersey was tried for swearing on the public highway, and was convicted and sentenced to prison for sixty days. If our courts should go into that business, there would be a necessity for an indefinite enlargement of jail room.

The New York Advocate gives an interesting account of a preacher in New England who preached for fifty years, who never had a yearly salary of more than six hundred dollars, educated a son at college, gave two daughters a good education and at the end of fifty years had ten thousand dollars saved. We call that financiering with success.

If the preachers would all study and practice Phillips Brooks' Lectures on Preaching, and the church members would all read and be governed by Arthur's Tongue of Fire, we would have the biggest, deepest, most thorough, most sweeping revival of religion the country has ever seen. Conscientiously read, those two books will revolutionize the church.

It is only after acquiring right notions of God that we can place a proper estimate upon men. The sight of God as revealed in Jesus Christ changes our estimate of our fellowmen because it changes our notion about God. The man who knows God is the only man who really loves men. In the light of that knowledge men cease to be insignificant and become of more worth than the universe. In that light men are seen to have a value that is simply dreadful.

Think of Prof. Huxley as an advocate for the Bible as a text-book in our public schools! He asks:

By the study of what other book could children be so much humanized and made to feel that each figure in that vast historical procession fills, like themselves, but a momentary space in the intervals between the eternities, and earns the blessing or curse of all time, according to its effort to do good and hate evil, even as they also are earning their payment for their work?

The truth is that the oratorical gift is as rare among preachers as among other men. But its place may be supplied by earnestness, depth and force of conviction, and genuine enthusiasm in both speaker and hearers. In times of religious revival the people do not complain of the length of sermons which are imbued with the same spirit that stirs their own hearts. It is the length of the merely perfunctory sermon delivered in the purely perfunctory manner that congregations find fault with; and such, alas! is the average product of the pulpit. Though a sermon of this sort occupy only fifteen minutes of time, it will seem too long. The shortening of the sermon, then, is not the important subject for consideration. It is how to infuse genuine enthusiasm into the pulpit and sympathetic fervor into the hearts of the people.

BRANDON DISTRICT—REPORT OF J. M. MORSE, DISTRICT SOLICITOR.

Rev. T. L. Mellen, Meridian, Miss.:

Dear Brother: In reply to yours of recent date, I will give you an account of work done. Newton and Hickory, $55 [of which $50 was contributed by Bro. Morse and wife.—T. L. M.]. Rose Hill: Expense of going, $3.50. I saw ——, ——, ——, ——, and others. No money could be had. Montrose: Expenses, $2.50. I got $1.75. Decatur: Expense, $1. Nothing received. Neshoba circuit: No expense and no money received. I tried Forest, and got nothing. I did not go to Morton, although I saw ——, ——, and ——, and could not get any money. They are the moneyed men of Morton. I did not go to Brandon, but saw ——, ——, ——, and ——, and one or two others, and could not get anything. Carthage paid me $6 and subscribed $8, but I have not received it yet. It cost me $5 to go and come from there. Hillsboro: No collection; $1.50 expenses. Lake, $6. Marvin, nothing. Westville, nothing. Raleigh, nothing. Trenton, nothing.

I judge from your note that you think I have not tried to raise the money. I have done my best. I have given all I can give. If I were able, I would willingly pay it all. I have not written to the preachers about the Week of Prayer and Self-denial, because I did not deem it my place.

Please report for Bro. —— and Hon. ——. You took them in hand. They are two of the leading men of the Brandon district, and they represent the liberality of the people.

There is but little missionary spirit in the people on the railroad, or in the interior. . . . I hope to report the amount from Carthage soon. Several said they would help, but I could not get them to say how much or when. One man, said to be worth $25,000, gave twenty-five cents. So the work goes on. I expect to report something on Week of Prayer and Self-denial soon. We are building our church almost anew at this place (Newton) at a cost of $700 or $800, which will add greatly to its comfort.

Yours faithfully and truly,

J. M. MORSE.

Since Bro. Morse's appeals were made last Fall, Brandon station has contributed $7.90 and Marvin circuit $2.35 during a Week of Prayer and Self-denial! Brandon has a membership of 187 and Marvin circuit 551.

"But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." (II. Cor. ix, 6, 7.) How he must love these 738!

That Sabbath Resolution.

By reference to pages 23 and 24 of the Minutes of the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, the reader will find the "report on the Sabbath" adopted by our Conference. Resolution IV. of that report read as follows:

Resolved, That in order to avoid Sunday travel by the preachers in coming to Conference, we request the college of Bishops to change the time for holding the session of our Annual Conference from Wednesday to Thursday.

Now, let it be remembered, this whole report was adopted. And let it be remembered, it was adopted without a dissenting voice.

Now, I submit, that if one, then every preacher in the Mississippi Conference is pledged to this view of the question of Sabbath observance. And if it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, it is wrong to go anywhere else on Sunday, if we use the Sabbath trains; unless, of course, in cases of extreme necessity, and yet members of the Mississippi Conference ride on Sunday trains. R. D. NORSWORTHY.

Notice.

For reasons satisfactory to those interested and present, the Louisiana State Holiness Association will hold its meetings at Felicity Church (instead of Parker Chapel), April 4 to 13. Brethren and friends from abroad will report to me at 106 Camp St., and will be assigned to homes. Dr. Carradine, of St. Louis, and other ministers will be present.

WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL.

A good brother writes that he has not observed the Week of Prayer and Self-denial this year, because last year he held a missionary prayer meeting once a month and raised on assessments, debt and special objects something less than $1 a member. And adds: "I not only felt we had done our duty"—although two or three members of his congregation could easily have paid the whole amount—"but that it was neither right nor safe to keep up the pressure." If it require "pressure" to squeeze less than $1 a member from a congregation, where there is such financial ability as I know that people to possess, surely the want of information, or the lack of religion, demands just such a season of prayer and self-denial as the Board of Missions called upon us to observe, and the use of the programs furnished.

Macon, Ga., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

HER WORDS WERE TRUE.

A Newspaper Man's Careful and Complete Investigations.

WHAT TWO MINISTERS SAID.

A Searching Inquiry as to Mrs. Henderson's Past and Present Condition, and the Results Which Were Obtained.

(New York Press.)

A few days since there was published in this paper one of the most remarkable letters ever written by any woman. Some of the statements made and facts it contained were so unusual and the interest, not to say excitement, occasioned was so great, that an investigation for the benefit of the public seemed a necessity. In the pursuit of such investigation I visited Port Chester, N. Y., and at the hotel, on the street, and in the stores, I heard a great deal of talk on the very subject I was investigating. Rev. Ernest L. Scott, after I had explained what I wished, said:

"Nearly a year ago I first met Mrs. J. Henderson, who resides at No. 315 Westchester Avenue. I called to see her in company with Hon. Addison Johnson, and must confess that I have seldom seen anyone in so deplorable a condition. My first view almost unnerved me, she was so weak, her nerves so unstrung, and with the most dangerous dropsical condition. She told me how she had suffered, how her sister had come to prepare the house for her expected funeral, and she continued, 'Words can not tell the story of my sufferings.' I withdrew from the house feeling that it was the last time I should ever see her alive.

"The next time I saw Mrs. Henderson was early in the present year. I could hardly believe what I saw. She was well, healthy, had no trace of the dropsical trouble; indeed, she seemed to be in perfect health. Naturally I was amazed and asked her the cause. She said, with tears streaming from her eyes: 'I owe it all to that grand remedy, Warner's Safe Cure.' Her husband spoke up at once and said, 'Yes, that is the secret of my wife's recovery, and after I have seen what the Safe Cure has done for my wife, I am confident that it will relieve any case of Bright's disease and cure anyone whose constitution is not wasted away."

Rev. Samuel G. Curtice, pastor of the Methodist Church at Port Chester, said to me: 'Yes, I know all about Mrs. Henderson's troubles, which were caused by a bad case of Bright's disease. She had been given up and I was called in to baptise her. Instead of that I talked and prayed with her and then withdrew. I called again the next day and performed the ceremony. Her rapid recovery to her present state of health and strength is really wonderful."

Hon. Addison Johnson, member of the Board of Supervisors, and their delegate to the Assembly at Albany, said: "I have known all about Mrs. Henderson's case. Her death was expected daily for a long time. She was the sickest person I ever saw that lived. Certainly any remedy that could perform such wonders must be a marvelous one."

The conclusions from my investigations are these, namely: that one of the most remarkable cures on record has been accomplished in Port Chester. It is that of a lady who, when taken ill, "went from bad to worse," until brought to death's door by the worst of all known diseases, and yet is to-day well and happy. The experience of Mrs. Henderson should prove a valuable one to all readers who may be treading the same dangerous path, viz: treating symptoms instead of what causes them, and not realizing their great danger until in many cases too late for human aid.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

THE WIFE.

The woman's cause is man's They rise or sink
Together. Dwarfed or God-like, bond or free:
If she be small, slight-natured, miserable,
How shall men grow? . . . Let her be
All that not harms distinctive womanhood:
For women is not undeveloped man,
But diverse. Could we make her as the man,
Sweet love were slain, whose dearest bond is this.
Not to be like, but like in difference:
Yet in the long years must they liker grow;
The man be more of woman, she of man,
Till at the last she sets herself to man,
Like perfect music unto noble words.

The Bible for All.

It is a deeply significant fact that the great revivals which regenerated the church and uplifted mankind, have been the result of giving the people a larger and freer knowledge of the Word of God. Thus the discovery of the Book of the Law by Hilkiah the priest led Josiah the king and all people to a profound conviction of sin for having wandered away into idolatry, and to a renewal of the covenant to serve only the true and living Jehovah. The idols were swept out of the land, and the abominations of heathen worship ceased. "And all his days they (the people) departed not from following the Lord, the God of their fathers."

Again, when the returning captives—50,000 of them from Babylon—began under Zerubbabel to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem, and along with it to inaugurate a new civilization for the entire world, they did it under the inspiration of the sacred books which Ezra read to the people. This great man and priest was himself a scribe necessitated to spend much of his time in making copies of the divine revelation. He knew the value of such a revelation in purifying the hearts and consciences of the people, and, therefore, he institu'ed an order of scribes to transcribe and keep the law in a perfect form. He collected and edited, it is believed, many of the holy writings; and rendered the community inestimable service by arranging to have the law, the Prophets and the Psalms publicly known. Without this influence from heaven no second Temple could ever have been erected in the face of the unceasing and bitter opposition which it encountered.

Nor are these the only instances of the mighty stimulus derived from inspired truth. When Nehemiah had completed the walls after nearly two months of incredible labor and watching night and day, the fathers and mothers and all the children who were old enough to comprehend language assembled in the great square by the gate to hear the law read aloud. Their anxiety to hear it was so keen that they listened from daybreak until noon as it was read and explained. Such intent eagerness after spiritual knowledge it might be difficult to find in these days. But they seem not to have become weary nor to have grown sleek in interest. On the contrary, as the reading went forward their consciences became more and more aroused and remorseful over their past follies and sins until they broke out into loud weeping and lamentations.

But sorrow always goes before joy in the case of the penitent sinner. Ezra and his attendants cheered the penitent ones with assurances of pardon and peace that they went away joyfully to celebrate, with the blowing of trompets accompanied by shout and song, the festival of the opening year; for this reading of the law occurred on the first day of the civil year.

Let it be carefully noted that the Bible was here not limited to the priest, nor to parents, but was freely expounded in the presence of all the children who were old enough to grasp its sense. In this heaven-sent message alone are the sources of national and family purity to be found and utilized. When all the people, the children included, are instructed and uplifted by God's own enlightenment, we may expect a new dawn of righteousness and happiness for mankind.—Christian at Work.

Skepticism.

Skepticism is simply not believing. It is denial, negation, darkness. There is only one cure for darkness, and that is coming to the light. If you will persist in putting your eyes out, or in barring God's daylight out, there is no help for you; you must die in the dark. Sin has made your soul sick, and if you will not even try Christ's medicine, then the blood-poisoning of infidelity will run its fatal course. If you will produce a better rule of life than my Bible (perhaps your mother's Bible also), if you will find a holier pattern of living than Jesus Christ, and a surer Savior than he is, I will agree to forswear my religion for yours. But what is your "I do not believe" in comparison with my positive "I know whom I have believed"? What is your denial in comparison with my personal experience of Christ? Skepticism never won a victory, never slew a sin, never healed a heartache, never produced a ray of sunshine, never saved an immortal soul. It is foredoomed defeat. Don't risk your eternity on that spider's web.—T. L. Cuyler.

The Coming Christian Manhood.

There is growing up in the advanced Sunday-school of the present a flower which shall bear glorious blossoms fifteen years hence—the Christianity of the future. Far more thoroughly than ever in the past, this generation of young people are receiving an education in the Word of God. The Sunday-school of to-day is training those who are the destined citizens and Christians of to-morrow. The sons and daughters who are storing their minds and strengthening their characters with Scripture truths will grow up into a full-orbed type of Christianity which will be in advance of their parents', and fuller, rounder and more complete than any which the church has in the past developed. With such citizens as are being nurtured in our Sunday-schools to control the State, and such Christians to become pillars in the church, both Church and State will stand secure and strong through all the centuries to come.—John H. Vincent, D. D.

The Boy's Talisman.

When a certain lad went away from home to school, his mother gave him a picture. She told him every night to look upon the face in this picture, and he could tell whether he had done any wrong during the day. If the face smiled on him, he could be sure he had been faithful and true in all things; if it looked severe and rebuking, he must carefully scrutinise his actions for the day and see wherein he had done amiss.

Of course, what the boy saw in the face was the reflection of his own consciousness. When he brought a bright consciousness of duty well done, of temptation resisted, the face looked approvingly on him; when he brought a consciousness of dereliction from duty, or yielding to wrong, the face convicted him of his misdoing.

An experienced principal would often say to his teachers, "If you want to see a mirror of yourself, look on your class. Are you systematic, orderly, patient, thorough? so will your class be. They will invariably reflect your characteristics."

If the housewife wishes to see a picture of herself, let her look at her house. Is she orderly, neat, executive, systematic? she will see proofs of all this in her housekeeping. Is she careless, indolent, incapable? this also will appear unmistakably.

The mother may find a mirror of herself in her family. Has she patience, gentleness, firmness? does she speak in low and loving tones? is she just and impartial as well as loving and kind? are her ideals in morality, intelligence, deportment, high and pure? She will see a reflection of all these in her children.

The law holds good to the uttermost. We grow like what we look at. When we shall see him as he is, we shall be like him!—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Literature of the Bible.

Every phase of literature, every norm of wisdom, is in the Bible. It ministers to all tastes and arouses the slumbering intellects of all who can comprehend the difference between reality and fiction, and who incline to virtue rather than vice. Ruskin confesses his indebtedness to the Bible, Homer, and Sir Walter Scott for his mental discipline. Charles Reede pronounces the characters in Scripture a literary marvel. Matthew Arnold daily read the New Testament in Greek for its style; Milton could not have written Paradise Lost without Genesis; Renan's witchery of style is traceable to the New Testement; and the book has gone into all professions and among all classes to awaken uniformity of thought and similarity of speech, respecting the soul, eternity, and God. Job has taught the poets the art of construction, and David has sung an undying melody into the ears of the race. The book of Ruth is the model idyl, and the books of Esther and Daniel abound in incomparable dramatic elements: Isaiah has plumed the statesman for oratorical flights; Jeremiah has opened the fountains of pathos and sentiment in sympathetic souls; Ezekiel has furnished a usable style for judicial denunciation for the criminal lawyer; Paul has taught the thinker to reason and the essayist to write; John has instructed theologians and teachers that great truths are not obscure, and complex truths are most simple; and Moses and Christ have inspired judges with dignity and clothed their words and decrees with justice and solemnity. Of all books, whether rhetoric, logic, vocabulary, poetry, philosophy, history, or whatever be the end, the Bible should be first and most carefully studied, its literary spirit and form should be closely traced and discerned, and its truth should be reverently incorporated into the daily speech, thought and life.—Rev. Dr. Mendenhall.

Whims.

Children are supposed to be the most whimsical creatures in the world, and yet there have been grown men who were quite as much so as any child that ever lived. The writer knows a little girl who can not go to sleep unless she has a piece of rubber held between her thumb and forefinger, which some persons consider to be whimsical in the extreme; but what have these to say of Haydn, one of the greatest composers of music, who could not put two notes together until he had dressed himself in his best suit and had his hair powdered, and who declared that without a certain diamond ring, the gift of Frederick II. of Prussia, on his finger he could not begin to work, since he could not summon a single idea into his head? Other composers have been equally whimsical. Of Gluck it is said that when he felt himself in a humor to compose he had his piano-forte carried into a beautiful meadow, where he was able to do justice to his muse. Another writer of music, Sarti, could compose only in a dark room, lit by a single candle. This peculiarity showed itself in his work, for most of it indicates that he was a man of gloomy imagination. The best work of Paisiello was composed while that genius was in bed; and Saccbini declared that he never had any moments of inspiration except when his two favorite cats were sitting one upon each shoulder.—Harper's.

Washed Away.

A woman came to her minister one day, carrying a bundle of wet sand, saying in answer to his questioning: "That's me; the multitude of my sins can not be numbered. How can such a wretch as I ever be saved?"

"Where did you get the sand?" the minister asked.

"Go back, then, to the beacon, and take a spade with you. Dig, dig, and raise a great mound; shovel it as high as ever you can; then leave it there. Take your stand by the seashore and watch the effect of the waves upon the heap of sand."

"Ah, sir," she exclaimed, "I see what you mean. The blood of Christ—that would wash it all away."

They tell us that cloth which has been dyed red can never be restored to its original purity. But when a piece of red cloth is viewed through a ruby glass the color is lost, and it appears white. So sins "red like crimson" are "white as wool" when the blood of Christ is interposed.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A PLAIN LITTLE GIRL.

Once I knew a little girl,
Very plain;
You might try her hair to curl,
All in vain;
On her cheek no tint of rose
Paled and blushed, or sought repose!
She was plain.

But the thoughts that through her brain
Came and went,
As a recompense for pain,
Angels sent;
So full many a beauteous thing,
In the young soul blossoming,
Grew content.

Every thought was full of grace,
Pure and true;
And in time the homely face
Lovelier grew;
With a heavenly radiance bright
From the soul's reflected light
Shining through.

Shall I tell you, little child,
Plain or poor,
If your thoughts are undefiled,
You are sure
Of the loveliness of worth;
And this beauty, not of earth,
Will endure.

In Japan.

THE BAY OF YEDDO AND YOKOHAMA.

Perhaps the following, written just after the ship, Empress of Japan, had left Yokobeme, taking us to Kobe will interest you, though it takes you back to the journey:

Yokobema lies upon Yedde Bay. We arrived at noon; but before breakfast all passengers walked out upon the deck to be greeted by peerless Mt. Fuji. This mountain does not effect one in the same way as do the Rockies. The Rockies are grand; Fuji is beautiful—sometimes cloaked in clouds, always heeded in snow. The Japanese are said to hold it sacred. The fumes of a distant volcano are visible on the other side of us. The ship moves gracefully into the bay, and places of historical interest are pointed out—some of them connected with the name of Commodore Perry and his ships, thundering for friendly admission. The beautiful green cliffs of the city appear.

The ship has no wharf, and stops some two or three hundred yards out in the sea. There are great warships of different nations, coaling and supply vessels, native steamers of various kinds, steam launches, sail crafts of traders and fishermen, and multitudinous canoes called sampans, manned by half-nude sunburnt coolies. Even before she fairly stopped there was a great clambering up The Empress of agents for hotels and other establishments. Passengers are loaded with their cards in a few moments. Our party went ashore in the ship company's steam launch, and proceeded to take a jinricksha ride, three abreast. To Bro. Yoshioka in the middle it was familiar enough; but to the riders on the right and left the rapid motion of the little sulkies was novel and curious. I think that by the end of the hour the Bishop had decided that a horse which can harness himself in a second, and dash away (without a driver to the destination) would be a very good thing to have in Fort Worth.

The ride was mainly through the native part of the city, revealing crowded narrow streets, and hundreds of little shops for toys, confections and light supplies. There is the patter of innumerable Japanese shoes, and umbrellas of various kinds are stretched against the sun. A few horses and bulls in single harness are doing service; but most of the small wagons are drawn by barefooted or sandalled men.

We stopped once and walked a little way up a hill to a temple. An old woman with blackened teeth had us to rest at her rustic open air tea house which stands just inside the temple yard, and most politely did she offer tea and cakes. A few copper coins left by worshipers were just inside the temple door, and outside was an idol much worn. If a man has neuralgia in his jaw he rubs the cheek of this idol and then his own cheek.

Mr. Draper, a missionary of the Northern Methodists at Yokohama, had crossed the Pacific with us, and by invitation we visited his home and their well-established girls' school.

Bro. Yoshioka decided to stay ashore and try a native mat, bath and bed, first pinching us upon a sampan. Our crew were a man and a boy who plied his oar like Ben Hur, and soon placed us alongside the Empress.

"Britannia rules the sea." This morning before breakfast the British naval band played several glorious airs. Three of England's great warships lies in the bay; their admiral visits our vessel; and continual formal movements between the different ships are made by the navymen in graceful little boats. Finally the admiral's flag dips, his men assemble on the decks; there is the naval salute, music again, the sounding of a cannon, and we are moving out of port amid fair sails and beauteous mountains. H. G. HAWKINS.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since I wrote to your valuable paper, I will now venture an appearance. Our pastor this year is Bro. Willie Tucker. I think he is such a good man. I do hope he will come back next year. We have just started our Sunday-school, which was stopped on account of bad weather. If any of the cousins would like to know who our dear Sunday-school superintendent is, they can easily find out by solving the following acrostic, and the first letter of each answer will form his initials and last name: Who was cast into the lion's den? What did the king say to Esther when she went before him to plead for her people? Who was Christ's mother? What did Christ say to those that were weary and heavy laden? What is the beginning of the Fifteenth Psalm? Who was the hairy man? Who was Isaac's father? Who was Ruth's mother-in-law? With best wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your friend, M. F. MCLEAN.

Gayden, La.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the dear ADVOCATE. I am eight years old. I have a little twin brother the same age with me, and I don't see no other little girl say that I have five brothers, and I have seven sisters; but two are gone home over yonder—two well with Jesus. Mr. Editor, I only have one pet, and that is my youngest sister. She will soon be two months old. Mr Editor, I take a little paper. It is call Our Mite Box, and I love to read it very much. Bro. W. T. Currie is our pastor this year, and we all love him very much, and thanks be to God on high for sending us such a preacher as Bro. Currie. I will ask the children a question: Where is found in the Bible, "Jesus wept"? I hope this won't reach the waste-basket.

Your unknown friend, NOALIKA WELLS.

The First Postoffice.

Cyrus, the King of Persia, who sent the Jews back to Jerusalem at the end of their seventy years of captivity, was a very good king compared with other rulers of his time. A writer in Harper's Young People says that he established the first postoffice system; and, if that is so, the idea of having mails carried regularly and rapidly is not by any means a modern invention.

The invention of the postoffice is ascribed to Cyrus, King of Persia, who lived about 550 B. C. Cyrus required all of his governors to write to him exact accounts of everything that occurred in their several districts and armies.

The Persian Empire was of vast extent, and some means had to be provided to render that correspondence sure and expeditious. Cyrus, therefore, caused postoffices to be built and messengers appointed in every province. He found how for a good horse, with an experienced rider, could travel in a day without being hurt, and then had stables built in proportion, at equal distances from each other.

At each of these places he also appointed postmasters, whose duty it was to receive the letters from the couriers as they arrived, and give them to others, and to give fresh horses in exchange for those that had performed their part of their journey.

Thus the post went continually night and day, rain or snow, heat or cold, and Cyrus received speedy news of all occurrences, and sent back whatever orders he considered necessary. Darius, the last King of the Persians, was superintendent of them before he came to the throne.—New York Advocate.

Our Paper Money.

Do our young people know that one men makes all the ink with which the United States government prints its paper money? The following information is cut from The Home Journal:

"One man makes all the ink with which the United States government prints its paper money. His father invented the ink, but he never told anybody how he did it until just before he died, when he let his son into the secret. Had he died before he told his son about the ink, the government printer would have been in a bad way, for this is the only kind of ink that will print on the peculiar surface of the fiber of which government note paper is made. The maker employs only six men in the manufacture of his ink, and none of them is in the secret, nor has anyone yet seen the interesting act of mixing the ingredients of which the ink is composed. The owner of the secret locks himself up in his own room two weeks in each year, and it is there and then that he mixes stuff enough to supply the government with ink for the ensuing twelve months. The process of locking himself up surrounds him with an air of romance something like that of the man whom Balzac made to search for the alkahest, the only difference being that the alkahest fellow shut himself up for a lifetime and got nothing, besides alienating the affections of his wife, while the other locks himself up for two weeks and gets fifty thousand dollars a year."—Exchange.

The Child in the Basket.

The vigilance of an old-time customs officer, it may be said, came, perhaps, within an ace of changing the course of French history. One day a mother who had been to a country house near Marseilles returned with her son to Marseilles. It was twilight. The child, eight years old, had been put in a peach-basket borne by a donkey, and the mother, fearing the child might take cold—it was in November—had covered the boy with a thick brown shawl. Tired with mooning around the country all day, cosy and warm under the thick shawl, the child was soon asleep and hidden by the sides of the basket. When the city gates were neared, the mother, forgetting all about the child, walked a distance behind the donkey and did not make him stop at the customhouse to be searched. The customs officer, seeing the donkey jog on without stopping, suspected that he was laden with smuggled goods and ran after him to thrust his sharp steel probe through the basket. Luckily the mother observed him, ran forward and screamed: "Don't use your probe. My child is in the basket." The child was Adolphe Thiers. —Interior.

Little Man.

The Boston Transcript prints an anecdote of a gentleman who was given to making friends with children wherever he met them, and who one day tried to scrape acquaintance with a little fellow-passenger in a street-car.

The child wore a crimson plush cloak, and had long yellow curls, so the gentleman began with much confidence:

"How do you do, little girl?"

"I'm not a little girl," was the shy response.

"Oh! Aren't you? Well, then, how do you do, little boy?"

"I'm not a little boy," was the unexpected answer.

"Indeed! Who are you, then?"

"I'm my papa's little man," said the youngster, with perfect dignity.

How She Walked.

A school teacher in one of the primary schools in Concord tells me the following: Some days ago she was endeavoring to make clear to her young pupils' mind the meaning of the word "slowly." She walked across the room in the manner the word indicates.

"Now, children, tell me how I walked."

"Bow legged."—Interior.

Nothing survives but the mass of human life; and that not blended as before, but each one as several and apart as if none lived before God but he only. And so of all the course and history of the world; all is either passed or passing away; nothing remains but the record of human life, in the book of the Eternal, and the stream of undying spirits which is ever issuing from among us into the world unseen. And thus it is that all that is real in the world is ever passing out of it; tarrying for a while in the midst of shadows and reflections, and then, as it were, melting out of sight.—Manning.

No man is more miserable than he that hath no adversity; that man is not tried whether he be good or bad; and God never crowns those virtues which are only faculties and dispositions; but every act of virtue is an ingredient into reward. God so dresses us for heaven.—Jeremy Taylor.

MAMA—"Arthur, didn't I tell you to take these powders every two hours?" Little Arthur—"Yes; but you never told me where you wanted me to take them to."

"Where have you been, Tommy?" "Out in the stable giving my goat drawing lessons. I teached him how to draw a wagon."

Would you rather buy lamp chimneys, one a week or a year round, or one that lasts till some accident breaks it?

Tough glass, Macbeth "pearl top" or "pearl glass" almost never break from heat; not one in a hundred.

Where can you get it? and what does it cost? Your dealer knows where and how much it costs more than common glass; and may be thinks tough glass isn't good for his business.

NEWMAN—Mrs. MARY E. NEWMAN died in St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 3, 1892. She was the daughter of Mr. John Kennard, of Baltimore, Md., in which city she was born in 1816. She removed thence with her parents to Lexington, Ky., where in 1839 she was married to Dr. T. Newman.

Dr. Newman came with his family to St. Louis some years before the war, and was actively and prominently connected with Southern Methodism here until his death, which occurred nearly ten years ago. His wife, no less devoted to the church than her zealous husband, was with him first in Eight Street, and afterwards in St. John's Church. They were charter members of the latter. She was a sister of the late John Kennard, whose name is familiar alike to mercantile and to Methodist circles of St. Louis.

Many honored names connected with the little mission that grew to be St. John's Church have gone up in association with hers. Many of them have gone to their reward. Among them is her intimate friend, Mrs. Nathan Coleman.

These are a few facts connected with the outward life of a noble Christian woman. The real life, with its long history of unselfish love, can never be recorded. Gentle by nature, and refined by education and association, ennobled by the purifying power of a vital religion, her life breathed its elevating influence on all who knew her.

She seemed and loved by all, she had, perhaps, her share of happiness. She had also her share of sorrow. A son, brave and gifted, in the prime of an exalted manhood, died; next, her husband, whose name was the synonym for honor, and lastly, her eldest daughter, whose graces were a daily benediction. No wife or mother could be more devoted, more tender, more sensitive, and yet she bore her bereavements with patient and even cheerful resignation. She had faith. She believed in the mysteries of religion—in communion with God. She believed in prayer, in immortality and heaven. Grief brought to light many of the brightest virtues that adorned her character. She,

"Like the plants that throw
Their fragrance from the wounded part,
Breathed their sweetness out of woe."

There is nothing remarkable to record concerning her death. She was in the mist of pain for many hours and left no parting word or sign. It is well. Not the dying, but the living testimony is here. It is the best.

F. MARVIN.

WILLIAMS—Died, at Haughton, Bossier par., La., March 4, 1893, EFFIE, eldest child of Rev. J. B. Williams and Sister M. J. Williams. We call her dead, and yet we know "what's called so is transition." There is no death to one of those little ones whom Christ has held up as the most fitting representation of innocence and purity. The frail clay casket has been laid beneath the sod; but the pure, bright soul has been transported to a higher realm to shine forever more. Only nine years did little Effie remain on earth, the comfort and hope of her devoted parents; and in that time she developed a nature which won the admiration and love of all who knew her. The warmth and affection of her young heart were so nurtured and strengthened by the Christian influences thrown about her, that she seemed to revel in an atmosphere of love. Her bright countenance was ever aglow with the sunshine of happiness.

A little more than a year ago she came to live among us, and now the little mound in yonder sacred city contains all that is left us of our little Effie. But her image will not be forgotten, and through the shifting scenes of life her memory will be fondly cherished.

To the dear bereaved parents, who have come to labor among us, we tender our heartfelt sympathy. May the spirit of their cherished darling ever serve as another beacon light to guide them along the narrow path that leadeth unto life!

C. E. MURFF.

WALTON—Died, on Jan. 24, 1893, after forty days of lingering pain, of typhoid fever, MINNIE LEE WALTON, aged four years and eight months. Everything that human skill could devise, the sleepless vigilance of mother, father and friends, could not stay the hand of death, and the little spirit winged its flight from earth, passing the portal of silence to awake again upon the shores of a blissful eternity.

Scarcely had the sod settled upon the grave of little Minnie when the grim messonger reached forth his blighting hand and gathered another tender bloom from the already heart-stricken household by gathering to his fold LULA, the baby child, aged two years and nine-teen days.

Thus the flowers that sprang forth in the morning long ere the noonday are cut down, and withereth to bloom again in a clime where their freshness and beauty remain perpetual. The paternal home is reft of the familiar foothall, and the glaeful voices hushed; two chairs are vacant, and our hearts are crushed, but submissive to thy will who gave.

FRANKLIN—On the morning of Feb. 15, 1893, Bro. WILEY B. FRANKLIN sweetly fell asleep in Jesus at his home in Scott county, Miss. For nine weary days he suffered patiently the most intense pain, until his noble Christian spirit, freed from its prison of clay, winged its way to the God that gave it. Bro. Franklin was born in Pickens county, Ala., Oct. 1, 1813. When about twelve years old his parents moved to the State of Mississippi, and settled in Rankin county. He was married twice: first to Elizabeth Wilson; second to Mrs. Harriet Martin, who survives him. She, together with eleven children, two brothers and two sisters, are left behind.

Bro. Franklin professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in June, 1865. As a Christian, he was humble and submissive. True to his church, he was always ready to do anything or make any sacrifice for her welfare. As a steward, which office he filled for several years, he was in every sense the preacher's friend. He was loved by all who knew him. Surely a good man has gone to his reward. How we miss him! May God comfort the bereaved ones!

PAUL D. HARDIN.

FLYNN—Died, at the home of the parents, near Woodland, at 3 o'clock P. M. on Jan. 26, 1893, little MABLE, the only daughter of W. A. and Mattie Flynn.

Little Mable was four years and one month old, and at this early age had learned to love Jesus. Nothing was sweeter or dearer to her than the story of the cross. How her little heart would beat in sympathy over the suffering that Jesus endured while hanging on the cross! The tears would gather in her beautiful eyes, and she would remark to her mama that she intended to kiss the scars in Jesus' hands and feet when she went to heaven. Happy thought! to know that she has been transplanted to that beautiful land of rest. Yes, she is out of the storms of this life. She died from nervous prostration of the brain, caused from a burn received on the previous day.

Never was a more tranquil death than little Mable's. About one hour before she breathed her last, and with her face wreathed in smiles, she said, "I want to kiss you good-by, mama," and, tenderly placing her angelic arms around her mama's neck, said, "Good-by, mama," and imprinted an angel's kiss on the lips of her mother. She then told her papa she wanted to kiss him good-by, and, putting her dear arms around her papa, she bade him an affectionate good-by, kissed him twice and sweetly asked, "When are you coming, papa?" Ah! there was no power to stay her winged soul; angels beside the great white pearly gates rejoiced and waited for her ransomed soul, and her beautiful spirit winged its way back to the God who gave it, and her lovely eyes opened upon celestial beauties "over there."

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

HARMAN—Mrs. MARGARET E. HARMAN (nee Stingley) was born Sept. 4, 1835, in Lexington district, S. C.; moved with her parents to Attalla county, Miss., when only ten years old; was married to S. G. Harman, Dec. 23, 1853. She became the mother of six children—five of whom are yet living. She moved with her husband to Union county, Ark., in 1858. They lived happily together until his death, which occurred Jan. 7, 1881. She died in her home near New London, Ark., surrounded by her loving children and many friends, Jan. 2, 1893.

Her long years of widowed life had its burdens of sorrow; but for the sake of her dear children she sacrificed and suffered as few have done besides her. Having early in life became a Christian and a Methodist, she was faithful to her God and to the church. Her sickness was protracted and full of suffering, but no murmur or expression of impatience escaped her lips.

May this bitter trial lead all her children to look above and beyond the things of this earth to that radiant clime where the stars never set, and where the Son of Righteousness is the light and hope of his stricken children! We will ever cherish the memory of her holy life, and by divine grace overtake her in the heaven of the good.

L. J. H.

DOUGLAS—JAMES COWAN DOUGLAS was born near Richland, Holmes county, Miss., Oct. 19, 1861. Here he lived the most of his life. Last November he went to Texas hoping to improve his health. He died in Corsicana, Feb. 10, 1893, from the effects of la grippe.

From childhood he was unusually pious, often singing religious songs before he could speak distinctly. When fourteen years old he joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consistent member. On Dec. 22, 1887, he was married to Miss Pearl Griffin, of Durant, Miss., who, with a sweet little girl two years old, survives him. He leaves an aged father, mother, and brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

They try to be resigned, believing their loss to be his gain, and that "God doeth all things well." His patience during all his sickness was remarkable. Not a murmur or the least indication of impatience escaped his lips, but rather gratitude to those who ministered to him. All that could be was done by relatives and medical skill. God wanted and took him. He expressed a preparation for death. He died without a moan or struggle, simply fell asleep in Jesus.

J. F. EVANS.

GRAVES—SOPHRONIA, daughter of James W. and Mary A. Graves, was born in Blount county, Ala., Aug. 22, 1872, and died near Ackerman, Choctaw county, Miss., Nov. 1, 1892. Sophronia was the favorite of the family. She was kind, gentle and amiable. She was as sunshine in the house. But, oh! how soon has she been taken away!

I never knew one more obedient to parents than was she; never murmuring, but faithful and attentive. Her illness was short and severe, but her last was peaceful and quiet. She had never joined the church, but she had been reared under Christian influences, and for some time before her death there had been a great change in her life. There is comfort in the evidences which she gave the bereaved of her peace with God. She was always good, as we saw her; but still there was one thing lacking, which she found at the last. Thus innocently she lived and peacefully she died. Let others heed the command, "Seek first the kingdom of God." May the Lord comfort the sorrowing ones and save, one by one, them all!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

I, A. C. Haffelfinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

CHRIST WALKING ON THE SEA OF GALILEE.

AMONG the great religious paintings of modern times, Christ Walking on the Sea, by Charles Fraucer, is a masterpiece. The text from which the picture was taken is this: When even was come, his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship. And it was dark, and the ship was in the midst of the sea, and Jesus alone was on the land and was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew. And he saw them toiling in rowing, for the wind was contrary unto them, and the ship was now in the midst of the sea tossed with the waves. Jesus cometh unto them, walking upon the sea and would have passed them. But when the disciples saw him walking on the sea and drawing nigh unto the ship, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out for fear. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid."

This beautiful biblical description the painter has chosen for his subject, and his wonderful painting appeals in the highest degree to the religious sentiment, as well as the artistic taste and refinement of every nationality and every creed.

To the vast army of stay-at-homes the world beyond the sea, which once seemed so far away from them, has now become nearer. Events that take place in South Africa are known a few hours afterwards in America, and a feeling of familiarity with distant lands thus seems to have been created by telegraph. Besides this, we have books of travel, lectures by explorers and pictures to fall back upon, so that if "we can not go strange countries for to see," we have them brought home to our doors.

This GREAT NEW BOOK, containing a vast collection of Photographs, gathered from every corner of the globe, is printed on enamelled paper, bound in the most durable manner, and sold at $4 per copy.

Miss Rosie Bacigalupi,

April 4.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The Value of a Dollar.

Every boy should learn the true value of a dollar. To know what a dollar costs and what it buys is one of the stepping-stones to success. It is also desirable that everyone should know that a half dollar will buy a bottle of

Ask your dealer for a bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Gen. E. Kirby Smith, who died last week, was buried in Sewanee, Tenn., on March 31.

Hon. Thos. F. Bayard, of Delaware, has been nominated to be ambassador of the United States to England.

A sail boat, containing ten persons, was capsized at Spanish Fort, Lake Ponohartrain, on April 2. Six persons were rescued, and four drowned.

Congressman Hooker, of Mississippi, was struck by a cable car in Washington City, and his skull was fractured. His condition is not considered serious.

F. E. Murphy, the popular temperance advocate, has closed a five weeks' campaign at Hartford with 14,000 signers to the pledge of total abstinence.

It is said that an extra session of Congress will be called about Sept. 1, for the consideration of tariff legislation and the repeal of the Sherman act, and other financial legislation.

The total number of claims paid to date on all kinds of sugar-cane sugar, $6,599 533; beet sugar, $504 745; sorghum, $19,008; maple, $60 004. Grand total to date on 4,558 claims, $7,183,384.

Ex-Senator James B. Eustis left the city, April 3, for Washington, whence he will proceed to Paris, France, to assume his position there as minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary of the United States.

A seven-story building in New York City, occupied by the American Tobacco Company as a manufactory of smoking and chewing tobacco, was destroyed by fire on April 2. Loss, over a half of million dollars.

A disastrous fire occurred in a hotel in Bradford, Pa., on April 1, at 4:30 A. M. There were about 125 persons asleep in the building when the fire started. Five lives were lost and twenty-five persons were injured.

It has been recently announced from Washington that the Spanish government has decided to present the largest of the three caravels modeled after the Columbus caravels, which are now on their way to this country, to the United States at the close of the Chicago Exposition.

The Minnesota Legislature has passed a law providing that all Chinamen in the State of Minnesota shall dress like other citizens, and be prohibited from wearing their shirts outside their pants. The penalty for the violation of the act is a fine of not less than $1, nor more than $10, and the loss of the offender's pigtail.

Rupert Schmid, the San Francisco sculptor, has secured the contract to model a bronze group, representing Pocahontas saving the life of Captain John Smith. The expense will be $15,000. The money was contributed by the Smith family in Virginia and Nebraska. A descendant of the original John Smith has been the promoter of the enterprise.

It appears from a resolution introduced in the Senate on April 3 as if the debate on the subject of the election of senators by a direct vote of the people was to be renewed at the extra session of the Senate. Mr. Hoar introduced a resolution antagonistic to that proposition, and gave notice that as soon as convenient he would address the Senate on the rescission.

The Japanese detachment for the World's Fair arrived in Chicago on March 31. The train was made up of four day coaches, a sleeper, two baggage cars and twenty-six freight cars. There were 125 Japanese in the party, including dancing girls, a monster orang-outang, priests, actors, women and workmen. There were 1,100 tons of freight in the second section, it being the material for the village to be erected on the Midway Plaisance.

FOREIGN.

A commission of artillery experts have been testing for several days at the Jueteborg a new explosive, which is intended to replace ultimately gunpowder in the German army.

The movement for political union with the United States is developing fast. Almost every town in Ontario and Quebec has its political union, through which an active propaganda is carried on.

The Vatican has announced that the Pope will not grant audiences to any royal personages of the Roman Catholic faith who come to Rome to attend the silver wedding of King Humbert and Queen Margaret. This decision will apply to the representatives of Catholic sovereigns. In case of a Protestant sovereign, who attends the wedding, no such general rule has been made.

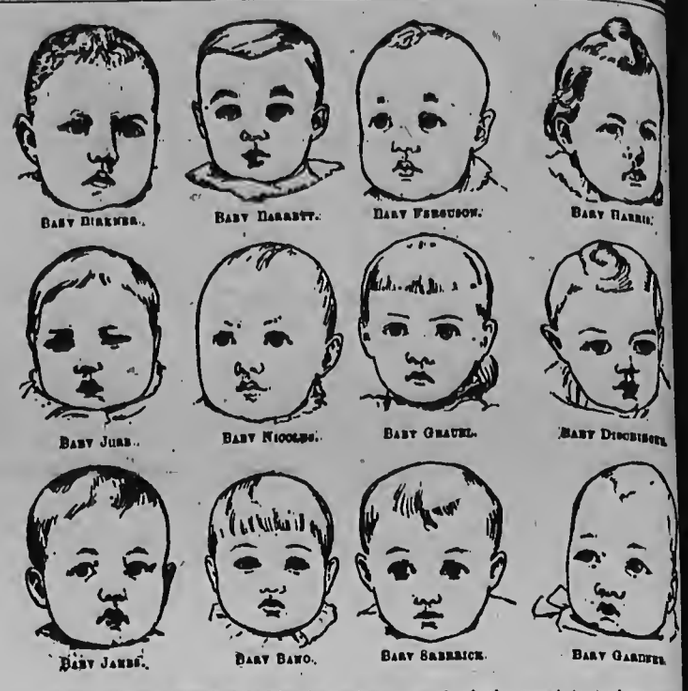
The seventy-eighth birthday of Prince Bismarck was celebrated with the usual demonstrations, on April 1, at Friedrichsruhe. Prince Bismarck received his visitors heartily and showed signs of both mental and bodily vigor. The main feature of the day's celebration was the arrival of thirteen deputations from Schleswig-Holstein and the duchy of Lacuerburg, numbering, in all, 3,000 persons. Prince Bismarck received countless letters and telegrams of congratulation from all parts of the world and people in all conditions of society.

M. Mange, agent for the liquidator of the Panama Canal Company, has secured from the Bogota government one month more in which to arrange for an extension of the time in which the company must begin work. The principal difficulty in the way of a resumption of the enterprise is the comprehensiveness of the guarantees demanded by the government. The company would be required to continue work on the canal without cessation, and to forfeit its plant and all the interests on the isthmus in case of any failure to comply with their requirements.

Hood's Cures.

In saying that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures, its proprietors make no idle or extravagant claim. Statements from thousands of reliable people prove that HOOD'S CURES.

Hood's Pills assist digestion.



THESE twelve beautiful babies have been cured of the most torturing and disfiguring of skin, scalp and blood diseases, with loss of hair, by the CUTICURA REMEDIES after the best physicians and all other remedies had failed. The story of their sufferings is almost too painful for recital. The days of torture and nights of agony from itching and burning eczemas, and other skin, scalp and blood diseases. Add to this the terrible disfigurement, and life seemed, in most cases, scarcely worth the living. But these cures are but examples of hundreds made daily by the CUTICURA REMEDIES. They may be heard of in every town, village and cross-roads. Grateful mothers proclaim them everywhere. In short, CUTICURA works wonders, and its cures are among the most marvellous of this or any age of medicine. To know that a single application of the CUTICURA REMEDIES will, in the great majority of cases, afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because most speedy) cure, and not to use them without a moment's delay, is to be in your duty. Cures made in infancy and childhood are speedy, and permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston. "All about the Skin, Scalp and Hair" mailed free.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW

—OF—

THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

W. P. HARRISON, D. D., LL.D., Editor.

Published quarterly. Each number has 216 beautifully printed pages on best book paper, making a volume of more than 800 pages for the year. The QUARTERLY is not commended by the ablest of our clergy and laity only, but it is mentioned with the highest respect by the editors of the best periodical literature throughout our country and abroad. It is a needed medium for the discussion of subjects too large for adequate treatment in the columns of weekly papers. It should be unanimously supported by our preachers, and widely distributed among the thoughtful of our laity. The subscription price of the QUARTERLY is $2. Your subscription is solicited.

The Great Exposition.

It is at last possible to foretell where he honors of the Exposition will go mong the nations of the earth. Ger- any will be entitled to the first place. he young Emperor's enthusiasm, preading to his subjects, has produced he most magnificent exhibition of re- ources any nation has made, outside of s own boundary lines. The beautiful tructure bearing the words, "German mpire," has never been excelled as a ational offering in a foreign land. It as been only since that structure eared completion that its beauty and mperial magnificence have come to be ppreciated on the grounds. No one oubts that it is in Jackson Park to stay, or once the people of Chicago have en it and roamed through its halls, ublic sentiment will not permit its de- truction.

In the Krupp gun exhibit Germany as also outdone the world. Baron trumm's display in the Mining Build- g excels anything ever attempted. the big Manufactures Hall Germany ill present a proud front to the great lock tower where the powers of Eu- ope and America will meet. In the orticultural Building German wares ill compete with those of France for rst place. So runs the story from uilding to building.

In the tastiness and finished beauty f its exhibits Japan excels. Its pago- in manufactures has already attract- d the attention of the country. In fish- ies the Japanese exhibit will outrank at of any other foreign nation, both the beauty of its presentation and cientific value. The little garden trans- anted from Japan to the Horticultural uilding will be the choicest thing nder the big glass dome. It is re- arkable that of all the foreign goods ceived at Jackson Park, those from ross the Pacific have come in the st condition and have been the most curately marked.

New South Wales has done nobly. hat far-away land has a good repre- ntation in every department, and its uilding is a credit to its enterprise.

Spain has not attempted to cover the eld of human industry as Germany as done, but what it will show is ighly satisfactory.

Russia and Turkey will win the good- will of the millions of visitors. The mer will "do itself proud" by its ructure and exhibit in manufactures. he Turkish Building is already one the curiosities of the foreign quarter.

England has not done so well as its rovince, the Dominion of Canada. he truth is, the management have en disappointed somewhat at the avilions Queen Victoria's representa- ves are erecting in their buildings. ictoria House was also a disappoint- ent. Private exhibitors from the nited Kingdom have done better than e government.

France, the mother of World's Fairs, building a structure at the central int in manufactures which will do uch to sustain the proud claims of arisians.

Of the South and Central American untries, Brazil and Guatemala will ve the best showing in National uildings. In the departments Brazil ill outrank the rest of Pan-America. No penny-wise policy has been pur- ed in the allotment of space on the or of the Agricultural Building. ore than one-half of its area will oan beneath the weight of foreign hibits. The world from China to ru will display its food stuffs in some tion of its 40,000 feet of extent. aintaining to an extent a similarity general character, the display will ry more in degree than in kind in ch of the multitude of exhibits. ith barely an exception, every Euro- an country has forwarded, or will ward, the choicest of its products to ace the Exposition. From the demi- ilization that sparsely peoples the ote banks of the Volga, the trim ebandry of the Rhine, the evergreen ds of the Thames, the smiling ver- re beside the Garonne and Guadal- ver, the farmer family in all its anches will unite to greet the great est.

Russia, the great wheat field of Eu- pe, has been conceded the largest ce, hor exhibit occupying nearly ,000 feet of surface. Wheat in all rms will be the prevailing character- tic of its exhibit.

Australia and Canada are next on the le as to the size of their exhibit ce. Now South Wales, which will er a large portion of the space con- ceded to Australia, will make a mag- nificent display of wool. Canada will signalize her admission to the agricul- tural exposition by a cheese so mon- strous that, in its comparison, all cheeses, ancient or modern, lapse into insignificance. Ten thousand cows have been milked to provide for the construction of the giant, and the floor has been especially strengthened to bear its weight of 20,000 pounds. Its dimensions will be nine feet diameter and six feet in height. At the close of the Exposition it will be carved into slices and sold to all comers.

No higher compliment could be paid to the estimation which the World's Fair holds in the minds of the nations than is accorded by Brazil. Without contraction or diminution, the entire national display from last year's ex- hibition at Rio will be transferred to Chicago. Coffee will be the staple of the showing, and it will be on evidence from berry to breakfast cup.

More solid and substantial than that of any other country will be the pavil- ion to be erected by Mexico. Orna- mental iron gateways 14 feet in height will stand in its portals, and iron will form the material of which much of the interior finishing will consist. Holland will raise a tastefully designed pavilion whose front will be formed of a broad archway with tall columns on either side. France will display an elaborate exhibit of food stuffs and canned goods. Her colonies, Anam and Tonquin, will share a pavilion of their own, in the form of a dome, sur- mounted by a star and crescent. Italy will cover 3,000 feet with its dis- play, and Paraguay, Honduras, Greece and Japan will also be represented.

In spite of the fact that the prepon- derance of space is in favor of the for- eigner, the home producer will find full and adequate scope for exhibiting to the world American agricultural meth- ods and products. With a few excep- tions, each State and Territory in the Union will possess its pavilion, many of them vying with the most elaborate of the edifices of the nations in originality of conception and magnificence of ex- ecution.

Chicago, April 6.

Memoir of Rev. H. M. Booth.

BY REV. H. J. HARRIS.

Again it devolves on me, less than the least of all my brethren, to write the memoir of one of the best and purest among men while living, and who, being now dead, "yet speaketh" by the recollections we cherish in common with thousands of his useful life and labors in the holy ministry—Rev. Horace M. Booth, who died at his home in Rockport, Aransas county, Texas, March 6, 1893, aged seventy- seven years.

Already through the columns of the ADVOCATE his brethren of the Missis- sippi Conference, as well as else- where, have been advised of his tri- umphant exit from earth to a "home in heaven." The periods of his active ministry, both in Mississippi and Texas, as also the number of years that he was on the superannuated roll, have been succinctly stated, and many of your readers, perhaps, are ready to say, "Quantum sufficit." But the fol- lowing letter is my apology for what might otherwise be regarded a work of supererogation:

Dear Bro. Harris: I send you some items of my religious and ministerial experience upon which to predicate a memoir when I am gone. I expect you to select and combine such as your judgment and skill may determine. . . . Should you die before me, please transfer this sketch to Dr. C. G. An- drews, who is my beau ideal of a preacher, writer and delineator of character.

Your brother in Christ,
H. M. BOOTH.

This places me under obligation, at least, to quit from his autobiography placed in my hands some facts and in- cidents of his experience in the minis- try (as well as before he yielded to the promptings of the Holy Spirit and gave his whole life to God) as might be of benefit to young ministers espe- cially, and to all who are called of God to preach the gospel. This work he had assigned to his life-long friend, the loved and lamented John G. Jones. But God took Bro. Jones first. Then (thank God for the honor!) he re- quests me to perform the task he had assigned to Bro. Jones, and, in the event I died first, then Dr. C. G. An- drews was in the succession.

Bro. Booth writes, in his "Notes by the Way," thus: "I was born in Clai- borne county, Miss., Oct. 23, 1815. Lost both my parents early in life. My mother was burned to death. My father married a second wife. She died soon, then my father shortly after, and I was left an orphan in the care of an aged grandmother and my father's brother, as my guardian. They were very kind in their treat- ment; provided for all my temporal needs. But they were not religious, and no care was taken for my soul. 'No man cared for my soul.' My asso- ciates were chiefly the negroes on my uncle's plantation. But that God, whose hand I recognize as the chief factor of my religious life, threw me under the influence of a pious mater- nal aunt, who taught me the 'Lord's Prayer.' So deeply was I impressed by her influence that for years on years I could not 'lay me down to sleep' at night without repeating that prayer as she had taught me. I grew to young manhood under the ordinary influ- ences of association in a country neigh- borhood school, until, in the provi- dence of God, I was led to Cumberland College, Ky., where, at a young men's prayer meeting, I was profoundly con- victed of sin—its dreadful conse- quences in the loss of my soul. I felt that no self-righteous plea would avail to my relief. I was considered a moral young man; yet no sinner, however depraved, ever passed through a more fearful ordeal than this scribe. I found in the groves of Cumberland College some relief in the melting power of a Savior's love, and, although not satis- factory, it was the inauguration of a new life that has exerted its consoling influence through an experience of sixty years. I went home on a visit from Cumberland College, expecting to return, but was importuned until persuaded by the slaves on my uncle's plantation to take charge of them and the farm. While thus employed, I en- tered into all the sports of young men of the period—the fox chase, and oth- ers. Amid these sports, one day, I was thrown from my horse against a tree, and remained unconscious for several days. When I came to myself I was deeply impressed that God had more important work for me to do than the sports of the chase. I became more interested in the services of the sanctuary—in the prayer and class meetings, and the preaching of the Word. I was appointed class leader of a large church at Rocky Springs in my native county. It is cheering to me still to recall the happy seasons I en- joyed there. My brethren of the church became impressed that God had called me to his work in the holy ministry. They sent me, with all my conscious insufficiency, into the minis- terial work; and now, for over fifty years, this trembling, shrinking and frequently desponding minister has been sustained in the discharge of the duties and responsibilities of this great work. I joined the Mississippi Con- ference in December, 1838."

There are two cardinal points in the experience of a young preacher to which Bro. Booth desired to call the attention of that class, specially, and all those who are engaged in this holy vocation. 1. The divine call to the ministry. 2. Entire consecration to this blessed work. He says, in his au- tobiography: "First of all, the young minister should feel that he is inward- ly moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon him the office and work of the ministry. No man taketh this honor to himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron; and woe is me if I preach not the gospel. Secondly, young ministers, in addition to the sustaining power of Almighty grace and the spirit of God, should have a good degree of self-assertion, and use all the possible appliances of grace to ensure success. The want of this self- assertion or courage, any diversion to secular pursuits, has been the bane of my ministerial life. I have not achieved what I might have done with a greater degree of consecration." [Alas! how many can say the same!]

Bro. Booth and this writer were as David and Jonathan in our early min- istry. We loved each other like broth- ers. We were colleagues on Colers Creek (now Fayette circuit) circuit, Mississippi Conference, in 1845, and, under God, had one of the most won- derful revivals in the history of the Mississippi Conference. We received nearly 400 members into the church. Referring to this gracious work, he says: "It was in this year that I wit- nessed such displays of divine power through feeble instrumentality as were never surpassed in a long life of minis- terial labor."

Bro. Booth was married this year to Miss Emily Whitney, daughter of Judge Jno. M. Whitney, of Fayette, Jefferson county, Miss., who survives him. She had been reared amid affluence; had every accomplishment, her crowning grace being her unaffected devotion to God. Speaking of his mar- riage in a private letter to me, he says of his precious wife: "My marital re- lations you know. Near half a century of wedded life has blessed us with sons and a daughter, who have amply sup- plied the means to keep us from suffer- ing for want of the necessaries of life." He says again, speaking of his wife: "She consented to forsake all for the toils and privations of an itinerant's life, and has, for all these years, shared them without a murmur."

My brother has gone to his eternal reward, and now joins the chorus of the redeemed in that "brighter, bright- er world above."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. M. L. Burton, McComb City, Miss.: "We are having a very prosper- ous year. Thirty-two accessions to date; congregations good; had a pounding some months ago. Finances well up."

Rev. W. T. Currie, Ponchatoula, La., March 29: "Have just closed a protracted meeting at this place. Meeting lasted fifteen days. The first week I was alone, preaching twice a day. Bros. N. J. Roberts and P. M. Brown came to my relief. As to the results, we can not say. No candidates for membership. Many asked an in- terest in prayer. Congregation large; something unusual for this place. We will soon have our church completed. Four men, not members of the church, have agreed to finish it. May God bless them! Pray for us."

Rev. N. J. Roberts, St. Helena cir- cuit, Mississippi Conference: "We had a good day yesterday, the second day of April. Before eleven o'clock the church was crowded. At the close of the service I asked the congregation for $40 of our Conference assessments. Received in cash and good subscrip- tion, $55. Four accessions; baptized one adult and ten children. The dear old ADVOCATE is finding its way to many new homes on the work. Two new subscribers and two renewals to- day. The people everywhere along the circuit have extended only kind- ness to their preacher, and he is pray- ing and working for their spiritual good."

Rev. B. S. Rayner: "This work is composed of our Morton, Forest and Pelahatchie Churches. We have good, strong churches in fine working order at all these places. Bro. D. P. Brad- ford, my predecessor, did a good work, and left the churches doing well. Our parsonage is at Morton. The people received us kindly, and continue to treat us well. Our people have ever treated us kindly, but none more so than some of these. Our congrega- tions are good and increasing. Prayer meeting and Sunday-schools are doing well. We have had seventeen acces- sions. I have, some time since, visited nearly all my people. Our good women are working actively. We have se- cured all of our Conference collections except about $20. Our churches have the very excellent plan of paying quar- terage monthly. Thus far the year has been delightful, and the future is full of promise. God is with us."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, Learned, Miss., March 31: "After three months' dili- gent labor in the vineyard of the Lord, with the hearty co-operation of most of the official members, and others whose names are written in heaven, I am able to see some good accom- plished. We have forwarded one-third of our assessment for Conference claimants to our treasurer; secured a number of new subscribers and several renewals; have undertaken to raise money to build a parsonage (and have succeeded well so far); received by certificate eight, restored one, and re- moved by certificate, withdrawal and order of Church Conference, twenty, and have three candidates for church membership. Our people at Bear Creek and Reaves Chapel have prom- ised to organize a Sunday-school the first of April. Learned Church is in a good condition. We have here a splendid Sunday-school, though small, and a very flourishing prayer meeting, while the people, as a circuit, have not overlooked the wants of the preacher."

R. C. Grace, Simsport, La., March 29: "The people in this part of the world have been greatly damaged on account of the high water last year, and many of our members have moved away; but there are a few left in Israel, and we are hammering away trying to build up our part of Jerusalem. We are much exposed to the enemy, but we calculate to get up the wall in a short time, and then, by the help of the Lord, we are going to build and set up the gates. We are anxious to get to the sheep-gate, and set it up and make it strong, for the enemy is well armed on that side. After that we think to be able to stand our ground. We have one prayer meeting and three Sabbath-schools. Expect to organize another Sunday- school next Sabbath. Our first quar- terly meeting was on the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of this month. Rev. S. J. Davies, P. E., was at his post, and preached three stirring sermons. Our love-feast on that Sabbath will be long remembered. It was rich, of course. My people have been very kind to me since my arrival here. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. J. G. Cammack, Summit, Miss., March 27: "We closed, on March 12, a most excellent meeting at this place. The work done was mostly in the church. Think we got most of the church converted and the world driven out; the morals of the town toned up, and the church made more respectable before the world; a deeper consecra- tion than I have seen since I have been here. Some of the results are: A men's prayer meeting, a ladies' prayer meeting, quite a number praying in public, and family altars erected, and a new church to worship in in the near future. The work will abide. I give the view of one of our laymen on the meeting: 'The meeting was the most successful I have ever had the pleasure of attending. We had pure old gospel preaching by Bro. Weems, of Brook- haven, and Bro. J. A. Bowen, of Aber- deen, Miss. Both did fine service for the Lord. While there were only two accessions, the members were stirred up as they have not been for years, and they are determined to live on a higher plane of religion, and closer to God.—C. E. H.' We hope to move on and do a much greater work for the Master in the future."

Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., Water Valley station, North Mississippi Con- ference: "The following facts were brought out in the second Quarterly Conference: About eight years ago the stewards began to work the monthly payment plan. No failure discouraged them. Now the stewards have no trouble to get the money, and the pas- tor gets his pay the first of every month, just as he should get it. This plan has educated all the members to pay, and the paying has given every member interest in the work of the church. The Sunday-school is good—very good. A well-attended prayer meeting, full of spirituality. This church does not tax the pastor with the collections ordered by Conference. All he has to do is to ask for the sub- scription early in the year, and this subscription is handed to the stewards, and they collect it. The pastor stated that this church had paid every dollar of collections and pastor's salary for the past eight years. Every charge in the Grenada district could do as well if the stewards would only work the plan. Brethren, will you please do so? Let us bring this district up to meet every dollar of the assessments. And let's put the ADVOCATE into every Methodist home in the district."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Poplar Bluff, Mo., April 1: "This is a growing town of four thousand population; cosmo- politan in character. The town begins to put on a city-like appearance, ex- cept its streets, which are now being improved very rapidly, and will soon be in keeping with other improve- ments. The buildings, both public and private, are neat and handsome. Residences generally two-story. Rail- roads, factories, shops, etc., make it a live place and a good business point; but, with all these improvements and advantages, the church has not kept pace; hence it is counted a tough place, which it really is. However, we have some splendid people here; no better anywhere. Denominational lines are clearly—yea, even severely—drawn here. In fact, I never saw them more so anywhere. 'The Jews and Samaritans have no dealings with each other,' may be written of these churches. The Methodists have the best church property in the place, ours being a splendid brick structure. Rev. Allen Macfarlan is our pastor here, and is doing a good work. We are just closing a splendid meeting in our church. Seventy-three names have already been added to the roll of membership, and still the good work goes on. Our church was never in better condition at this point. So say the oldest citizens. Rev. O. G. Halli- burton, the live, stirring presiding el- der of this district, has been with us from time to time during the meeting (as his work would allow), rendering us very efficient assistance in the serv- ices. He is a delightful companion in the work. Rev. J. F. Kendall, presid- ing elder of the Charleston district, was also with us a day or two, and preached two sermons, which have been highly spoken of. These are live men, and Methodism in Southeast Mis- souri is coming to the front very rap- idly under their wise leadership. We will probably close the meeting here to-morrow night, and I will return to Memphis, and assist Rev. R. M. King in a similar work at Pennsylvania avenue. We are praying for and ex- pecting a good work of grace there. Pray for us."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Caseyville circuit, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Con- ference, March 29: "We are, in some respects, moving well. New Sunday- schools organized, old ones taking on new life, and, all things considered, our Sunday-schools doing well. Par- ents and young people, as well as chil- dren, are taking a lively interest in them; yet there is room for improve- ment. Our children attend church as well as Sunday-school, and most of them are members of the church—many of them converted; yet some are strangers to grace, and are, I fear, be- coming hardened in sin. Where fam- ily worship is totally neglected I find it difficult sometimes to interest children in religious matters. Where children are properly taught at home I find it, in most instances, an easy matter to interest them in Sunday-school and church work. While the church is waking up in some sections to a live- lier interest in general church work, the devil is as busy as he can well be 'sowing tares among the wheat;' 'en- tering into many houses, making havoc of the church.' When, oh! when, will some people 'cease to do evil and learn to do well!' The ten dollars promised during last Conference for Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, of Japan Mission, has been collected and forwarded to Dr. T. S. West. Veterans' Day was faithfully observed, and more than three-fourths of the amount assessed to Caseyville charge collected and forwarded to W. M. Thornton, treasurer Joint Board of Finance, at Lake, Miss. Uncle Dave and Aunt Epsy McRee, who have served the church in these parts so faithfully for many, many years, and under whose roof so many weary itin- erants have been so comfortably shel- tered, are in feeble health; yet they never fail to fill their places in church, and their presence, prayers and close attention to the Word helps the preacher wonderfully. God bless them in their affections, and sanctify them to his glory and their good. I bespeak for them an interest in the prayers of all our preachers, especially those who have shared the hospitality of their home. Some of our good sisters are collecting money to buy a cow for the parsonage. A good move, for this preacher is very fond of milk and but- ter. The weather continues cool, and farming interest moves off rather slow. Owing to the pressure in money mat- ters, some of our people are slow to subscribe for, and others slow renew- ing for, the ADVOCATE. I try to press its claims upon the people, and suc- ceed in doing so in some instances."

Notice.

All who intend coming to the Dis- trict Conference here, May 18-21, will please write to me. If anyone expects to bring his wife or daughter, let us know. We give all the preachers' wives and daughters a special invita- tion to come.

W. C. LESTER.

IT IS COMMON.

So are the stars and the arching skies,
So are the smiles in the children's eyes
Common the life giving breath of the Spring;
So are the songs which the wild birds sing—
Blessed be God, they are common.

Common the grass in its ginwing green;
So is the water's glistening sheen:
Common the springs of love and mirth;
So are the holiest gifts of earth.

Common the fragrance of rosy June;
So is the generous harvest moon,
So are the towering, mighty hills,
So are the twittering, trickling rills.

Common the beautiful tints of the Fall;
So is the sun which is over all
Common the rain, with its pattering feet
So is the bread which we daily eat—
Blessed be God, it is common.

So is the sea in its wild unrest,
Kissing forever the earth's brown breast;
So is the voice of undying prayer,
Evermore piercing the ambient air.

So unto all are the "promises" given,
So unto all is the hope of heaven:
Common the rest from the weary strife:
So is the life which is after life—
Blessed be God, it is common.

Concerning Discipline.

I have read with interest the articles of Bros. Peebles and Weems on this subject, and the importance must be my excuse for writing. Discipline presupposes government and authority, and implies the necessity of restriction and training in order to best secure the ends of government. They only are disciples in the true sense who have been subjected to discipline. In the Word the church is likened to an army, and its members to trained soldiers. No host, however brave or enthusiastic, can long cope successfully with an army of trained soldiers, for its very enthusiasm, undirected and unrestrained, will curtail the results of a victory and often turn it into defeat. Never has there been an army so strong, fierce, persistent and thoroughly under control of its leader, as that which confronts the church. How necessary, then, for her hosts to be thoroughly disciplined, so that she may present an unbroken front in march, fight, or siege! She should be, but is not always, "as terrible as an army with banners." She has the best leader and the bravest soldiers on earth, and the authority which commands her is the mightiest. Why, then, is she not invincible always? Why is not her discipline such as to march her forces at short notice to the conquest of the world? We will notice some points at which there occurs failure in her discipline.

1. Disregard of authority. We live in an age of boasted independence. Many who assume the vows of obedience to both church regulations and divine precepts do, in certain indulgences, claim reserved rights, and from certain restrictions personal immunity; sometimes denying the application of the law to their cases; sometimes utterly disregarding or defying its mandates. The administrators do not always acknowledge the authority of the law they are morally, and by their own solemn covenant bound to execute; sometimes modifying it to suit their views or convenience, or the whims of their people; sometimes neglecting its provisions; sometimes refusing to apply it, and thus, by their own failure or disloyalty, they weaken its force and impair its discipline.

2. Lack of uniformity in construing and applying the law is another point of weakness. The Christian churches vary widely in their views of some important moral questions, and still more apart do they drift in their dealing with them. Take the evils of the dance, the theater, the card-table and social drinking, and the church that has an enlightened conscience on these subjects, and dares lay its restraining hand upon its members to deter them from participating in them, will find but little sympathy in her sister churches, and sometimes their doors will gladly open to receive its unruly members. Not only so, but in our own church there is, in different localities and among different administrators, so much variation in enforcing its regulations—alas! sometimes the precepts of the divine law—that the faithful administrator has a difficult task to hold to the standard the law lays down. We solemnly engage "not to mend our rules, but to keep them;" yet how often are they read different, modified, or even laid aside altogether! Is it asked, "By what right?" Let the answer be made by those better skilled in sophistry than this writer. In the matter of worldly amusements, for instance, the people are sometimes left to their own discretion, the pastor's protest, if made at all, being too feeble to produce an impression, and sometimes actually creating the impression that he does not object to these indulgences. Nor do "guns loaded with small shot," nor even heavy columbiads fired at long range from the pulpit, meet the demands of discipline. They more frequently drive into the enemy's camp, or render impossible the capture of the soul and its recovery to duty by gentle, loving, but firm personal appeals, which require more moral courage than firing long range guns at purblind offenders. To preach against popular sins undoubtedly is a duty of the faithful minister; but it is to be feared that much moral cowardice or laziness is involved when it goes no farther than pulpit deliverances. But "moral suasion" is not in itself discipline. Remonstrances and appeals must be backed by the majesty of the law, with the understanding that its authority binds alike the offender and the administrator. On the other hand, discipline is all law to some, and its harsh enforcement is to be deprecated, especially where accompanied by threats, public or private. Nor is the law evenly administered as to the offenses. Improprieties which might be corrected by kind personal approach and remonstrance are aggravated by threats, then punished by exclusion, while worse evils go without rebuke, especially if found in prominent members. We dare not, as we are answerable to God for the souls of those over whom we watch, leave our young people in the deadly maelstrom of worldly amusements; but, with strong, loving, prayer-baptized hands, must draw them out of it. But what of those who draw them into it by their private dances and card parties?—or of those members who drink, game, neglect the church, or are accused of disreputable or questionable business methods?

Why—we ask—this lack of uniformity? Are our laws too stringent? Then they should be modified. Are they not clear enough? Then they should be made unequivocal. We find not the reasons there; let us look well to ourselves. Do we not fear to lose social prestige in the community by condemning what "society" approves? May we not ourselves become unpopular thereby? Will not our people find fault with us, and join with these prominent sinners in giving us "the grand bounce"? And will not he be "the coming man" who bears with Col. A's drinking, Dr. B's liquor interest, Mrs. Judge C's card parties and dances, Esquire D's general neglect of church duties and utter worldliness, and the dear young people's frolicsomeness?

3. Lax discipline in the church is caused by failure to hold the administrators to the law. I know I tread on dangerous ground, but trust none but the guilty will take exception to the point. Are our preachers held to account for a faithful execution of discipline? Is there such a careful investigation of their administration in this respect by Bishops, presiding elders or Annual Conferences, as to secure any uniformity in discipline, or make sentiment among the preachers in favor of a faithful execution of our laws? I do not remember the question being sprung at any Annual Conference I ever attended, and rarely at a Quarterly Conference. Sometimes a man is criticised in private for excessive severity; but who remembers a censure for failure to execute discipline? Furthermore, are not our people encouraged to laxity in keeping our laws by the weak discipline to which the preachers themselves are subjected? Is it not remarkable that the "official administration"—which term includes all a man's qualifications for itinerant service—of so many preachers as we send forth passes muster with a unanimous aye? Is it a remarkable administration, or a remarkably loose muster? Take the Bishop's lieutenants, the presiding elders. We hear much of them—for and against—before and after Conference; but what thorough, patient investigation is made of their faithfulness, efficiency, loyalty to all our doctrines and discipline, adaptability to the office or acceptability to people and preachers? What open, manly objection is ever made to any incumbent in the office? What weak, defective, or unsatisfactory administration of the office ever is objected to where only such objection should be urged on the Conference floor? The preachers are largely to blame for some things that are sometimes privately spoken against. Have they any reason to fear the presiding elder's influence? Who are the presiding elders but their own brethren amenable to them (in Conference) for what they do? Let us deal faithfully with each other. And what and where is the thorough review of the pastor's record which is so needed in order to a competent and efficient administration of the affairs of the church? Is he himself obedient to law, prompt and faithful to duty, loyal to our usages and regulations, loving and firm in discipline, prudent and consistent in speech and life, careful in private and church business, adapted to the work, acceptable to the people? The people talk of these matters in an undertone—sometimes louder—and they are among "cabinet secrets;" but what does the Conference know or say of them? Even in cases of habitual failure the only penalty in most cases seems to be to "move," and this leaves the delinquent unrebuked and unreformed, and the unfortunate church to which he goes suffers most. Some preachers need great grace for certain charges, and the reverse is sometimes true. At Conference, under the question, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" Bro. A's name is called. "Nothing against him," is answered, although he is a failure, and the people have told the presiding elder they do not want him any more. He reads his report "without note or comment" from anyone. The Conference, without any knowledge of what he ought to have done, or might have done, or did not do, "pass his character," and send him forth to afflict some other unfortunate people. Bro. B is called—a faithful, prudent, diligent, painstaking man, who has done his best, perhaps with but little apparent success. Same answer. The Conference hears but little of his work, character or qualifications, and pass him likewise in the dark. Is this fair to him? Is not a reform needed in the matter of our annual examination of character? Do we not owe it to the churches who depend upon us for their pastors?—to the cause of Christ which so much needs an active, effective, aggressive ministry? Will not such a course allay much of the disposition on part of our people to choose their own pastors? When the preacher remembers, "I, too, am a man under authority," then he can say to "this man go, and to that one come," and will find a cheerful acquiescence.

HENRY E. PARTRIDGE.

Tobacco at the Southern University, Alabama.

Several days ago it was my happy fortune to visit Greensboro, Ala., in the interest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and had the pleasure of speaking in the Methodist Church on the kind invitation of its pastor, Rev. Jno. Keener. Dr. Andrews, president of the Southern University, requested me to address the students of that institution the following morning, which I did. It was one of the most delightful experiences of my life. Rev. Mr. Keener opened with devotional exercises, and after a charming introduction by Dr. Andrews, who cordially endorsed the W. C. T. U., I talked to the fine body of students before me. In the course of my remarks I spoke of the evil effects of tobacco upon the human system and of the inconsistency of ministers, professed followers and imitators of Christ, indulging in the tobacco habit, citing the following incident that was related by Dr. Lemhuth, last Summer, at Waynesville, N. C., soon after his return to America. "A foreign missionary, strongly addicted to the use of tobacco, on leaving the United States carried great quantities of cigars with him, fearing he would not be able to secure them in Japan, and at all hours of the day he would be seen smoking. A young prince was converted under his ministry and joined the church. For several months following he seemed very unhappy. One day he went to the missionary and said: 'Sir, sometimes it is in my heart to wish that you had never come to Japan, for you are a stumbling-block in the way of my friends. There are five or six young men of the royal family who are my close associates, and I have tried earnestly to persuade them to accept the Christian religion, but they say they have no faith in it, for you, who are its exponent, do not live in accord with your doctrine. You preach about one Paul, who said the body is the temple of God, and his spirit dwells in it, and it should be kept pure, which is a reasonable service, but you defile it every day by the use of tobacco. Sir, tobacco is keeping my princely friends out of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.' The missionary was amazed. Looking at the young man steadily, he said: 'If you can prove to me that this is true, I will never touch tobacco again while the world stands.' The prince ran from the room and quickly returned with the young men, his 'princely friends,' who all declared that the testimony of the prince was true—that they could not accept a religion that had so little effect upon its followers. The missionary, convicted in such manner, unhesitatingly brought the remainder of his cigars out and destroyed them in the presence of the young men, vowing never to touch tobacco again. The young prince left the room hurriedly again: Returning in a few moments, he brought a package carefully wrapped up in paper, which he proceeded to unwrap, disclosing the stump of a cigar. Turning to the missionary, he said, 'I used to watch you as you walked up and down the orchard smoking, and one day saw you throw away this piece of your cigar. I took it up and carrying it to my room, placed it where all Japanese place their gods—over the doorway—and every day I would kneel down under it and pray my God to deliver you from your god—tobacco. My prayer has been answered.' In the course of time the prince had the happiness of seeing all his young friends accept the religion of Christ."

At the close of my talk, Mr. Keener rose and said: "Young gentlemen, I have used tobacco continuously for twenty years, and have risen superior to its effects in many respects: it has not lessened my size, nor injured my digestion; but I have not escaped wholly unhurt; my nervous system has suffered extremely from it, and I have felt the evil of it in other ways. It would be a hard struggle for me to give up the use of tobacco after all these years; but, young men, you shall never say that I have stood in your way or been a stumbling-block to you. In your presence this morning and in the presence of this public, I deliberately sign a pledge never to use tobacco in any form again." The pledge was signed amid the wildest plaudits from everyone in the hall. Dr. Andrews rose, and, after paying a tribute to the strength of the manhood of Mr. Keener, said: "I taught him years ago in this university, and I love him as I love my sons. I have always been near to him, and now I want my name to go next to his as a prop and stay." After this, an appeal was made to the students to take the same pledge. Eighty came forward and signed. It was a red-letter day in the history of many lives. How I do wish that all the ministers in our grand old Methodist Church who use tobacco could be brought to see the evil of it on other lives as well as their own, and had true bravery to renounce it as heroically as Mr. John Keener. O, my brothers, may God help you to see it and give you the necessary strength to make the renunciation.

BELLE KEARNEY.

A Double Hanging!

This is a singular heading for an article for a religious paper, but the article will not be at all sensational. I was in Hazlehurst, Copiah county, Miss., and went with Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., to the execution of two criminals near that town. I had no desire to witness this awful scene and no curiosity to gratify in the death of these unfortunate men. They had been parties to an awful crime of blood, and had been tried according to law and condemned to pay the penalty of their crime. It was right, just and righteous that they be executed according to law. My judgment approved capital punishment in all such cases, though the whole thing was shocking to my feelings. I went to give sympathy and moral support to a brother preacher who was called upon to perform a religious duty on a trying occasion. The same sad office I had filled on three occasions in the army when men were shot by order of a court-martial. I knew how trying it was. I was glad that preachers and other Christians, both white and black, had had free access to these criminals in the jail, and that the officers of the law and the people generally were willing and anxious for the ministers to go with them and to lead them in prayer and supplication the last thing before the drop fell. I was glad that even so awful a thing as capital punishment could be administered and executed in the fear of God and in the name of Christ. I was glad that everything that love could suggest and kindness could do was done to mitify and modify the horrors of this horrid end. I do not think criminals ought to be executed in public, and I have a holy horror of the curiosity that prompts a crowd to rush to such scenes as this; but it did me good to see heads uncovered and bowed and to feel the awful hush of stillness, if not reverence, while God's Word was read, a hymn sung and prayer offered.

The whole thing was a tribute to the majesty of God, of law and of human sympathy with human suffering. I could but think how much better this was than the frenzy and fury of a mob, crazy with passion, possibly with spirits, ruthlessly and roughly rushing a guilty, or, perhaps, guiltless, mortal into the presence of God without a moment for preparation, perhaps with studied forms of cruelty added. However bad a public execution according to law may be, it is infinitely better than killing men by a mob. I was glad that the dignity, honor and majesty of law were vindicated right here in Copiah county, where, perhaps, amid the fury and passions of the hour, for a time, at least, these high and holy things had been forgotten by some people. When the law is faithfully administered and its penalties rigidly and kindly executed, public virtue is greatly promoted. A mob is generally vicious and vindictive in meting out punishment, however richly it may be deserved by the criminal. It is criminal punishment of crime. It wreaks vengeance, but never vindicates the supremacy and majesty of law. Men who engage in mobs sin against the State, against their fellow-men, against God and against their own souls. A gallows, where needed, is a sign of a high order of civilization and a standing memorial of the majesty and faithful administration of law. It is always a mournful and sorrowful pleasure to me to look at one of them. I am profoundly sorry they are needed, but since they are, I am glad we have them. It is a maudlin and sickly sentiment that opposes capital punishment—death—for some crimes; a sentiment alike contrary to the Word of God and the fundamental principles of good government.

In the nature of the case law should be so administered as to be a terror to evil-doers. Bad men should be made to fear to sin. Fear, unless it be filial, is not the highest motive to law obeying, but it is the only motive that appeals to some men. If men will not respect law enough to obey, they must be made to stand in awe of it.

These are some of the reflections that ran through my mind as I stood uncovered, solemn, prayerful and suffering in every nerve, in the presence of this double hanging.

GILDEROY.

"Some Rebel Relics."

May I be permitted to say to your readers that I have in press at our Publishing House in Nashville a book on the war, written from the standpoint of an infantry rebel soldier of the rank and file in the departments of Tennessee and Mississippi? Your paper is published for those Conferences in the bounds of which our army made numberless footprints, and fought Yankees on many battlefields in the interest of Southern freedom. We did what we could to keep back the invaders from your lovely Southland, but our forces were too largely outnumbered by the enemy for us to accomplish what we so ardently desired to do and so eagerly contended for.

"Well, peace has been made, and why talk and write now about the war?" ask the organic unionists. Speaking for myself, I am particularly anxious that my children and children's children, not to speak of our people at large, shall know why I fought in the Rebel Army. There are various other manifest considerations for writing of the war as we saw it, from its inception to its close, which need not here to be mentioned. We were right in what we did, and we do not propose to speak apologetically of the grand movement in which we were so heartily enlisted. And how is it possible for a correct history of the war to be written unless we tell all about our connection with it? This is made the more necessary by the manner in which our enemies persist to this day in misrepresenting and maligning us. We are for peace and tranquillity all over our great government, but we don't want it of that hollow kind which is promoted by a truckling policy on the part of Southerners, and a seeming abandonment of our principles and convictions; nor do we propose to apologize for and compliment our quondam enemies for fraternal purposes, so called. The genuine, manly fraternity which we want is not "fostered" by any such deceitful and undignified methods as these, nor is it defeated by any purpose of ours to hold to our convictions and let the world know why we do so.

It is every comforting fact to me that the old Rebs, through their bivouacs and other organizations, have purposed that a history of the United States shall be written from a Southern standpoint, inasmuch as no Northern historian has yet proved competent to do us justice; that arrangements have been made for the selection and equipment of the historian, and that a large amount of war material is now in hand, and still being gathered up for the furtherance of the enterprise.

The contribution of material which I make is but little more than a narrative of the war in its various phases as seen by a private and lieutenant; and it is the outgrowth, in a large measure, of my connection with the Historical Committee of the John L. McEwen Bivouac, No. 4, Franklin, Tenn. The title of the work is, "Some Rebel Relics from the Seat of War." The announcement of its appearance will, I suppose, be made before long.

Thousands of people in the bounds of your patronizing Conferences have a vivid remembrance, no doubt, of our army movements in that section, and many can, perhaps, call to mind Loring's division, to which our brigade (Buford's) and regiment (35th Alabama) belonged. We received many kindnesses at the hands of the citizens and remember them with warm affection.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: You do not know how happy I was when I read Bros. Mellen's and Cammack's articles in the last week's ADVOCATE on Indian Mission. I just wanted to give vent to my feelings in a loud hellelujah. You do not know how much I would have enjoyed being at that first sacremental service. Oh! how my heart burns within me for the salvation of the Indians, and how eegerly I wait and watch the mails to bring me something to help advance this blessed cause. Surely if the men and women of wealth felt as I do about it, there would be no lack in the treasury to carry on the work. Surely they would open their hearts and pockets and supply every want, and these long-neglected people would have every facility and means of grace necessary for their speedy salvation. May God open the hearts of the rich and poor to this great work!

I have written twice to Dr. John, with regard to appropriating something to help buy some land to settle them on, but have not heard from him yet. And I am glad to see that Bro. Mellen and Bro. Cammack have written asking the people to help, for brethren and sisters, we ought not to allow the Parent Board to help in this work. We ought to do it as a means of grace for ourselves, for God will surely bless us if we will do our duty. Now, brethren, as we took their homes from them, would it not be nice and right for us to give them little homes where they may settle and have their churches and schools. Brethren, let us buy the land for them and let Bro. Cammack settle them off, so he can build churches and schools for them. Bro. Cammack offers $10 a year to help buy the land. Who will be the next? Send your names and amount to me at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss. Send draft, check or money order on Jackson or Vicksburg, or send in registered letter. Will not some one give $100 or $50, $25, $10, $5, or any amount. Brethren, sisters, send on at once, so we can buy the land.

And let us not forget the salary of Bros. Cammack and Simpson J. Tubby. One quarter is now about out, and we lack right smart of having enough to pay quarter. We ought to pay quarterly. Many have subscribed. Please send it on at once. I have received the following amounts since last report, to-wit: Friends at Heidelburg, $5; Mrs. L. A. Avera, $1; Prof. L. M. Coxe, $2.50; Rev. A. F. Watkins, $5; Dr. J. S. Austin, $1. Do not neglect to send amounts, as we need it now.

Your brother in Christ, and for the salvation of the Indians,

Ministerial Aid Association.

MR. EDITOR: By your permission I would again call attention to the existence, working and needs of our Ministerial Aid Association. At this writing we are giving assistance to four young men who are preparing for the ministry at Centenary and Mississippi Colleges. To meet our promises to these young brethren we need to have our treasury replenished right away. We appeal again to those who have given us their notes and are due payments on the same to make some contribution, be it ever so small, as to those who appreciate the work being done by us we again plead for some substantial recognition. We need the co-operation of our brethren, and in no way can they so aid us as by coming to our relief at the present moment. With those to whom has been committed the oversight and direction of the affairs of this association, it is purely a work of love, and one to which we cheerfully give our time and energies. We are more than satisfied to see it accomplishing the noble work. In nothing do we more rejoice more than in our ability to aid worthy young men in their preparation for the ministry. This is a charity for which we call, but a sacred duty to God and his church. The school of the prophets must continue as long as the church of God shall live.

Only two months remain until the commencement seasons, when we shall not only want to settle up all demands upon us, but will have to determine what aid can be afforded to those who may apply for the Fall session at our colleges. We are aware that the calls of the day are many. Regular collections, endowment funds, missionary debt, etc., all appeal to our hearts and pockets, but to none of these do we yield as a work more worthy of your godly consideration. Brethren, again I say, Help.

T. B. HOLLOMAN, Pres.

Wesson, Miss.

The following words of Phillips Brooks to a discouraged preacher we commend to any of our preachers in a similar state of mind:

There is only one source from which the enthusiasm of the gospel ministry can come, and that is a deep and ever deeper Christian life of our own. Live deeper. Let God do more for you. Be sure that you have not begun to reach the limits of what he can do. Give him a larger liberty to help you, and then the thought that any man should go unhelped by him will seem dreadful to you, and you must speak so that men will hear.

Of course, you do not expect from me nor from any man, rules or prescriptions. It is not something for you to do. It is something which you must be which will give you the power, or, what is the only truth, will let God's power freely play through you. I pray that God will help you, and I beg you to hope and to be full of obeerful courage.

If asked whet ie the remedy for the deepest sorrows of the human heart—what a men should chiefly look to in his progress through life as a power that is to sustain him under trials and enable him manfully to confront all afflictions—I must point him to something which, in a well-known hymn is called "the old, old story," told in an old, old book, and taught with an old, old teaching, which is the greatest and best gift ever given to mankind.—Hon Wm E. Gladstone.

INTRODUCTORY.

The last lesson brought us through Job's first bitter outbreak, and the beautiful, but mistaken reply of Eliphaz. To this Job answers, still pleading his innocence, and protesting against the unjust imputation of wrong. Then the other friends join in the discussion, each arguing that God is just, and, therefore, must punish the wicked and reward the righteous; that affliction is an evidence of sin, and urging Job to confess his sins and repent. Coupled with the exhortation is the promise that God will forgive and restore. To each in turn Job replies, warmly maintaining his own integrity, rebuking them for their harsh judgments, and piteously begging them to cease their vain arguments and let him alone. In the twenty-first chapter, in answer to Zophar, he shows the abundant and continued prosperity of the wicked, and charges them with uttering falsehoods. In the same strain of pitiless comfort and mistaken instruction Eliphaz, in the twenty-second chapter, argues that man's goodness does not profit God, accuses Job of great and varied wickedness, and urges repentance with promises of deliverance. The twenty-third chapter, the chapter of our lesson, gives Job's touching reply in his appeal to God for the vindication of his righteousness. Whatever of rashness or bitterness may have characterized Job's utterance, there is no desire to avoid the judgment of the Almighty. Rather to this does he appeal in confident expectation of his vindication, and his only regret is that he can not find him, that he might plead his cause before him.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—JOB'S APPEAL TO GOD.

Ver. 1. "Then Job answered and said." The persistency with which Job maintains his position, a persistency that seems to his friends the maddened obstinacy of a fool, is in fact but a manly and consistent maintenance of the truth. Job is the champion of God and of truth. He has fought the battle for every good man that has lived since his day, and the fruits of his victory the righteous in affliction will ever share. It is well for us that he did not give up the fight—that to the last the record stands: "Job answered and said."

Ver. 2. "Even to-day is my complaint bitter." It is not improbable that the discussion had continued several days. Job admits the truth of their charge that his complaints had been bitter, or, as the Revised Version has it, "rebellious," but declares that his affliction is heavier than his complaints, or that his suffering is so great that it more than justifies his bitter complainings.

Ver. 3. "Oh, that I knew where I might find him." They had urged him to yield to God. Job, in his confidence in the righteousness of his cause, declares that this is what he wishes to do. He would find God, he would present himself before his tribunal.

Ver. 4. "I would order my cause before him." He is so confident that he is innocent of the iniquity charged upon him that he would willingly state his cause before God's tribunal, and even in the presence of the Almighty present the arguments for his defense. This is a very strong expression of conscious integrity.

Ver. 5. "I would know the words he would answer me." The strong poetic imagination of the author represents Job as being, in his extreme suffering, so tormented by the persistent accusations of his friends, and at the same time so confident of his integrity, that in desperation he declared that he would analyze and review even the sentence of the Almighty if it should be adverse to him. This interpretation finds support in the fact that the next verse seems to imply that he might possibly have been understood to defy God, who he declares will not thus condemn him. The expression is doubtless rash and extravagant, and for it Job might well crave pardon. (See Job xi, 4; xiii, 6.) These words, however, are not intended as a defiance of the Almighty, but as a strong expression of conscious innocence. In harmony with this interpretation, Wordsworth says, in commenting on verse 7: "There is too much self-confidence in these words, as Job afterwards owns."

II.—JOB'S FAITH.

Ver. 6. "Will he plead against me with his great power?" His trust in God's mercy is as invincible as his faith in his wisdom. The Almighty will not crush him by His power, but in His mercy will give heed to his words, and will strengthen and encourage His afflicted servant. "Could he but find God," Job is confident that he would not overwhelm him with his awe, but, on the contrary, he would give heed to him." (Burr.)

Ver. 7. "There the righteous might dispute with him." The Revised Version renders this clause: "There the upright might reason with him." The thought is, that before God the pleading of the cause of the righteous will find favor, and, as a righteous man, Job believes he will be delivered from those who judge him. Burr says: "'So should I be forever acquitted by my Judge.' God's judgment would prove final; his words of absolution would be without appeal."

Ver. 8. "Behold I go forward, but he is not there, and backward, but I can not perceive him." The joyful thought of vindication before the judgment-seat of the Almighty suddenly gives place to the anxious thought implied in the second verse. "I can not find him." "These two verses (the eight and ninth) paint in vivid colors the distress and anxiety of a soul in search of the favor of God. No means are left untried, no place unexplored in order to find the object of his research." (Clarke.)

Ver. 9. "On the left hand....on the right hand." The Orientals in determining the "cardinal points," stood with their faces toward the sunrise; so in this verse and the preceding one we have mentioned the east, west, north and south, and strong expression is given to the thought that in every direction the search for God has been in vain. "The efforts of the soul to find him when it seeks were never described so affectingly; such sorrow can he felt only by a spiritual mind. It should be observed that Job's conviction of the absolute presence of God [as indicated in the following verse.—W.] comes out most strongly when he feels that he can not discern him." (The Bible Commentary.)

Ver. 10. "But he knoweth the way that I take; when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." He confesses his inability to find God—he can not see the Invisible One; but he does not doubt his presence. He can not know the Almighty, but is sure that his way (the way that is in him) is known to him. The word "but" indicates the antithesis between the finite knowledge of the creature and the infinite wisdom of the Creator. Job shows that his knowledge of the problem of human suffering is clearer than the theories of his friends when he says, "When he hath tried me." It shows that he had grasped the truth, even though but feebly, that affliction may be disciplinary as well as penal. "I shall come forth from his hands as gold comes forth from the furnace." This is a bold figure, and betrays again the self-confidence which possesses him now, but which disappears when the Almighty reveals himself.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. To find God is at once the instinctive cry and the complete satisfaction of the afflicted soul. (Verse 3.)

2. The cause of the righteous is always safe before God's tribunal. (Verse 4.)

3. The judgments of God will bear the strictest scrutiny of men, and his wisdom and mercy be vindicated even in the condemnation of the wicked. (Verse 5.)

4. God is as gracious as he is powerful, and the humble suppliant before him will find grace to strengthen, and not power to crush. (Verse 6.)

5. If God acquits, it is of little importance what man's judgment may be. Paul says (I Cor. iv, 3, 4): "With me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment....He that judgeth me is the Lord." (Verse 7.)

6. We can not see God with our natural eyes, but we know that he is present with us, for there are evidences of his presence all around us. (Verses 8 and 9.)

7. It is a blessed thought that though we can not see him, his eye is upon us; though we can not know him, as we know each other, our ways are known to him. (Verse 10.)

8. To know "my ways" is to know my habits of thought, word and action. As God looks upon your "ways" is he pleased? (Verse 10.)

9. Affliction to the righteous is a test, not a punishment, and its purpose is the refining of the gold.

Among the April Magazines.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE has two serial stories of interest and four complete stories. Among the miscellaneous papers are: Through London on a Barge; Animal Humor; Foot Ball, Past and Present, and some Chit Chat on Dress. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

WIDE AWAKE has a large and full table of contents of sufficient variety to tempt every taste, and in sufficient richness to gratify the deepest mental hunger. For clearness of type, beauty of illustration, appropriateness of articles to young minds, we can commend heartily this young people's monthly. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, $2.40.

GODEY'S contains a complete novel by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, entitled Light Out of Darkness; The Truth about England, by S. P. Cadman; The Earliest Stage Costumer, by L. L. Lawrence; Music in America, by Herbert W. Green; several other papers and water color portraits of Mrs. Chester W. Chapin and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck. Godey Publishing Company, New York. THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST has very many good things for farmers, gardeners, stock-raisers and householders. There is an excellent portrait of the new Secretary of Agriculture. Orange Judd Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

CHRISTIAN THOUGHT has a fine table this month. Drs. Warfield, Payne, Cramer, Ray and McKinney contribute characteristic papers. The other contributors are Revs. Potter, Mutch, Brown, Herron and Pike. All these make a number well worthy of study. W. B. Ketcham, New York. Price, $2.

THE GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS sustains its record as a first-class missionary monthly. Our brethren of the M. E. Church are deserving of all praise for their mission work, and not the least of that work is the information given forth by this monthly, and the influence which it is exercising in arousing and sustaining the missionary spirit in the church. Hunt & Eaton, New York. Price, $1.

ST. NICHOLAS opens with an illustrated paper on New York, by Edmund Clarence Stedman, which our young people will find exceedingly instructive. It will give them a clearer view of the great city than they can get anywhere else. This is followed by a variety of articles by popular writers, and all go to make up one of the best numbers of St. Nicholas that has yet been issued. The Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY gives its readers a full course, consisting, in part, as follows: Science and the Colleges, by President David Starr Jordan; The Festal Development of Art, by Prof. David J. Hill; Education of Our Colored Citizens, by Maud Wilder Goodwin; The Inadequacy of Natural Selection, by Herbert Spencer; Sketch of Ernest Renan, by Gabriel Monod, and the Editor's Table. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price, $5.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL continues its excellent service in behalf of women and the home. There is a brightness and sparkle about this monthly which attracts and holds attention. The various departments are well managed and full of good things. There are more sensible things said in a sensible way about every-day matters on the editorial page than by any other monthly that we see. Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. Price, $1.

SCRIBNER'S, for this month, is an exceptionally good number. An Artist in Japan, by Robert Blum, adds another interesting chapter to our knowledge of the wonderful people of the Sunrise Kingdom. Unpublished Letters of Carlyle will be of interest to those who are fond of reading after that great thinker. A New England Farm, by Frank French, and other papers make up a number which will please hundreds of readers. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $3.

THE CHAUTAUQUAN begins the seventeenth volume, and is full of choice reading on a great variety of topics. There are: Recollections of President Hayes, Reminiscences of J. G. Blaine, The Odyssey in Art, Greek in the English of Modern Science, The Hawaiian Islands, Common Schools in the Southern States, American and Grecian Jurisprudence Compared, Newspaper Work Taught in College, Hygiene in Relation to Beauty, and much else besides. T. L. Flood, Meadville, Pa. Price, $2.

The notable paper in THE CENTURY is The Chicago Anarchists of 1886, by Joseph E. Gary, the judge who presided at the trial. It goes into details of that celebrated trial, and will doubtless stand as an authoritative record. It is illustrated with portraits of the judge, prosecuting attorney, the jury and inspectors of police. Another extremely interesting paper is A Tree Museum, by Miss M. C. Robbins. Mrs. Burton Harrison's Sweet Bells Out of Tune grows in interest in this number. Other fine articles will be found and appreciated. This monthly grows in favor with the public with each successive issue. Century Company, New York. Price, $4.

Colorless, Emaciated, Helpless

A Complete Cure by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of gravel, and have since been troubled with my

Liver and Kidneys

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I was so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. I was badly emaciated and had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, suffered less, the inflammation of the bladder had subsided, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel hungry. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without hurting me. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I feel well and am well. All who knew me marvel to see me so well." D. M. JORDAN.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner Pills, assist digestion, cure headache.

Easy to Take

And prompt to cure, Ayer's Pills act on the intestines, not by stimulating, but by strengthening them. They promote the natural peristaltic motion of the bowels, without which there can be no regular, healthy operations. For the cure of constipation, biliousness, jaundice, vertigo, sick headache, indigestion, sour stomach, and drowsiness, are unsurpassed. They are equally beneficial in rheumatism, neuralgia, colds, chills, and fevers. Being purely vegetable, delicately sugar-coated, and quickly dissolved, they are admirably adapted for household use, as well as for travelers by land or sea. Ayer's Pills are in greater demand, the world over, than any other pill, and are recommended by the most eminent physicians.

Ayer's Pills

THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.
W. P. HARRISON, D. D., LL.D., Editor.

Published quarterly. Each number has 216 beautifully printed pages on the best book paper, making a volume of more than 800 pages for the year. Our QUARTERLY is not commended by the ablest of our clergy and laity only, but it is mentioned with the highest respect by the editors of the best periodical literature throughout our country and abroad. It is a needed medium for the discussion of subjects too large for adequate treatment in the columns of our weekly papers. It should be unanimously supported by our preachers, and widely distributed among the thoughtful of our laity. The subscription price of the QUARTERLY is $2. Your subscription is solicited.

Cease from this antedating of your experience. Sufficient to-day are the duties of to-day. Don't waste life in doubts and fears: spend yourself on the work before you, well assured that the right performance of this hour's duties will be the best preparation for the hours or ages that follow it . . . 'Tis the measure of a man—his apprehension of a day.—R. W. Emerson.

We hope that our preachers and Sunday-school superintendents will not delay preparations to celebrate Children's Day. Begin in time; make wise preparations and celebrate the day in such a manner as to make it a time of joy to the children. The Discipline says "the third Sunday in May or as near thereto as practicable" shall be "Children's Day."

We learn from private sources that Millsaps College is within $2,750 of completing its endowment. If the Mississippi brethren would only exercise themselves a very little, Agent Chambers would be able to report in thirty days that the endowment fund of $100,000 was complete. What an opportunity this for rich and poor! "The Lord hath need."

The following dispatch from Rome will set some people to thinking:

Pope Leo has just completed an examination of the question of the study of the Scriptures, his holiness having devoted inquiry especially to the diverse opinions of savants on great biblical questions. His holiness will proceed to indite a letter to bishops, requesting them to enjoin upon their flocks a most profound study of the Scriptures and a larger place in the schools for the study and critical explanation of hermeneutics. The Pope urges the necessity of keeping in the track of modern progress and discovery in order to adapt Catholicism to the needs of the day.

The General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church show the number of effective ministers to be 11,158, an increase of 283; supernumerary, 1,123, an increase of 35; superannuated, 1,863, an increase of 48; making the total number of ministers, 14,144, an increase of 345. There are besides these 14,567 local preachers, an increase of 376. The membership of the church numbers 2,442,627, an increase of 62,940. There are 23,896 churches, an increase of 501; valued at $102,144,825, an increase of $4,010,712; and 9,061 parsonages, an increase of 309. For building and improving church property, $5,125,452 were expended, and $1,658,088 were paid on church debts. The present indebtedness of churches is $9,130,552. For the support of pastors, presiding elders and Bishops $10,063,795 were contributed, and $251,003 for Conference claimants. There are 28,039 Sunday-schools with 310,379 officers and teachers, and 2,368,949 scholars, an increase of 53,275.

Success in Preaching.

Every true preacher of the gospel desires to preach with success. That is, he desires so to preach that his preaching shall accomplish the purpose for which it is intended. The end of preaching is the salvation of souls from sin, and the development and growth of the Christian life in believers. The preaching which attains to neither of these is preaching "falsely so called." Of all the vain and empty things, preaching that fails of its purpose is the most conspicuous in vanity and emptiness. Of all the failures that are made, a failure in preaching is the most disastrous.

We do not presume to lay down a rule by following which any and every preacher will achieve success in his vocation, but we may be able to point to a successful preacher and call attention to something which he regarded as contributing to his success. A careful reading of the Acts of the Apostles leaves the impression that St. Paul was a successful preacher of the gospel. The record shows upon its face that wherever he preached, whether at home among his own people or abroad among the Gentiles, success attended his preaching. His success, so far from inflating him with pride, was a matter of devout and humble gratitude and deep self-abasement. He says: "Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place." And, remembering that the very possibility of success laid upon him an additional burden of responsibility, he cries out in inexpressible agony of soul, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

Of course, the subject-matter of preaching is of prime importance. Paul is careful to put himself on record in regard to this. He says on this point: "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord." His long life, full of preaching, is in proof of how entirely self was eclipsed by the greater glories of his Lord. Long meditation on the splendid character and person of Christ, as revealed to him at his call to preach, crushed out of his heart all desire for self-exaltation, and filled him with restless anxiety to proclaim that person and character in every place and at every opportunity and to every individual. Christ in his humiliation, Christ in his risen glory, filled his great mind so full, there was no room in his thought for any other being. With utmost sincerity, with stern simplicity, with an utter abandonment of every other subject, his heroic spirit said, "We preach Christ Jesus the Lord."

Paul not only had the right subject-matter, but he held himself continually in closest sympathy with that subject-matter. Here he gives us the key to the effectiveness of his preaching: "We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed and therefore have I spoken; we also believe and therefore speak." "The spirit of faith" appropriated the subject-matter of his preaching and made it a part of the life of his soul. As iron passes into the blood and gives vitality to the physical nature, so the subject-matter of preaching passed into his spiritual nature and energized all his speech. He took possession of the truth by means of his personal experience. His capital, as a preacher, was in the astounding fact, that by means of "the spirit of faith," the whole of theology had passed into his heart, and when he preached the Holy Spirit fused his intellectual force and his faith and his feeling into a stream of fire, which flashed light into dark minds and burnt its way into cold consciences. In Paul's case the energy of speech depended upon the energy of faith. He not only preached because he believed, but he preached as he believed. "The spirit of faith" brought the power of Christ as a most vivid reality into his consciousness and lifted his soul up to that higher region, where the horizon of the sphere of gospel activity was lifted away and little, insignificant Paul was lost amid the infinite reaches disclosed, and the whole human race came prominently into view as the object of gospel effort. There is where his intense love for souls was born. He rejoiced in the fact, "He loved me and gave himself for me;" but it was the sublime faith which saw in Jesus "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," which produced a love that expended itself in magnificent efforts for the salvation of men. He believed, and spoke. He believed with power, he spoke with power. His preaching was a success because his faith was a success. So it must be with every successful preacher. The energy of speech is proportional to the energy of faith. The range of speech is commensurate with the sweep of faith. When the truth takes possession of the mind fully, and the heart believes it unwaveringly, the preaching will be a signal success.

Rev. R. Abbey.

I have just finished the delightfully interesting article in the last Quarterly Review from the facile pen of Bishop Galloway on "Rev. R. Abbey—Author, Philosopher and Theologian." How we enjoyed this recital of the memories of our boyhood friend! A fine subject, a skilled pen, an excellent contribution. Therein are lessons for all from the adventurous, homeless boy to the wisest seeker after truth. Though he lived to the ripe old age of nearly fourscore and ten, yet when we consider the obstacles in the beginning, and then sum up the knowledge acquired and work performed, we are amazed at their magnitude. He was never unemployed. If his brain ever received any rest, it was during his sleeping hours. Some great question was always before him, no matter where he was or how employed. How many times have we heard him, while looking after his domestic or farming affairs, ask of some passer-by (perhaps only a child) some question which indicated the secret and deep thoughts of his mind. To me these questions were often, at the time, strange and irrelevant, but some communication to the press would in due time reveal the fact that he was working out some great problem.

In all these things he was deliberate, never acting until sure he was right. Many a time have I heard him respond to a question or assertion, "Well, you say so," and then hours after bring up the subject and give you his matured views.

He was an exceedingly temperate man, always selecting his food with reference to health, and, as was a frequent saying with him, getting his eight hours of sleep in the twenty-four. He did not believe in reversing the order of nature. His habits of industry and temperance doubtless added many years to life and kept his fine constitution always fully strong. His belief was that genius consisted largely in perseverance, and he was careful to do nothing that would unfit himself for work.

Much of this charming communication I have heard from his own lips—indeed, nearly all. The autobiography of Robert Beboys, or the "boy with a will," I had heard from himself. The Bishop has rewritten it well.

Those who knew him slightly were wont to accuse him of egotism; but those who knew him best found him of very different spirit—meek and humble. He rejoiced in the truth and loved to plead its cause, and his great earnestness in its defense led him to so appear before those who did not understand him. If he knew a thing, he was not afraid to proclaim it. If he was wanting in knowledge on any point, he was an eager and modest listener. How I love to think of his great character, and how vividly this sketch carries me backward more than a score of years!

I have learned much from his pen, much from his association, and still learn much from his life. I wish that every young man in the land could read this true sketch of a life so full of usefulness and merit.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Wesson, Miss.

Our Quarterly.

The April number of our Quarterly Review has come to our desk with its usual full table of contents. Two Bishops contribute to this number. Bishop Haygood contributes "High Steeple and Its Official Staff," and Bishop Galloway writes an admirable paper on "Rev. R. Abbey—Author, Philosopher, Theologian." G. G. Smith gives an interesting article on "The Colonial Church in Virginia," and J. Thomas Pate contributes "Writings and Writers of South Carolina." Dr. Milburn writes on "George Ticknor, and a Glimpse of Boston Society in 1854," and there is a paper on "Robert G. Ingersoll," by James F. Mister. The editor's table contains: "Freedom of Religious Thought," "The Imprecatory Psalms," "The True Theory of Inspiration," "Mr. Wesley and Sophia Causton," and "Binding and Loosing."

As far as we are able to judge, this number bears favorable comparison with preceding numbers. While this Review is a good periodical, we do not believe, with some, that it is "the best in the world." The publishers complain that it has not sufficient patronage to enable it to pay expenses. That shows that it is not popular. We do not have much sympathy with that sentiment which requires every venture in church enterprise to pay for itself in dollars and cents. A periodical of high grade—such as every church ought to have—ought not to be expected to pay expenses, for the reason that only those who can appreciate it will support it, and they are always few in number.

If we want a Review which will support itself, then the necessity is upon us to adjust it to the popular taste. To do this we must necessarily lower the grade. If we do that, then the impression goes abroad that the Southern Methodist Church has not the talent and scholarship to produce a Review of high character. We don't want it lowered in grade at all. On the contrary, let it be lifted up, higher and still higher, and let the House pay for the elevation.

Rev. B. Carradine, D. D.

Dr. Carradine spent last week in our city. He seems to be in good health, having become somewhat stouter than when he left us several years ago. He held meetings in Felicity Church. His voice is heavier than formerly, and a little husky. His manner in the pulpit has undergone a complete change. He has apparently adopted the regulation evangelistic style of conducting meetings; methods, manners, antics and all. We easily detected a lack of that refinement in language which at one time was such a prominent characteristic of his preaching. He still presses his views on sanctification in such a way as to leave the impression that his experience must be the test of everybody's experience.

The meetings were largely attended, and Dr. Beard informs us there have been about twenty-five conversions and fifty professions of the "second-blessing sanctification."

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Within a month past the writer has attended three preachers' meetings or institutes, viz.—at Starkville, Carrollton and Courtland. They were profitable occasions. The brethren took sweet counsel together in the discussion of timely topics and the interchange of thoughts on the various features of ministerial and church work. These meetings should be held once or twice a year in every presiding elder's district. The lay people are benefited by them as well as the preachers. With the opening of Spring reviving interest in church work is manifest. This is notably the case in the Sunday-school cause, as the rapid flow of orders for literature indicates.

Children's Day must not be neglected. Let pastors and superintendents take counsel together and make timely arrangements for its due observance. Send us your orders for programs at once and get them free of cost. Read paragraph 245, page 142, Discipline, edition 1890, and govern yourselves accordingly.

Bro. McIntosh is assisting Bro. Malone in a meeting at Grenada. The revival fire is burning, and the present outlook is propitious for a great work of divine grace.

Bro. J. W. Chambers is itinerating among us in the interest of Millsaps College. He is received everywhere with a cordial welcome, and leaves with a hearty "Come again" following him.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference.

Columbus District Conference will convene at Mayhew, Miss., April 27, at nine o'clock A. M., and continue through Sunday following.

Thursday, twenty-seventh, will be "Sunday-school Day," on which the District Conference will resolve itself into a Sunday-school Convention for consideration of the following topics:

1. "Statistics and Influence of the Sunday-school throughout the Christian World"—Dabney Lipscomb.
2. "The International Sunday-school Lesson System: How Prepared, and its Advantages"—W. V. Connell.
3. Does the Sunday-school as Conducted Lose Our Children to the Church?"—W. L. Lipscomb.
4. "Prime Object of the Sunday-school"—S. B. White.
5. "Qualifications Needful for the Superintendent"—H. W. Foote.
6. "Qualifications Needful for the Teacher"—G. W. Vaughn.

Thursday, 7.30 P. M., Conference Sermon by I. R. Allen.

Besides the regular work of the District Conference the following subjects will be considered:

1. "John Wesley and His Work"—W. S. Harrison.
2. "Polity of the M. E. Church, South"—Amos Kendall.
3. "Woman's Work: Importance to the Church and to the World"—J. W. Dorman.
4. "Best Method upon Which to Operate the Finances of the Church"—W. H. Scales.

Brethren, whose names appear in connection with special topics, will please prepare written essays or lectures upon these topics, respectively. All members of the District Conference are earnestly requested to consider the subjects proposed, and to take part in the general discussion of the same.

Preachers in charge are kindly requested to present written reports of their respective charges on the lines suggested by the Discipline.

T. C. WIER, P. E.

The Winona District Theological and Pastoral Society

Was organized at Carrollton, Miss., March 31, 1893. Rev. S. M. Thames, president, Winona, Miss.; Rev. J. Richey, vice-president, Winona, Miss.; Rev. C. B. Ames, treasurer, Duhlin, Miss.; Rev. O. L. Savage, secretary. All the preachers of the district were present except two—Revs. R. A. Meek and T. Cameron. We had the following visitors: Rev. J. W. Chambers, of Mississippi Conference, agent for Millsaps College; Rev. G. W. Baobman, colporter of North Mississippi Conference; Revs. Merrill and Nelson, of the Baptist Church.

The meeting was a blessing to all. The people of Carrollton kept their reputation up to the top for hospitality and kindness. The spirit of the preachers was very fine.

O. L. SAVAGE, Sec.

Indianola, Miss.

The Rev. Dr. ——— called in a stranger to occupy his pulpit during his absence the other Sunday. Returning on Monday, he chanced to meet good Mrs. Dobbs, and asked her how did she like the sermon yesterday. "Well, sir, to tell the truth," said Mrs. Dubbs, "it was too plain and simple to suit me. I like best them sermons as jumbles up the judgment and confounds the senses. Oh, doctor, there's no one comes up to you for them."—Epworth Herald.

NOTES.

In the Salvation Army are 1,200 [illegible] members who will not touch, taste nor handle intoxicating beverages.

Who doeth good by loving deed or word,
Who lifted up a fallen one or dried a tear,
Who helps another bear his heavy cross,
Or on the parched and fevered lips doth pour
A blessed draught of water sweet and cool,
Becomes co-workers with the Lord of all;
Secures a rightful share in his success
And in the happiness that springs therefrom.

Many pastors complain of a scarcity of good Sunday-school teachers. How would it do for pastors in charge of stations to form a Bible class with the view of training the members of the class for teachers? Why should not the pastor train some of his people to teach religion, as well as train them to live religion?

The Bacon-Shakespeare controversy has taken a new turn. Arthur Dudley Vinton, in Worthington's Magazine, for April, has an ingenious and well-written article in which he attempts to show that Shakespeare was the real author of writings which have generally been attributed to Bacon. His reasons for this view seem to be as good as any we have seen which try to prove that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays. It is a curious controversy whichever side you take, and, perhaps as fruitless as it is curious.

We need more personal, independent, persistent, devout study of the Bible itself; not of books about the Bible; not of "subjects" picked up here and there from the Bible, but of the Bible, book by book, comparing Scripture with Scripture, and all for the sake of personal growth and sanctification, and for the edification of the church of God. "I commend you," said Paul to the elders of the Ephesian Church, "to God, and to the Word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified."—Bishop Vincent.

We have it on the authority of a gentleman who recently visited Epworth, England, the home of the Wesleys, that there is still living and growing there a rose-bush planted by Susanna Wesley. It is now over a hundred and seventy-five years old and covers one side and portions of the ends of the house in which the Wesleys once lived. It is a species of climbing rose. The individual who related the incident called attention to the symbolic resemblance of the long-lived and spreading rose-bush to the wonderful growth and extent of the religious revival which was started through the instrumentality of Susanna Wesley's sons.—Methodist Recorder.

The removal of Bishop Haygood leaves the coast and, indeed, the whole West without a resident Bishop. The afflictions in the family of Bishop Haygood which caused his removal are doubly sad, for he has peculiar fitness for the work in the West. One of our Bishops must come to dwell with us. Bishop Fitzgerald, as knowing the West, and being personally intimate with the men engaged in the work here, is better prepared than any Bishop in the church to direct the interests of Southern Methodism on the Pacific Coast. We grieved when he went away, and have not yet consented to his removal. If he should see the way to return, California bids for him a thousand welcomes.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

An enthusiasm for religion is what just now most needed on the earth. Other sorts of enthusiasm we have in considerable abundance. But an unappeasable thirst for the improvement of personal character and for doing good is rare; and it is far from popular, which is, doubtless, one reason for its rarity. A man who exhibits much of it may confidently count on being set down for a fool. Whereas, rightly regarded, all who lack it are fools, or, at least, to put it more mildly, are deficient in the highest wisdom. Some allowance may be made for those who, owing to incurable defects of body or mind, have but a languid interest in anything. But if there be vitality on any point, it ought certainly to be seen in the affairs of the soul.—Zion's Herald.

In the reading of the Scriptures and the hymns, the ability to appreciate the emotions and to reproduce the feeling of the writer is an element of great power. Our hymnology sweeps over the entire compass of religious experience. The emotions of the penitent sinner, the sorrowing mourner, the despondent backslider, the rapturous saint, and the dying believer, are all voiced in Christian song. Then how important that in the reading of these hymns these varied emotions should receive proper expression? If the Christian minister is to weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that rejoice, he must be able to enter into their feelings, must sometimes adopt the saying, "Put yourself in his place," and he can not do this if he be wanting in the imaginative faculty.—Rev. J. S. Gilbert.

"They quit living religion and became all absorbed in enjoying religiousness." That is what the Wesleyan Christian Advocate said of the Christians of a certain city. Just ponder that sentence a little, and you will see a perfect description of many upon whom you can put your hand. "Enjoying religiousness" is all in all with too many professors. Leaving the Lord's work neglected amounts to nothing if they may be "enjoying religiousness." "Living religion" day by day, doing its duties, helping the needy, encouraging the discouraged, strengthening the weak, being eyes to the blind and feet to the lame, following the Master by "going about doing good"—these are the things that will count in the last court. (See Matt. vii, 16-23.)

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

It grieves us to know that Rev. H. E. Partridge, presiding elder of the Seashore district, recently lost his library by fire. His library and some other effects were stored in some town in Florida awaiting shipment, and the building was burned. Such a loss is a hard thing on a preacher.

Dr. John J. Lafferty has purchased the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist. It will be printed hereafter at Crozet, Va., and published from Baltimore. Samuel Rodgers will be the new editor, with absolute control of the editorial columns. He is one of the ablest men, in intelligence and in character, within the bounds of the church. We congratulate all concerned on the new arrangement—Nashville Advocate.

The trustees of Meadville Methodist Church have purchased from R. J. Williams the Whitley residence in the Southern part of town. It will be occupied by the pastor of Meadville circuit. The old parsonage has been sold to R. S. Butler.—Franklin Advocate.

We regret to learn that Frank L. Wier, son of Dr. T. C. Wier, of the North Mississippi Conference, met with an accident by which he lost both legs below the knees. He was run over by a locomotive. His father writes: "Now, the twelfth day since his injury, through the blessing of God, he gives good promise of recovery."

It is said that J. Sterling Morton, the new Secretary of Agriculture, had inscribed upon his deceased wife's tombstone, "Caroline French, wife of J. Sterling Morton, and mother of Joy, Paul and Mark Morton." He then took the lads to the cemetery, showed them the inscription, and said: "If one of you ever does anything of which your mother would be ashamed if she were alive, I will chisel your name from her tombstone." We are glad to learn that all three names are still there.—Epworth Herald.

The Sixth Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Mississippi, upon the invitation of the University Association, will meet in their hall Thursday evening, April 27, next, at 3 o'clock P. M., and continue in session from day to day till Sunday evening, the thirtieth. A committee has been appointed to make all necessary arrangements, and it says: "We shall secure accommodations for all delegates, and all friends of the Associations who desire to attend."

On the Wing.

Grenada! You who haven't been to Grenada can hardly appreciate the beauty of its location. The wide sweep of its landscape from its encircling hills is entrancing. The church property, for location, for real value, for convenience, for room and for beauty can not be excelled. Grenada Collegiate Institute is charming in its outward symmetry and in its inward conveniences. We had the pleasure of speaking to its pupils, and they had the pleasure of contributing $25 to the Endowment Fund.

God bless our schools! Bro. T. B Malone has the church well in hand. The Sunday-school has separate class rooms. This seemed to me to be a wise provision. We had three services and seven accessions to the church.

We touched at Winona, Durant and Greenwood. Everywhere I met with kindness; everywhere I received substantial aid. I find the people of North Mississippi talking about the college and planning for its future success as much as those of our own Conference.

The Winona District Preachers' Meeting at Carrollton was a great occasion. Many wise things were said and done. Bro. Savage, the secretary, will doubtless give you full information.

The preachers and the people all treated the agent with kindness and gave substantial aid.

Now, brethren, it is in order for every friend of the college to send forward a kindly remembrance. If you can not do any more, pay the interest on your notes.

JOHN. W. CHAMBERS, Agt.

Notice.

The District Conference for Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, will convene at Mayhew station, M. and O. railroad, April 27-30. A full attendance of preachers and laymen throughout the district is earnestly desired. The accommodations for all who may attend will be ample. A special invitation is extended to ministers without the district. Preachers in charge of stations and circuits will please send the names of lay delegates and ex-officio members of the Conference who will attend, to W. V. Connell or S. M. Rainey.

A Question.

MR. EDITOR: In our lesson in Sunday-school yesterday, which was Prov. xxiii, 15-23, this question was presented: "What class of people have the largest collection of proverbs?" Some said Jews, some Arabians, etc. Will you please be so kind as to enlighten us? None of my helps at hand throw any light upon the subject. Success to the ADVOCATE. A. M. MAYO.

Lake Charles, La., March 27.

[We trust some of our many readers will answer this question. We confess our ignorance.—EDITOR.]

Notice.

I would advise churches and the public generally not to pay money to Simpson Tubby (Indian) or to any other Indian soliciting aid to build Methodist Churches. If you have anything to give to the cause, send it to Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., and it will then take its proper course, and be properly applied.

WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL.

BRANDON DISTRICT.

Brandon district, Hickory Church, J. M. Morse, P. C., should have been credited with $5 instead of $2, as my pen or the printer's type made it appear last week.

A young pastor in charge refuses to observe a Week of Prayer and Self-denial before all the assessments are met in full; as if such a season properly observed will not facilitate the other collections—pastor's salary included.

And some preachers will not press the Conference collections lest it interfere with their own salaries. They usually come out behind, and then complain of hard appointments.

Dr. Lambuth writes me April 3: "We have $60,000 on debt, and collections under assessments are fully up to those of last year. Thank God!"

Now, brethren, put forth an earnest, honest effort and raise our portion of the debt, and bring up your assessments in full. T. L. MELLEN,

[We do not understand Bro. Mellen's addition. The manuscript is very plain, and we give it just as the manuscript gives it.—EDITOR.]

Up to March 31 the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial had not been observed at all in nine circuits, and only partially in five other circuits, in the Meridian district, while in the Brookhaven district it had been ignored in three stations and nine circuits. In the Jackson district one station and nine circuits were in default, and in the Brandon district fifteen circuits and preachers had failed to pray and practice self-denial, and in the Seashore district two stations and thirteen circuits were resting satisfied with what had been contributed last year, and in the Woodville district thirteen circuits had been neglectful, and in the Vicksburg district two stations and twelve circuits were drifting—only drifting—and one station had denied itself to the extent of two whole dollars! and evidently had not prayed much over the matter. So that in the Mississippi Conference, up to March 31, eight stations and eighty circuits and eighty-eight preachers and four presiding elders and three district solicitors were in default! Is it any wonder that the Board of Missions gets into debt, or, being in debt, finds it so hard to pay out? We need $1,800 to pay the balance due by our Conference.

Remember, brethren, the bitter curse was upon Meroz "because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." (Judges v, 23.) T. L. MELLEN, Conference Claimants.

Brethren, we have waited patiently for you to send us the money that we might pay our claimants on April 1. Not the Executive Committee, not the Joint Board of Finance, but the whole Conference voted that this Board should disburse $1,200 on the first day of April. To do this you have forwarded only $327. Do you want us to say to these claimants for you: Our own bread and meat is our first concern; afterward, if any fragments are left, we will send you the crumbs?

Brethren, send forward the money for our veterans at once that they may be fed and clothed.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Important Notice.

The time of holding the Meridian District Conference has been fixed and will be soon announced. Will all pastors in the district please furnish me a list and postoffice of all delegates and members of the Conference who will be present. Not elected simply. This is necessary, as we wish to communicate with each member separately.

Please comply with this request, brethren, and save us annoyance and confusion. B. F. LEWIS.

1306 Seventeenth Ave., Meridian, Miss.

Take Notice.

The District Conference for Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, will commence Tuesday, May 23, instead of the twenty-fifth. This change is made that we may have Bishop Galloway with us. The preachers will please notify the pastor at Monroe of the number and names of delegates that will attend. Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker will preach the opening sermon at 11 o'clock the first day. Preachers and recording stewards will be sure to have their Quarterly Conference records on hand.

H. O. WHITE, P. E.

Seashore District Conference.

The Seashore District Conference will convene at Pearlington, Miss., Tuesday night, May 16. I will be obliged to all pastors in charge of works to furnish me a list of names of all delegates and local preachers just as early as possible. I want special prayer made that the District Conference will prove a spiritual blessing to this place. Brethren, bring your revival sermons with you.

ROBT. B. DOWNER.

Pearlington, Miss., April 3, 1893.

Augusta, Miss.

Our first Quarterly Conference just over. Bro. Partridge, our new presiding elder, came, Friday, full of the Holy Ghost; preached four heart-searching sermons. The blessed Spirit fell upon both preacher and people. There was rejoicing, uplifting of hearts, reconsecrations, search for heart purity, that still continues. The meeting was a blessing to my people. We are pushing for perfect love and burning the bridges behind us. "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift!" the sub-Bishop left us higher than he found us; livelier, stronger, better, and left higher himself, doubtless.

We have bought a parsonage at this point (Augusta). Four or five acres land in cultivation, good houses, garden, orchard, etc. Lumber has been given us to build two new rooms. The ladies have furnished the house and will complete this part of the work by Fall. We have adopted card system of making collections; it works. Progress is our watchword; upward and onward. Full collections. Material improvement. Spiritual advancement. The glory of God in the salvation of souls. Tell Bros. Lewis, Chambers and West, Augusta charge is no longer to be an experimental charge used for breaking in first yearlings. We go above that. Brethren, look otherwhere for the boys. A. C. BURT.

To Whom It May Concern

Macon, Ga., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

W. C. BLACK,
Pastor Mulberry St. Methodist Church.

"The Peter Henderson & Co.'s Manual of Everything for the Garden" (Columbian Edition) surpasses all previous publications of its class and contains a greater number of new, interesting, and valuable features than anything we have seen. It is not sent out free. Having cost a large amount of money, it is sold for twenty-five cents; but this sum is deducted from any order that is made with the company for seeds or flowers. To amateur gardeners the "Manual" is almost a necessity. Florists, also, will find it of the greatest service. It treats of the whole process of preparing the soil, planting and cultivating vegetables, flowers, and shrubs. Peter Henderson & Co. wish their friends and patrons not to lose sight of the fact that everything offered is lower than at any time since their business was established; and that they make specialties of Roses, Chrysanthemums, and Small Fruits. From personal experience we are prepared not only to testify to the value of the "Manual," but also to bear witness to the trustworthiness of the firm (Peter Henderson & Co., 35 and 37 Cortlandt Street, New York) which publishes it.

All persons desiring to purchase choice Pianos, Organs, Musical Instruments or Music, should not fail to visit the large establishment of L. Grunewald Co., Limited, at No. 127 Canal street, New Orleans.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

HOME CIRCLE.

WHAT GOD REQUIRES.

What asks our Father of his children, save
Justice and mercy and humility?
A reasonable service of good deeds,
Pure living, tenderness to human needs,
Reverence and trust and prayer for light to see
The Master's footsteps in our daily ways?
No knotted scourge or sacrificial knife,
But the calm beauty of an ordered life,
Whose very breathing is unworded praise—
A life that stands as all true lives have stood.
Fast rooted in the faith that God is good.
—Whittier.

Mothers, Speak Low.

I know some houses, when built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, angry tones respond through them from morning till night; and the influence is as contagious as measles, and much more to be dreaded in a household. The children catch it, and it lasts for life, an incurable disease. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house when doors and windows are open, and even poll parrot has caught the tone, and delights in screaming and scolding, until she has been sent into the country to improve her habits. Children catch cross tones quicker than parrots. Where mother sets the example, you will scarcely hear a pleasant word amongst the children in their plays with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is always weak and irregular. The children expect just so much scolding before they do anything they are bid, while in many a home, where the low, firm tone of the mother, or a decided look of the eye, is law, the children never think of disobedience, either in or out of her sight.

O mothers! it is worth a great deal to cultivate that "excellent thing in a women"—a low, sweet voice. If you are ever so much tired by the mischievous or wilfull pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you to even try to be patient and cheerful, if you can not wholly succeed. Anger makes you wretched, and your children also. Impatient, angry tones never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. You can not have the excuse for them that they lighten your burdens any; they make them only ten times heavier. For your own, as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember that tone when your head is under the willows. So, too, would they remember a harsh and angry voice. Which legacy will you leave to your children?—Christian Observer.

The Gentlewoman.

A gentlewoman never fails in the small, sweet courtesies. Instinctively she respects the feelings of others, and having the golden rule by heart, it is from her heart that all lovely, love-compelling graces flow. "In her tongue is the law of kindness," and she has the ready tact which takes advantage of every opportunity to render the lives of others happier,

And every morning, with "Good day,"
Makes each day good.

Her winning smile and gentle ministrations, her soft voice and unfailing sympathy, insure her always a ready welcome, and, like the sun, she "finds the world bright, because she first makes it so." The fairy tale of our young days has a peculiar charm and attraction. The courteous, cheerful maiden who draws water for the withered old crone, and who listens to her, and replies with amiability, is rewarded with the gift of uttering pearls and diamonds; and, in the less romantic German version, Frau Holle, bestows gold pieces as the reward of civility and diligence with that delightful prodigality so characteristic of fairy land.—Harper's Weekly.

Parental Burdens.

Some of these are appalling. The New York Christian Advocate gives this painful case. Two daughters in a well-to-do family had been given all the advantages of a first-class education, and association with the best society. This had been bestowed at the expense of the hardest toil and strictest economy of the parents at home. One day after graduation they sat in their parlor in fashionable dress, while the mother in her work dress was dusting the room. Suddenly a wealthy young lady was ushered in. The girls welcomed her, the mother turned, expecting to be introduced; but the daughters paid no attention to her. When she left the room the visitor said: "What a strange maid you have? She actually looked as though she expected to be presented." "O, well," replied the girls, "she has been with us a long time, and we have to overlook some things." The toil-worn mother heard the remark, and staggered to her room. The long illness that followed the crushing blow gave time to the daughters to see their cruel folly—but the mother was in hopeless despair. In some form or other that scene might have been laid in every State and Territory of the Union.

Christ simply places himself by our side, and shows us a perfect life, God's life on earth in man; and he says, "You are to be saints and heroes, every one of you, in the only true sense, just where you are. That is the reason why I have come to you where you are." He uses no compulsion, no violence. He does not put his power in the place of your liberty. Whoever lives the heroic or saintly life will do it of his own choice, his free will. There is no manhood, womanhood, character, otherwise.—Bishop Huntington.

Nervous Children.

I want to say a word about nervous children. Never scold or make fun of them. They suffer enough without your threats or sarcasm. Don't let them know you see their awkwardness when in company, nor their grimaces when alone. A case was reported by the Boston Globe of a boy ten years old, who, on being vexed, and often without any apparent provocation, will clench his hands and make the most frightful contortions of the muscles of his voice and head, till his poor mother fears he is idiotic. By no means. He is the brightest boy in his class at school, fond of reading and of natural history, but he is of a highly nervous temperament, and has not been taught to control the little wires, so to speak, on which he is strung. This is no single case. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves in similar fashion. Never whip them, but talk to them, about these curious little strings that should be made their servants, not their masters. A prominent physician in this city says the man or woman who whips a nervous child should for every blow given receive five, and is on a level with brutes that have no reason. It is our duty to encourage and help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at whatever they undertake. Brace up your own nerves first, and then be indulgent toward the capers of your over-nervous children.—Christian Union.

Healthy Girls.

It is impossible to imagine a pleasant home with a cross wife, mother or sister, as its presiding genius. And it is a rule, with exceptions, that good appetite and sound sleep induce amiability. If, with these advantages, a girl or woman, boy or man, is still sneppish or surly, why it must be due to her or his total depravity. But as yet this soundness of body is one of the things to be aimed at and striven for, and the young girl, very conscious—as she should not be—of back, and throat, and head, and nerves, wishes she knew how to be beautifully healthy. Some things she should not do; she shouldn't dose herself, or study her case, or plunge suddenly into vigorous exercises. Moderation is a safe rule to begin with, and, indeed, to keep on with. Moderation in study, in work, in exercise, in everything except fresh air, good simple food and sleep. Few people have too much of these. The average girl at home can find no more sanitary gymnastics than in doing part of the lighter housework. This sort of exercise has object, and interest and use, which raises it above mere drill. Add to this a merry romp with younger brothers and sisters, a brisk daily walk, the use for a few moments twice a day of dumb-bells in a cool, airy room, and it is safe to predict a steady advance toward that ideal state of being in which we forget our bodies and just enjoy ourselves.—The Examiner.

Womanhood.

To be a woman is to be the purest and most noble of God's creatures; hence womanhood should be the study of every young girl old enough to realize the importance of the term "true women."

A girl should so live that every action and word will go to prove her womanhood, for this only will make her a pure and noble woman—a woman fitted for the drawing-room or kitchen.

Beauty and style make not a true woman. No; for some of the most noble women are the plainest. Beauty is only skin deep, and is a very dangerous thing, for no gift bestowed upon woman is so widely abused.

A women's real worth is estimated by the greatness of her soul and purity of her character. Women who have these attributes make the best wives and the truest mothers. Woman is the centre of society; hence how great and how elevated she should be in order to have the name of true womanhood. We, as the young ladies of Zion, should hold a steady moral sway over our male associates. Men love to trust their love, if you will allow me the term, in the hands of a true woman; therefore, let us begin and make it our every-day study that will be respected by all good daughters of Zion.—Young Woman's Journal.

Make Home a School.

Make home an institution of learning. Provide books for the center-table, and for the library of the family. See that all the younger children attend the best schools, and interest yourself in their studies. If they have the taste for thorough cultivation, but not the means to pursue it, if possible, provide for a higher education. Daniel Webster taught at the intervals of his college course to aid an elder brother in the pursuit of a classical education, and a volume of his works is dedicated to the daughters of that brother, who early closed a brilliant career. Feel that an ignorant brother or sister will be a disgrace to your family, and trust not to the casual influence of the press, existing institutions, and the kind offices of strangers. If the family becomes, as it may be, an institution of learning, the whole land will be educated.—Exchange.

Dr. Gulbric was passing up a street in Edinburgh one day, and saw a little girl carrying a very heavy baby. With his usual kindness of heart, the doctor said: "Lassie, surely that child is too heavy for you." With an accent of surprise the girl replied, "No, sir; he is my brother." She could not understand, the dear, good sister, how her little brother could by any means be too heavy a burden.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A PROBLEM IN THREES.

If three little houses stood in a row
With never a fence to divide;
And if each little house had three little maids
At play in the garden wide;
And if each little maid had three little cats
(Three times three times three);
And if each little cat had three little kits,
How many kits would there be?

And if each little maid had three little friends
With whom she loved to play;
And if each little friend had three little dolls
In dresses and ribbons gay;
And if friends and dolls and cats and kits
Were all invited to tea,
And if none of them should send regrets,
How many guests would there be?
—Exchange.

In Japan.

WITHOUT A PASSPORT.

The foreigner in Japan can not travel or live more than twenty-five miles away from one of the five treaty ports without a passport. Sometimes the getting of a passport requires many days. Mine came after I had been in Kobe and thereabouts three weeks; and information came that my salary would begin from the date of my appearance in Matsuyama. So I prepared to go down and spend a few days and then return, for, on account of the heat and sultriness, all the foreigners of that region had fled to Arime and other mountain resorts. Mrs. Lamhuth provided me with food, a bottle of cholera medicine, a blanket folder used by the father of the mission as he went up and down and around the Inland Sea. There were given much useful advice and caution that all things necessary be taken.

I started; but just after the boat was fairly on the way, a search revealed the fact that the all-important passport had been left on a table at Kobe. I had read in Verdant Simple's "Notes on Japan," how when he lost his passport the police guarded him in a hotel at night. Some missionaries had told of being prevented from landing under the same condition. What was to be done? There was no boat to take me back to Kobe. Would the officers allow me to land at Matsuyama? If so, what would they do to me? There were calm blue sea, snow-white sails, fair islets and lovely mountains all around; but what were those to one whose passport was gone!

Just so, oftentimes men and women are, Martha-like, careful of many smaller things, but failing to choose the one good part needful, are troubled. H. G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old, and as I never have written to your valuable paper, I thought I would write now. Our preacher for this year is Rev. Wilson Moore. Our preacher for last year had to move. We all hated to give him up. We loved him so much. His name was Rev. B. H. Shepperd. I have four brothers and two sisters. One of them is in Mississippi. I am very lonely without her. I belong to the Methodist Church, South. My sister, brother and I joined the church, and intend to be Christians. We have no Sabbath-school, but we take the Nashville literature, and we learn our lessons every Sunday, and say them to mama. I have read the New Testament through several times. Mama, sister and myself used to read a chapter together along, and mama would explain it to us. I have never gone to school except to mama, and the baby divides our attention with lesson. I have three pets: a baby brother, my little sister (one of the twins; she is four years old), and a little calf. Papa has a large flock of sheep. The lambs look very pretty playing. They walk logs, jump off; run up and down the hill. My papa is a doctor. Now, I will ask a question: Which is the longest and best prayer in the Bible? Respectfully,

F. EUGENIA BALDARHOE.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from this neighborhood, I thought I would write one (this is my first). I am fifteen years old. My father is a farmer. I help him every day. Farmers are rather backward this Spring; have just commenced to plant corn. It has rained a great deal lately, and I have been hunting a little. I like to hunt so much. I went to a concert Friday night. I enjoyed it hugely. I have five brothers and one sister. We have Sabbath-school all through the year except the three Winter months. Our superintendent is Mr. D. F. Myers; Bible teacher, Mr. S. D. Rhodes. We have services twice a month by our pastor. His name is Rev. J. G. Sibley. We all like him so much. He is such a good man. I have no pets to tell about. I will close by answering Cecil Bass' question. It was Methuselah who died before his father. He was the oldest man that ever lived. His age was 969 years. His father went to heaven without dying. ROBT. D. CROOK.

Pelahatchie, March 27.

MR. EDITOR: As you were kind enough to publish my first letter, I feel encouraged to write again. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Aunt Ada is my teacher. She has a class of five little girls and one little boy. I told you when I wrote before that my mama was dead, but forgot to tell you that my papa was living, and I am always so glad when he comes to see me. Mr. Editor, I think the question you ask the little cousins was awful hard. The word "its" surely can't be in more than one place in the Bible, and I have not found it yet; but I am going to keep trying. I have looked for an answer to the question. I asked where the words "industrious" and "kite," were found in the Bible, but no one has answered yet. I will close, hoping to see this in print. I am, Your little friend,

MYATA ANDERS.

Hopewell, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I never see any letters from Auburn, I thought I would write one, and try to answer your question in the ADVOCATE. The word "its" is found in the contents of the Bible in six places: twice on page 3 and page 13 and page 42. I will also answer Cecil I. Bass' question of March 23. Methuselah died before his father. I will close with best wishes to the ADVOCATE. I remain, Your friend,

B. J. HAVENS.

Auburn, Miss.

[The answer is not correct. What do you mean by "contents of the Bible?" The word "its" occurs only once in King James' Version. The question is, Where?—EDITOR.]

MR. EDITOR: It has been a long time since I wrote to the ADVOCATE. I had been going to school till about two weeks ago. I have but one pet, and that is a puppy. I live in a nice little town, and enjoy myself very much. I want to ask the cousins a question: Where is "blindfolded" found in King James' Version of the Bible? H. OTIS WHITE.

Mt. Carmel, Miss.

Forks.

Sledge—Forks! what be they?
Mencraft—The laudable use of forks,
Brought into onstom here as they are in Italy,
To the sparing o' napkins.

Does it seem possible, children, that there could ever have been a time when forks were not used? I imagine that napkins must have been very much used in consequence, don't you? I believe that the first we hear about forks is in Italy, somewhere about 1600. It was thought a great test of elegant table manners to eat daintily with the ends of the fingers. They managed something like this: The host who carved used a long pointed carving knife in his right hand, while in the left he held the roast of meat with a silver bone, or sometimes a golden skewer. Having cut a slice of beef he took it upon the point of his knife, laid it on a slice of bread and passed it to his guest. Sometimes when the meat happened to be a leg of mutton or ham, the bone was cleaned off at the end and a white paper lastily twisted around it so that the carver might hold it firmly in his fingers while he carved. Even in these days, children, if you go to some parts of lower Germany and Italy you may see meet served in just this way.

When forks at last became more general and were introduced into England, still at dinner it was not thought necessary to provide anything but knives and spoons, and those who were more dainty brought their forks with them; they used them mostly for eating preserves and fruits.

Some of these forks were very beautifully made, with gold and silver handles, chased and studded with gems. They were not made with as many prongs as we have nowadays, for we are told they looked more like spoons split in two. Those made of iron and steel looked like knife blades flattened out at the ends into two prongs, very clumsy things, and perhaps it was no great wonder that at first they did not find universal favor with the people. We have so much to be thankful for—that we live in these modern times even—that we have our forks agreeably fashioned for our use. It was not for some time after this that Horace Walpole, writing in 1760, tells us that while passing through Sheffield he heard of a man who had made the wonderful discovery of plating copper with silver, and not offering temptation to some of "the light-fingered gentry." I fear we should have to question the quality of the "gentry" in that case, don't you? And now I must say adieu, with the hope of meeting you all again some day.—Aunt Katharine, in Christian at Work.

Dutch Kloompers.

One of the queerest sights which I saw in Europe was a row of wooden shoes outside the door of a Dutch farmhouse on Saturday morning. There were the big-sized shoes of the farmer himself, the middle-sized shoes of the good vrouw, and several small-sized shoes of the children, and all the line had been scrubbed and freshly whitewashed in preparation for Sunday.

There are many kinds of wooden shoes worn by the peasants in Europe, but none are more clumsy and heavy than the "kloompers" of the Hollanders. They are boat-shaped, with high wooden protections to the heels, and a curious little upward twist to the toes, like the prow of a Chinese junk. But as heavy and awkward as the shoes are, the Dutch children run about as lightly as if they were shod in Cinderella's glass slippers, and do not seem to object in the least to the clicking sound made by the shoes on the pavement.

One of the most extraordinary sights in the world is a line of little Dutch boys playing leap frog in their great, noisy wooden kloompers. Having formed a row of "frogs" from one end of their village to the other, the boys begin to jump in the usual agile way of the players of the lively game. As soon as the line is in motion a most tremendous sound startles the village. The oldest inhabitant can hardly "hear himself think," but he knows that the noise is not thunder; it is only the rattle of the boys' wooden shoes as they strike the hard brick-paved street.—Harper's Young People.

The Clock and the Story.

This was a queer clock. It looked like a small bird house, and hung quite high on the wall, out of reach of the cat.

It was a rainy day, and Mabel, Dora and Fred were tired of their toys, for they had a long play with them. What should they do next? Just then Aunt Kate came into the room, and the three little folks cried out in one voice: "Auntie Kate, tell us a story! Please do!"

Aunt Kate looked up at the clock, and said: "Well, it must be a short one, for I can only stay with you a few moments. I know you are fond of birds, so I will tell you of one that is too lazy to build a nest for itself. It lays its eggs in the nest of other birds, and leaves them there to be kept warm and hatched out. Is she not a strange kind of a mother, to take no thought or care of her little ones and see that they are well brought up?"

"What is the bird's name?" asked Fred. "I should think all the other birds would hate her."

"Maybe they do," said Aunt Kate, going toward the door.

"Tell us its name," cried the children.

"The clock will do that," said Aunt Kate.

And then there was a great whirr and a whiz inside the clock, and out popped a wee mite of a bird, who said, "Cuck-oo! cuck-oo! cuck-oo!" at the top of its lungs.

And the clock told the truth, for that was the bird's name.

SMALL WRITING.—Small writing has become the mode in France, and the Petit Journal recently received a post-card containing more than 3,000 words. The journal l'Eclair has promised a prize to whomsoever will write the greatest number of words on the smallest space. The craze is by no means modern. Pliny mentions a copy of Homer's Iliad which was contained in a nutshell. A paper about a square centimetre in area, containing the Ten Commandments and other matters, was presented to Elizabeth, Queen of Charles IX. Not many months ago a Viennese, Herr Soler, engraved a psalm of 391 letters on a grain of wheat. Typography has achieved similar triumphs. At the Paris Exhibition of 1889, there was a small printed copy of Dante, with pages about an inch square; but it was said the compositor had become almost blind in setting the type.—Interior.

If one knew what felicity dwells in the cottage of a virtuous man, how sound he sleeps, how quiet his rest, how composed his mind, how free from care, how easy his position, how joyful his heart, they would never admire the noises, the throngs of passions, and the violence of unnatural appetites that fill the house of the luxurious and the heart of the ambitious.—Taylor.

Country child (who sees no novelty in a park): "What is all this grass for?" City child: "That's to keep off of."—Good News.

to consumption are ailments we often deem trivial—a cold and a cough. Consumption thus acquired is rightly termed "Consumption from neglect."

Scott's Emulsion

not only stops a cold but it is remarkably successful where the cough has become deep seated.

Scott's Emulsion is the richest of fat-foods yet the easiest fat-food to take. It arrests waste and builds up healthy flesh.

King's Royal Germeteur

CURES:

LA GRIPPE.

Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor Sunday-school literature M. E. Church, South, says: "The 'grippe' attacked me the second time in Spring. One bottle of Germeteur relieved me as it did before. I feel entirely free from all symptoms of 'la grippe' at present."

RHEUMATISM.

New Orleans, August 20, 1892.

We are happy to testify to the value of King's Royal Germeteur, which we have found most efficacious in all rheumatic affections.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

BLOOD POISON.

Old Sore, Reported by Newspaper.

The many friends of H. B. BIGG, our fellow townsman, will be glad to hear that the chronic sore on his leg, that gave him so much trouble, is entirely well. He says that King's Germeteur did the work.—News, Owen, Kentucky.

CATARRH.

Rev. Dr. Hawthorne's Experience with Germeteur.

I am free from Catarrh. I believe that I could get a certificate to this effect from a competent physician. I have used no medicine within the last six months except King's Royal Germeteur. My health is better than it has been in 30 years.

DYSPEPSIA.

A daughter of Mr. M. E. Abbey, of Atlanta, Ga., was cured of a long standing case of dyspepsia after using all manner of remedies.

THE LITTLE ILLS OF LIFE.

Nothing will relieve burns, carbuncles, chilblains, eczema and cutaneous irritations of all kinds, like Germeteur externally applied every ten minutes until relief is obtained.

GRANT—Mrs. ANNA AMELIA GRANT, daughol B. F. and M. E. Grant, was born in Co- county, Miss., March 21, 1848, and attended ool at Nazareth, Ky., 1866, and was married Mr. H. B. Grant Nov. 18, 1869. Her mother, er and one sister preceded her to the land he blessed, and were waiting at the beautigate for her.

She was the mother of nine children; one of preceded her to the home of the soul at age of four years. She was a kind mother, oted wife, and a friend to and loved by all knew her. She, with her husband, Mr. H. Grant, moved in 1889 to Hazlehurst, Miss., ere they remained two years. In 1891 they rned to their home in the country, where remained to the day of her death. She ed the M. E. Church, South, under the istry of Bro. Pearson, and remained a mem- of the same to the day of her death. She taken sick in June, 1890. Her health gradly grew worse, and in November, 1891, she taken to New Orleans. After examination physician told her that a surgical operation t be performed that might result in death, postponed the operation a day or two, ing on the Lord, and when she had found she said, "Now I am ready." Before she her consent she was happily converted. returned to her home and lived one year the arms of Jesus, and fell asleep in Jesus 23, 1892. She leaves eight children and a oted husband to mourn her loss. May the y Spirit comfort and keep them and enable r to meet that mother and wife on that utiful shore, where she will be waiting and ching for them. We followed her to her l resting place, Nov. 24, 1892—Thanksgiving . Just one year to a day before this her sister crossed the river. What a meeting there been! D. F. GUICE, P. C.

ORRISON—Sister A. P. MORRISON was a ive of Ireland; but when I came to New eans in 1852 she was a member of the ndelet Street Church, and had been for rs. She was a lady of refinement, graceful elegant in her bearing, but singularly est and unassuming. Her face seemed r bright with pleasing smile. No murmur- no complaining. Always in her place at s and prayer meeting, a prayerful and rev- nt hearer of the Word. She loved to take consecrated bread and wine in grateful mory of her dying Lord. Her life was conntly beautiful—"the beauty of holiness." was a living witness for Jesus, whose testiny none who knew her ever doubted.

age, weakness and suffering, the religion had been the guide and gladness of her th did not fail her. She was cheerful, self- ethful, and full of thankfulness for every ness shown her. As a faithful mother and ng grandmother her memory will be long tenderly cherished as an ointment poured h, a sweet perfume. She fell asleep in Jesus 21, 1893, at Biloxi, Miss.

er old pastor, J. B. WALKER.

BOWDEN Sister EUGENIE BOWDEN (nee Clark) was born in Tate county, Miss., Jan. 5, 1871; was dedicated to God in baptism in infancy, and being blessed with pious parents, she was taught the doctrines of salvation as recommended by the church. At the age of twelve she made a profession of religion and assumed the vows of the church, and was ever after this a faithful witness for her blessed Master. She was educated at the N. C., Columbus, Miss., and was trained in Christian work under that devoted man, Dr. Jones, which qualified her for usefulness in the church and made her a worthy pattern in society. On July 9, 1888, she was happily married to William Bowden, which union was blessed with two bright little boys, which she left to be trained by other hands and hearts for the Lord.

Her last sickness was short, but severe; she never complained. When told she must soon die she gave some instructions, expressed herself as being ready and willing to go, then offered earnest prayers for her relatives and friends, and especially for her husband, and without a struggle she fell on sleep, Feb. 27, 1893.

A beautiful, consistent Christian life has closed. The church of which she was a member has sustained a great loss, and will miss her sorely; but she has gained a home in heaven. The best of all is, our people die well.

May the good Lord bless us all, and help us all to meet Sister Bowden in that home where we will never part again!

Cockrum, Miss.

SHANNON—F. G. SHANNON, son of William S. and Mahaly Shannon, was born in Madison county, Miss., Aug. 2, 1866. He remained in this county with his family until about twenty years of age, when he came to live with his uncle, Madison Shannon, in Claiborne county, Miss., six years ago. After one year's stay with his uncle he attended school at Starkville, Miss. After his return from school he lived awhile with Mr. I. O. Lloyd, of Copiah county, Miss. During his stay with Mr. Lloyd he was attentive to his business and was well thought of by the family.

During his stay with Bro. Lloyd he joined the M. E. Church, South, and was a member of the same to the day of his death. He professed religion when he joined the church, and was a regular attendant at service ever after this till death. He moved from Bro. Lloyd's to Mrs. M. E. Clark's. During his stay here he was married to Miss Mattie Urby, with whom he lived happily for two years before his death. He came to his death on Dec. 2, 1892. He leaves a devoted wife and one child to mourn his loss. May the Holy Spirit comfort and keep them and bring them home to heaven at last!

WILLIAMS—Died in Haughton, La., March 3, 1893, after a long and painful illness, EFFIE WILLIAMS, daughter of our beloved pastor and Sister J. B. Williams, aged nine years.

Another link in the golden chains that binds our hearts to heaven, another angel pleading for us on high. But how gloomy is life without the precious one! The desolate home, the vacant chair, all remind us that thou, darling, art gone. But how she will be missed at school, how lonely, sad and vacant her desk looks! But grieve no more, dear papa and mama, sister and brother; Effie has joined in the song of praise. Cheer up, papa and mama; look up, for your little daughter is watching and waiting for you and is calling out: "Come home, papa, mama, little sister and brother; I'll meet you out on the way." We are longing to hear the patter of her little feet around the hearth-stone, but now she is gone. Oh, how sad! Is it possible that we will never see her bright eyes and loving face on earth again?

Her schoolmate, HATTIE MCKINEY.

PARKER—The dear boy so suddenly taken from us was just twenty days over thirteen years old. After receiving the wound that caused his death, he uttered only the four words which are to us a wealth of comfort. When he fell and his twin brother reached down to help him up, he said, "Kiss mama and papa." The effort to say more was not intelligible.

There is much sorrow in this world which will make heaven all the more bright and glorious. "When shall we wake and find us there?"

The Lord suffers the woes of this life to fall very heavily upon us, but he loves us, and, however dark and sad our environments may be here, there is a bright spot overhead from which the voice of God comes, saying, "I will not leave thee nor forsake thee." He gave us ELIJOH Jan. [illegible] 1890, just as the day departed, and took him back about the same hour Feb. 20, 1893. "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away." MAMA AND PAPA.

FORMAN—The dark angel of death passed over the happy home of I. W. and Ida Forman, and bore away on angel's wings the spirit of their sweet little boy, GEORGE (born Dec. 10, 1888; died Jan. 29, 1893), aged four years one month and nineteen days.

George was a bright and interesting little boy; but while hearts and home were made sad and gloomy, heaven was illuminated and angels made to rejoice over the angelic spirit of sweet little George gone to mingle in the sweet angel songs with his little brothers and sisters that have gone before. The little bud of promise has been snatched from its bower and borne away to the sweet by-and-by. Grieve not, dear parents; remember the Savior says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

E. J. FORMAN.

BRISTER—Mrs. SARAH C. BAISTER was born June 4, 1828; was married to L. A. W. Brister, June 18, 1846, and departed this life March 9, 1893, aged sixty-four years seven months and five days. Her maiden name was Smith.

Her parents were Methodist, and, as a natural consequence, she made choice of the Methodist Church. When she was converted and joined the church I am not informed, and it was not my privilege to visit her in her last sickness; but I am informed by those who talked with her that she was perfectly resigned to the will of the Lord. She said that she was waiting and praying for her children and grandchildren. May the Lord help them all so to live that they may meet mama in the sweet by-and-by!

B. A. B.

HUMPHREYS—Infant son of H. A. and O. A. Humphreys was born Feb. 3, and died on the twenty-fourth, being three weeks old. God saw fit to take little NOAH, and why should we mourn, our loss is his eternal gain. Weep not, fond papa and mama; but strive to meet little Noah in the sweet by-and-by. Let us all be faithful and ready when the summon comes for us to come up higher, where we will meet little Noah, who, with other kindred, is waiting and watching for us to join them in the land that is fairer than day. God help us to be faithful!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

ENGLAND.

WILLIAM EDWARD ROBSON, M. R. C. S. L., L. K. Q. C. P. London.

"I am satisfied that more than one-half the deaths which occur in England are caused primarily by impaired action of the kidneys, and the consequent retention in the blood of the poisonous kidney acid. Warner's Safe Cure causes the kidneys to expel this poison, checks the escape of albumen, relieves the inflammation and prevents illness from impoverished blood. I conscientiously and emphatically state that I have been able to give more relief and effect more cures by the use of Warner's Safe Cure that all the other medicines ascertainable to the profession."

WM. EDWARD ROBSON.

GERMANY.

N. BEYER, M. D., Wurzburg, Germany.

"My attention having been called to Warner's Safe Cure, I gave the medicine to a patient of mine who was suffering from a complication of kidney and liver diseases. The usual remedies for such disorders had been tried in vain and the man's case seemed hopeless. Under the use of the Safe Cure he was completely restored to health, greatly to my surprise and gratification. I have, and shall continue to recommend Warner's Safe Cure in all circles of my acquaintance."

DR. MED. N. BEYER.

All Lands Endorse It.

AMERICA.

R. A. GUNN, M. D., New York.

"A personal friend, whose application for life insurance had been rejected, was cured under my direction by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. After this demonstration of its powers, I prescribed it with the most satisfactory results.

"In a large class of ailments where the blood is in an unhealthy state—where there is no evidence of organic mischief, but where the general health is depleted, the face sallow, the urine colored, constituting the 'blues' condition—the advantage gained from the use of Warner's Safe Cure is remarkable and I am glad to acknowledge and commend it thus favorably."

4. Rev. Chas. R. Lamar was cured of dyspepsia of more than two years' standing by use of two gallons of Matchless Mineral Water.

5. J. H. Gilbert says: "Matchless Mineral Water is, beyond doubt, the best remedy known to me for sore eyes."

6. Jesse B. Basser says: "I have suffered long from chronic ulcerated sore leg. Offered $100 to doctors to cure. This water cured me."

7. Rev. J. M. Whitehead: "It cures every species of indigestion; can eat anything I want, and a good appetizer."

8. James J. Ingle says: "I have suffered five years with kidneys and liver. Have used one bottle. Most wonderful medicine I ever used."

9. J. G. Lightfoot says: "My son down five years. General debility and impure blood. Doctors failed. Two bottles Mineral Water cured him."

10. John Brannan says: "I was down three years with bilious colic. Spent $150 for medical treatment; grew worse; one and a half gallons. This water cured me."

11. Martin Eady says: "My eye was about out from gun cap in it. The two bottles Mineral Water made a complete cure of my eyes."

12. George Green says: "I have been suffering fifteen or twenty years with chronic diarrhœa. The Matchless Mineral Water cured me."

13. W. J. Gardner says: "For seven or eight years I was victim of nervous dyspepsia and all its horrors. One quart Mineral Water cured me. Spend thousands of dollars for medical treatment. Would not go back for $10,000."

14. J. B. Brown says: "My only child, three years old, sick two years. Spent much for medical treatment. Child given up to die. Mineral Water cured him. I would not take $1,000 for benefits of that bottle of Mineral Water."

15. Mrs. Eliza Austin, Caddo parish, La., says: "The water is curing everything it is used for. Deaf, blind, lame, bait. I believe it will cure anything curable. One says, 'It's worth to me $500;' another: 'It is worth to me one thousand dollars.' 'It is worth its weight in gold.' I wish I could tell half the good it has done."

16. Mr. J. A. Davis, Bonham, Texas, says: "My horse was as sick with colic as any horse I ever saw. One pint of water cured him in five minutes."

Agents wanted. Write for circulars, and try this invaluable Mineral Water.

The Value of a Dollar.

Every boy should learn the true value of a dollar. To know what a dollar costs and what it buys is one of the stepping-stones to success. It is also desirable that everyone should know that a half dollar will buy a bottle of

Ask your dealer for a bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Tiffany & Co., the New York jewelers, will have an exhibit at the World's Fair valued at $2,000,000.

San Francisco is the banner city for saloons. It has one such institution to every 93 persons. Albany comes next with one to every 110 persons, and New Orleans one to every 121 persons.

After a fierce parliamentary struggle the Illinois Senate, on April 6, passed the woman's suffrage bill extending the elective franchise to women in certain municipal and township elections.

Thirty-one million four hundred and seventy-five thousand five hundred and nineteen barrels of domestic beer were consumed in the United States last year—about half a barrel for each inhabitant.

On April 6 the graves of the Confederate dead in this city were decorated amid tender and impressive ceremonies. Many of the surviving veterans of the various army associations marched in the military parade on that day.

Colonel W. H. Glider proposes to make another expedition to the Arctic region. His purpose on this trip is not to reach the geographical pole, but the magnetic pole. He is now seeking funds to defray the expenses of the journey.

The National Conference of State Boards of Health was held in New York City, April 6, with the discussion of possible plans for securing a uniform system of interstate inspection to be adopted in case of an epidemic of cholera this Summer.

In Kansas women have been invested with the right to vote in municipal elections, and they had a chance in the elections of a number of towns and cities last week. In many places the women turned out and voted in large numbers, but not for women candidates.

Charles E. Hooker, member of Congress from Mississippi, who was severely injured last week by being knocked down by a cable car in the streets of Washington, is reported to be out of danger. His skull was not fractured, but he has been suffering from concussion of the brain.

The Senate has practically concluded its labors and is now waiting for an intimation from the President to bring the session to a close. All idea of passing upon the questions involved in the appointment of the three senators from the Northwest has been abandoned, and that matter will be left for disposal at the next session.

Stockholders, directors or proprietors of Sunday newspapers and Monday morning papers in Pittsburg that do any work before midnight on Sunday are to be made the defendants in the usual charges preferred by the Law and Order Society. Agent McClure, of the society, says there are about 100 warrants, more or less, out against such people.

The Secretary of the Navy has decided upon the official programme of the review of the United States and foreign ships-of-war, which, by act of Congress, will take place in New York harbor on the twenty-seventh instant. The men-of-war will be anchored in two columns, the foreign ships on the New York side. While the Dolphin, carrying the President of the United States, is passing between the columns that portion of the North river between the New York side and the north side all passage will be suspended.

FOREIGN.

Mexico has 23,600 miles of telegraph lines. In the last six months 205 miles of railway have been constructed, and there are now 6,831 miles altogether.

Rioting strikers at Hull, England, attacked soldiers and policemen, on April 9, who blocked their way to ships that were taking aboard their crews. Many on both sides were carried off the field seriously wounded.

With the reassembling of Parliament the debate on the Home Rule bill has been resumed, and, according to a decision reached before Easter, all the time of Parliament from now on is to be given to the consideration of this celebrated measure.

Tintoretto's famous portrait of "Venetian Nobleman," in the palace of the Doges, Venice, has been hacked to pieces. The portrait was valued at 300,000 francs. No clew to the identity of the man who mutilated the picture has been obtained.

A stir has been created in railway circles over the official decree of the Mexican government, which has just been issued, declaring the forfeiture of the concession granted Henry Gosselin for a railroad from Oaxaca to Tehuantepec. The large deposit of money which Mr. Gosselin made with the government as a guarantee that the terms under which the concession was obtained would be complied with has been ordered turned into the national treasury. The cause of the concession being canceled is the failure of Mr. Gosselin to carry out his contract promptly.

The United States has taken vigorous action in regard to the outrages on American citizens in the Turkish dominions at Marzovan and the violation of the mails of the United States legation. Secretary Gresham has cabled to Minister Thompson at Constantinople a strong expression of his views on the outrages, and demanding not only prompt reparation for the burned seminary, but the punishment of all parties found guilty in the matter. Minister Thompson is instructed that no alleged prior acts of students are to affect the rights of this government in the premises.

More Great Cures of Torturing and Disfiguring Skin, Scalp, and Blood Diseases are Daily Made by the Cuticura Remedies than By all other Skin and Blood Remedies Combined

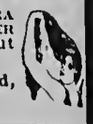
To those who have suffered long and hopelessly, and who have lost faith in doctors, medicines, and all things human, the CUTICURA REMEDIES appeal with a force never before realized in the history of medicine. Every hope, every expectation awakened by them, has been more than fulfilled. Thousands of the best physicians that ever wrote a prescription endorse and prescribe them. Druggists everywhere recommend them, while countless numbers in every part of the land say,

"WHY DON'T YOU TRY CUTICURA

Remedies? They are the best in the world." They cleanse the system by internal and external medication of every eruption, impurity, and disease, and constitute the most effective treatment of modern times. Hence, since a cake of CUTICURA SOAP, costing 25 cents, is sufficient to test the virtues of these great curatives, there is now no reason why hundreds of thousands should go through life tortured, disfigured, and humiliated by skin and scalp diseases which are speedily and permanently cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES at a trifling cost.

Sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston. "All About the Blood, Skin, Scalp, and Hair" mailed free.

For Pimples, Blackheads, Red and Oily Skin, Red, Rough Hands and Falling Hair, use Cuticura Soap.



No mineral water will produce the beneficial results that follow taking ONE or more of "BEECHAM'S PILLS" with a glass of water immediately upon arising in the morning.

"Worth a guinea a box."—Price only 25 cents.
Of all druggists, or a box will be mailed on receipt of 25cts. in stamps by T. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal St., New York.

The Great Exposition.

Standing on the platform just in front of the Administration Building, in the presence of all the people who can crowd into about six acres of ground, President Cleveland, on May 1, will touch the button which will formally open the great Exposition. Mr. Cleveland will be accompanied by his Cabinet, by officers of the army and navy, and by representatives of the foreign nations participating in the Columbian Fair.

The President will reach Jackson Park on a special train the morning of the opening day, and on the same night, it is calculated, he will return to Washington City. During the hours intervening between the ceremony and the departure of his train, he will drive about the park and Midway Plaisance in an open carriage, giving all the people who throng the various portions of the grounds an opportunity to cheer the national executive.

While, on May 1, the formal opening of the Fair will take place, and the gates will swing to admit the visitors from the various parts of the world, who will be present to behold the nineteenth century's tribute to the arts and industries, yet, nevertheless, it is almost beyond peradventure that the great Fair will be, at least, thirty days later in getting its exhibits put in shape. Astounding progress will, doubtless, be made in the next three weeks, and it is possible that with the exception of some of the foreign exhibits unavoidably delayed, perhaps the Liberal Arts Building and one or two of the State exhibits, the Fair will be in presentable shape. The picturesque incidents of the Exposition located on Midway Plaisance are the rising phenomena from the recently barren and dreary plane. Greeks, Japs, Cavanese, Esquimaux, Malays, Arabs and Chinese are fluttering in strange tubes in picturesque dress about the White City, and their habitations, occupations and games are becoming familiar to the eyes and ears of Chicago's citizens.

The fifty handsome women from Europe, gathered with care from France, Greece, England, Austria, Switzerland and various other nations, decorated by Worth in elegant wardrobes, are here, and will shortly be located in the building being erected for them near Jackson Park. At Tattersall's, on Dearborn street, near Sixteenth, are quartered the 250 British soldiers who are to illustrate during the Fair the Grand London Tournament, which has of late been patronized so extensively by the English aristocracy. Eighty of the best trained India artillery horses accompany the party. During the Fair there will be gathered in the Tattersall's daily exhibition of skill in riding, and use of the gun and sabre, and difficult and dangerous feats of artillery service.

On the twenty-ninth of April the Liberty Bell will arrive from Philadelphia. It will be brought to Chicago on a special train, and will make many stops along the way, where ovations will be given to the veteran proclaimer of liberty.

The Pacific Coast States are going to come out of the Exposition with many laurels. First, probably, on the list will be California, whose beautiful and costly building we have already noted. The exhibits now being placed show that the Golden State has gone into the great Exposition to make a bid for investors and immigration, which the people who have "eyes to see and ears to hear" will be compelled to heed. With pictures of the marvelous scenery of the State by local artists, contributions of the wonder-worker, irrigation, she will do much during the next six months toward securing early advancement of her business.

Oregon, not being able to place her exhibit in a structure of her own, will lose much of the effect of her appropriation. A splendid collection of her products of the farm and garden, her school exhibits, and an attractive, though not large, mineral collection, will be scattered throughout many buildings.

Washington has a unique and typical structure, the foundation being of fir and cedar logs, arranged as in the old-style log cabin. She will have the interior filled with fruit, the equal of California's display, with as much and richer ore than Montana will show, and wheat and corn as extensive as Kansas or Nebraska will send, and of superior appearance.

Idaho appropriated but $30,000; yet she has been so cheerfully aided by her people, individually, that not only has she, with this small sum, provided one of the prettiest buildings upon the grounds, but has also decorated the same admirably. Idaho will distribute some elegantly illustrated literature of the State. The volumes are handsomely bound, and the pictures contained therein are gems of the engraver's art.

Besides the official exhibits, and, perhaps, of equal importance therewith, is the State Headquarters Clubs. Nearly all of the Northwestern States, together with California, Montana, Wyoming and Utah, are arranging to establish club houses for the entertainment of visitors from their respective districts. As a medium of advertising the advantages and resources of the States, and the hospitality of the people, together with the accommodation of strangers in Chicago, no better medium has been inaugurated. During the heat of the day and the cool of the evening these club houses upon the boulevards will be centers of interest, and much good will, doubtless, flow from their proper maintenance.

Montana has a brown stone mansion on Michigan avenue, near Twelfth street; California has a four-story brick near Thirteenth street, Oregon will open up in a handsome building opposite the California house, and Idaho and Wyoming are now negotiating for locations in the same district. Just now the club houses and their decorations are receiving more attention than the exhibits.

Many of the flimsy hotels built by the speculator upon the contributions of intending visitors to the World's Fair have fallen. This makes the third to fall prey to the sportive Michigan breeze. Two others burned a few days ago. The papers of the city say many more of these structures are liable to tumble without warning, and admit fire escapes are entirely missing, or faultily constructed in still others. It is in such structures as these the visitors from different places are many of them being located by Boarding House Bureaus and Visitors' Organizations. Too much care can not be exercised by parties intending to visit Chicago in the matter of accommodations. While there are many houses willing to entertain during the Summer, many of them, because of the character of the buildings, their situation, or the character of the occupants, will be found to be entirely undesirable. Every person should arrange in advance for accommodation, and, as far as practical, utilize the knowledge of the commissioners of their States, or the State Headquarter Organizations, having local responsibility for the character of the entertainment afforded.

Chicago, April 10.

Letter from Georgia.

MR. EDITOR: "What shall I render" unto you for your kindness in coming to me every week with an interesting budget of news concerning old friends? Shall I write you a gossipy letter about happenings in this part of the world? Macon has had a number of protracted meetings recently. The First Presbyterian Church and three of the Baptist Churches have had good meetings, though the number of accessions was not very large. Two of our Methodist Churches have had very successful meetings. Two others have meetings now in progress, while still another will begin a meeting next week. In the meeting now going on at First Street Church, the pastor, Rev. T. M. Christian, is assisted by Rev. Dr. Leftwich, of the Tennessee Conference. This meeting gives promise of large results. Successful meetings have been held in Augusta and Savannah. Meetings of remarkable power are now in progress in Atlanta. So you see that the Lord is fulfilling his promise, "Lo, I am with you alway."

I have had my pulpit filled recently by two distinguished visitors. Rev. D. L. Anderson, of Soochow, China, preached for me at the morning service a few weeks ago, and at night lectured on "Mission Work in China." Both discourses were much enjoyed. Bro. Anderson will return to China in August. The next Sunday we were very much delighted to have the genial Bishop Fitzgerald with us, albeit we would have enjoyed him more if he had consented to preach at the morning service. At night he favored us with an excellent sermon from the text, "Stir up the gift that is in thee." At the close of the service we organized an Epworth League of sixty members, which number has been since added to.

Yesterday I participated in a very unique service, namely the dedication of a hospital, or rather a hospital annex to the South Georgia Conference Orphans' Home. The history of this movement is this. During the past Winter Mr. R. P. Dunan, a Methodist man from Baltimore, came to Macon on business, bringing with him his invalid wife, as he had done for three Winters previous. On the twenty-third of January she died. Mrs. Dunan, being a devout disciple of him who "went about doing good," expressed during her last illness a wish that her husband would do after her death what she would like to have done had the opportunity been granted—make a contribution for the relief of the needy orphans of Macon. This hospital attachment to the Orphans' Home is the outgrowth of that wish of the dying woman. Having obtained permission from the Board of Trustees, Mr. Dunan had two apartments in the Home fitted up for hospital use in most superb style. Everything that can be needed in a hospital is there. The cost of fitting and furnishing is estimated at about $2,000. In addition to this Mr. Dunan has turned over to the Board $500 as an endowment fund, the interest on which is to be used in furnishing medicines and other supplies perpetually.

The dedication exercises were as follows: First, there was a presentation address in behalf of Mr. Dunan by Dr. W. C. Bass, president of Wesleyan Female College. This was responded to on the part of the Board of Trustees by Hon. Walter B. Hill, one of the leading lawyers of Macon and of Georgia. Then came my part of the programme, the reading of the parable of the Good Samaritan, prayer and the formal dedication. The exercises were interspersed with music furnished partly by the Mulberry Street choir and partly by the girls of the Home.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Dunan's example will be contagious. There are thousands of our Methodist people who could imitate the Master in works of this sort without denying themselves of a single luxury. Ought they not to do it? In this matter of Orphans' Homes, Georgia is ahead of Mississippi. To say nothing of what other churches are doing, each of the Georgia Conferences has a home which it supports. May God speed the Mississippi Conference in the movement which she inaugurated at last session looking in this direction!

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church will convene in Macon in May. Its session may be held in Mulberry Street Church, as the First Presbyterian Church, which had been selected for the purpose, is undergoing repairs, and possibly may not be ready in time. I have just returned from a trip to Uncle Sam's most southern province—Florida. The occasion of my going was an invitation from an ex-Mississippian, Rev. T. C. Bradford, to lecture in Monticello—his present pastorate. I went via the Georgia Southern and Florida railroad as far as Lake City. Here I spent twenty-four hours before going on to Monticello. This is a beautiful little place of probably fifteen hundred inhabitants. It takes its name from the numerous lakes in the vicinity, two of which lie, at least, partly within the corporate limits of the town. Here you realize that you have really traveled southward, for orange trees abound, every residence having at least a few of them in yard or garden. The orange is not produced here, however, so abundantly as in regions further south. Lake City claims the distinction of producing the finest cigar leaf tobacco grown anywhere on the American continent. The pleasure of my stay in Lake City was greatly enhanced by attentions on the part of Rev. J. P. DePass, of the Florida Conference, who is superintendent of the State Experimental Farm, and also professor of scientific agriculture in the State A. and M. College, located at Lake City. A delightful drive behind his beautiful ponies gave me a better view of the place than I would otherwise have had. I reached Monticello on Saturday night and remained until Tuesday afternoon, preaching on Sunday morning and lecturing on Monday night. I found Bro. Bradford and family in good health and delighted with Florida. Monticello has, I suppose, about two thousand inhabitants. It is quite a pretty place and remarkably healthy. It has a good-sized hotel which was built for the express benefit of Winter guests from the North. Our church in Monticello is a gem of its kind. It is of Gothic architecture, is built of brick, and has a separate Sunday-school room sufficiently large for the needs of the congregation. It was most tastefully decorated for the service on Sunday, which happened to be Easter Sunday. During my stay in Monticello I was domiciled in the home of Mr. H. Perkins, to whom and to his delightful family I am indebted for many kind attentions.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. R. Seward, Indian Bayou, La.: "The Lord is blessing us here. Have been holding an itinerant prayer meeting three and four nights in the week. Results: Seven conversions, ten have joined the church, several backsliders reclaimed, the members are talking religion, and a good many sinners are asking for the prayers of the church. Pray for us, that the blessed Savior will pour his spirit on us."

Rev. J. A. Parker, Homer, April 6: "Meeting still going on. The revival is thorough. The entire community is stirred on the question of religion. The revival has taken on a strong anti-saloon sentiment. It looks as if these pests are to be driven out as one of the results. The good work has been largely in the church. Thirty-two days' work, twenty additions, and a still greater number converted. The fruits will fall to all the churches in town. Bro. Blocker has labored, but not in vain. The end is not yet. Pray for us. We have called off for two days."

Rev. W. H. Sanders, P. C, Duncan and Hillhouse, North Mississippi Conferences: "Our second quarterly meeting convened at Hillhouse on April 9. Bro. J. A. Randolph, our presiding elder, was with us, and preached a delightful sermon at eleven o'clock A. M. Since we came to our work after Conference we have organized two new Sunday-schools and reorganized two, and have one which has continued through the Winter season. The total membership of our Sunday-schools in the charge is one hundred, and that of the church is eighty-two. We ordered $15 worth of Sunday-school literature since Conference, and have raised $10 on the collection ordered by the Conference, and $16 pledge money. We have organized one church since Conference, with a membership of four. We have ordered three church registers, and now we have a complete and accurate roll of the membership of the circuit. We need two new churches and a sweeping revival throughout this charge, and are praying and working to that end."

Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, Carrollton, Miss., April 1: "For more than a month we have been looking forward to the coming together of the preachers of the Winona district in our midst. Three times a day we have prayed that they might come in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. This morning, with a heart full of praise and thanksgiving, I write. Our prayers have been answered. For two days we have sat together in heavenly places, and verily our hearts have burned within us as we have talked and prayed over our Master's work, and, above all, have realized his presence in our midst. The church in Carrollton will not soon forget the visit of these men of God. Our prayers shall follow them to their fields of labor, asking God to give them many, many souls during this Conference year. We will begin our meeting on to-morrow, April 2, and we ask your prayers, and the prayers of all who see this notice, that the same Spirit who has so richly blessed us may abide in our midst, making bare his arm in the conviction and conversion of many precious souls. Bro. L. M. Lipscomb will be with us on Monday. Pray for us, and may the blessing of God abide with you."

Rev. H. W. Van Hook, Linwood circuit, April 7: "The egging through which I have just passed will long be remembered by the preacher in charge of this circuit. Only sixty-three dozen and nine eggs were used, but fortunately only three eggs broke. My people knew a pounding would be out of place, as I am but a single man (at present), so they egged me when I mentioned the cause of our Conference claimants. This method of taking a collection was a little trying upon nerve and muscle, as my horse very plainly showed that he objected to eggs, and my circuit being thirty miles long; but walking was good, and it required only two weeks to rob the 'Methodist preacher's bird.' As a result of this experiment, the assessment has been paid in full. We hope to take a collection of spring chickens before long for the cause of missions. Some of my lady members have already set apart one out of every five hens as a 'missionary hen.' So our missionary collections will be full if the hawks give us half a chance. We are praying and expecting God to bless our entire circuit throughout the year."

Rev. F. B. Ormond, P. C., Why Not circuit, Mississippi Conference, April 5: "Our first Quarterly Conference convened at Why Not on March 4. While there was not a steward present, we had a very pleasant Quarterly Conference. This is a new circuit, and a hard one; covers a vast deal of territory. I have held one series of (night services) meetings this year. These meetings were held at Toomsuba, beginning just one week and one day after the destructive cyclone of March 3. These meetings, I think, were a blessing to the good people of Toomsuba. Resulted with one accession to the church. While the cyclone swept most of the town to destruction, it is gratifying to know that the people recognize the hand of God in it all—his power to destroy and to protect. Our work, generally, is not in as good condition as we would like to see it; but I am not discouraged. I realize there is plenty of work to do, for if a Methodist itinerant preacher don't find enough work to keep him busy, he may accidentally—or from some other cause—fall into mischief. We hope to have some new church-buildings to report on our work this year. I will try and give you an idea of what I have done since Conference, and then you can judge for yourself as to whether I have been very busy or not since Jan. 1. I have traveled 700 miles, preached 33 sermons, and made 150 pastoral visits, beside studying on my Conference course, etc. Our collections ordered by the Annual Conference are coming up very well, but the work is considerably behind on the collection for ministerial support. However, we hope to raise every cent of our assessments, and we expect to do so. God bless the ADVOCATE! Pray for me, brethren, that I may do these people good this year, for this is my first work, and I desire to make a record that will be near the front in the next Annual Conference."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, P. C., Learned, Miss., April 3: "Yesterday—the first Sunday in April—was a day long to be remembered by the writer and the good people of Dry Grove, Miss. As the readers of our ADVOCATE know, Dry Grove was placed on this circuit as an appointment at our last Annual Conference. Since my arrival here I have undertaken the work in good faith; looked up every Methodist in reach of the place, besides visiting others regardless of religious inclinations. At my first appointment I was greeted with an appreciative audience, who expressed themselves as delighted with having regular preaching this year. In March I suggested my desire to hold an 'all-day' meeting in April, if they were so disposed, which, it seems, met with universal approval. So yesterday, when I arrived, I was pleased to find a large congregation gathered at the Episcopal Church, which, I must say, was secured for our use by the members of that church voluntarily on their part, for which we are very grateful. After a few songs and opening exercises I delivered an address on the history of Methodism. Afterwards I opened the door of our church, when one gentleman presented himself for membership, and some others, being members, to organize a church. When dismissed we partook of a most sumptuous dinner. At two o'clock P. M. we opened the evening service with singing, participated in by persons ranging from childhood to old age. At the conclusion of the service I again opened the door of our church, when a young lady came forward for membership, and still others, to be among the first to organize a church here, which we accomplished with six members, two others as candidates, and others to follow at our next meeting, which will be the fifth Sunday, and Saturday before, in April, it being the time and place for our second quarterly meeting, when we expect greater things of our God. Pray for us."

Rev. Eugene Johnson: "The Pastoral and Theological Society of the Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, convened at Courtland, April 6, 1893. Rev. H. C. Morehead, president, and Rev. B. P. Jaco, secretary, were at their posts of duty. There was a larger attendance of members, and more papers read on the different topics, and a more liberal discussion following the reading, than at any previous meeting, indicating an increase and interest in the society. The following visiting brethren cheered us by their presence and edified us by their speeches: Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent of Millsaps College; Rev. T. J. Newell, president of the Grenada Collegiate Institute; Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporter and Sunday-school agent of the North Mississippi Conference; Revs. J. L. Cooper and J. A. Lee, pastors of the Cumberland Presbyterian and Baptist Churches of Courtland. The spiritual fervor that pervaded the entire proceedings, interspersed by hallelujahs and shouts of praise from hearts overflowing with joy, clearly evinced the presence and power of the Holy Ghost. Penitents presented themselves at the altar for prayer, and three persons sought membership in the Methodist Church. I think I am safe in saying that all the members of the society and many of the visitors were inspired with a desire for, and received an impetus toward, a higher life of practical godliness. Special emphasis was given to the doctrine of sanctification and complete consecration as taught by the Bible and repeated by our church. The society requested Bro. Jaco to furnish the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE his paper on 'The Epworth League' for publication. After the reading of this paper it was resolved that each pastor in the district organize a League in his charge, and employ all his energies to keep it in active operation. After a resolution of thanks to Courtland for her royal hospitality, the society adjourned to meet in Sardis next October."

Rev. T. S. West, Jackson, Miss.: "We are getting along smoothly at Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss. As soon as the people get over their regrets at losing their former pastor, I hope to get some hold upon their affections, that I may turn to their good. By the way, I hear that Carlton believes they have the biggest preacher in the Conference. They are astonished at their good fortune. They regard Bro. Cooper's spell of sickness as providential. I have been down to Hazlehurst, and I find the people there believing the same thing about Bro. Cooper's illness, only that the Providence in the matter was decidedly in their favor. I went on down to Wesson, and found the people there greatly in love with and loyal to our itinerant system, and they are humming the old song, 'It gets better further on.' They are willing now, however, for the system to let up for awhile, and leave things just as they are. Two or three said to me, 'We hated to give up Sister West, but we are mighty well pleased with our new Sunday-school teacher.' The postmaster said, 'We thought we would miss you, but the place is so well supplied that you are not missed at all.' The loss was mainly meat and hair. At Crystal Springs they have a regular gum log. When he settles there is no moving him until the statute of limitation gets the leverage beneath him. They say he sometimes uses the curry-comb, often the brush, and always good feed, and his flock keeps vigorous and growing. At Terry they think they have a young Bishop. The faithful pastor at Pocahontas is on double duty. He spends his odd hours as a student at Millsaps. My young friend at First Church, Jackson, is filling the bill completely. I hear of his visiting around among the very poor that can't attend church often. Well, I suppose I have written enough about Capitol Street Church. I might add I took in three members yesterday on profession. This makes twenty-seven names added to the roll this year. I also baptized three children yesterday."

A HEART'S YEARNING.

"Lord, all my desire is before thee." Psalm xxxviii, 9.

"He shall give thee the desires of thine heart."—Psalm xxxvii, 4.

Master, my heart is out of tune!
A poor, discordant thing:
With chords that do not chime aright,
And notes that falsely ring:
With many a harsh and jarring tone,
And many a broken string.

Master, my will is out of joint,
A feeble, fluttering thing;
It can not reach the azure heights
Of thy sweet will, my King;
But, striving, faileth evermore,
Like bird with broken wing.

Master, my life is out of touch
With thee, the Risen One
A streamlet severed from the sea,
It floweth sadly on,
No tide of resurrection life,
Flooding its waters lone.

Master, I kneel before thy feet,
With empty heart and hand;
Save for the fire of longing, Lord,
Which thou hast lit and fanned,
I scarce have words to tell it thee,
But thou will understand.

To thine own golden key-note, Lord,
Tune thou this heart of mine!
And shape my will's poor wavering flight,
Till it be one with thine,
And dwell within me till I reach
The Father's house divine.

"A Pure Church."

"A Pure Church" is the title of an article by Rev. R. J. Jones recently published in the ADVOCATE, in which he seems to lose sight of the fact that the question is not what this or that one believes or has to say about joining the church or the enforcement of discipline, but what we, as Methodist preachers, are required and pledged to do in receiving members into the M. E. Church, South, and in enforcing its discipline, and, therefore, no wonder that in his mightiest effort to discount the obligations of our preachers, he has involved himself in an inextricable predicament. Listen to his own words in speaking of him who enforces discipline: "He may guard, with sacred care and fiery zeal, the rules of the church, and with his sword cut off the rebellious hand laid upon them. This would rid the church of the 'publicans and harlots,' the openly wicked, but the horde of 'Pharisees and hypocrites,' if they be in the church, would remain. Christ gave preference to the former, and recognized them as being much nearer the kingdom of heaven. There is but little hope from this of a pure church; and if the necessity of a pure church is as great and far-reaching as some seem to think and urge, and this prescription is the only means of obtaining it, then we can only say, 'Be merciful to us sinners.'"

In this declaration of his he classes himself with the "publicans and harlots," for he says that the enforcement of discipline would rid the church of them, "the openly wicked," and then adds that if this be the only means of obtaining a pure church, "then we can only say, 'Be merciful to us sinners.'" Be merciful to what sinners? The "publicans and harlots, the openly wicked," so he himself says; and is it not plain enough that he classes himself among them when he says, "Be merciful to us sinners?" It is, and no wonder he is opposed to enforcement of discipline since, in his judgment, his class only would most likely suffer severance from the church.

Now, let us see what we Methodist preachers have pledged ourselves to do. Before we were admitted into the Conference we were asked, "Will you especially observe the following directions?" (Discipline, page 91) and among the many directions given is, "And do not mend our rules, but keep them; not for wrath, but for conscience sake," and we promised that we would observe this direction.

Now, let us see what our rule for taking persons into our church is. Discipline, page 124, the following question is asked, "How shall members be received into the church?" "Ans. 1. When persons offer themselves for church membership, let the preacher in charge inquire into their spiritual condition, and receive them into the church when they have given satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins, and also of genuineness of their faith and of their willingness to keep the rules of the church." "Ans. 2. When satisfied on these points, let the minister bring the candidates before the congregation, whenever practicable, and receive them according to the prescribed form." "The prescribed form" is Discipline, page 271, Section 4, which we need not quote.

Having noticed our rule concerning the reception of members into our church, let us now notice some of the rules concerning them after they are members. Discipline, page 104, paragraph 281: "But in case of neglect of duties of any kind, imprudent conduct, indulging sinful tempers or words, or disobedience to the order and discipline of the church: First, let private reproof be given by a preacher or leader; and if there be an acknowledgment of the fault and promise of amendment, the person may be borne with; otherwise, the preacher must take with him two or three faithful friends, who shall labor to bring the offender to proper repentance; but if he will not hear them, and there be no sign of amendment, the offender must be dealt with as in case of immorality." Discipline, page 161, paragraph 276: "When a member of the church is under report of immorality, or accused thereof in writing signed by a member of our church, the preacher in charge shall appoint a committee of three discreet members, who shall investigate the report or accusation. If, upon investigation, they judge a trial necessary, they shall see that a bill of charges and specifications is prepared, and appoint a member of the committee, or some other member of the church, to prosecute the case." Paragraph 277: "Upon the presentation of such bill of charges the preacher shall appoint a committee of not less than five, nor more than thirteen, before whom the accused shall be duly cited to appear, who shall have full power to try the case; and if the accused be found guilty by a majority of the committee, let the preacher declare him suspended or expelled. Nevertheless, the preacher may, at his discretion, bring the case before the whole church for trial."

Now, let those who oppose doing what they have promised to do state their reasons, if they choose to do so, and let them do what they can for a change in matters; but let them be sure to avoid trying to put those who are trying to do what they have promised in a false light before the people.

Christian Education.

Christian education is, of necessity, threefold in its nature, having for its object the development of man in his entirety—body, mind, and heart. This is one of the many beautiful characteristics of our holy religion—it undertakes to save the whole man. I know of no other religious system that attempts so much. All others than the Christian religion are defective in that they develop certain faculties to abnormal proportions, leaving others of equal importance to perish and die. The Christian religion calls nothing little that God has made. Wherever it discovers a trace of his creative presence it begins at once to dig, expecting to find something valuable just beneath the surface. This expectation has never been disappointed. God delights to honor those who manifest an interest in his handiwork. Every leaf turned in the volume of research reveals some new and beautiful fact. There is no other volume so interesting. When the thoughtful mind once takes it up, it never puts it down. I was about to say until it is finished; but, blessed thought! its pages are not numbered. They are like the innumerable hosts of the redeemed—more than any can number. We shall, doubtless, travel along this line of discovery through the unnumbered ages yet to run. At any rate, this is the purpose of Christian education—to save man from the things which destroy him, and to the things which bless him; to discover to him what he really is and what he may be, what he may know and do; to turn his face Godward, heavenward, and gloryward; to give him a holy impetus in that direction, teaching him that every discovery he may ever make will be rich in quantity, precious in quality, and beautiful in finish.

Christian education has another object in view—that of eliminating every factor of selfishness from the human heart. It acknowledges the fatherhood of God; it recognizes the brotherhood of man. On its calendar is a place for the holy Sabbath; in its sanctuary a receptacle for the Word of God.

Christian education differs from secular education in that it clings to the entire man for Christ's sake, insisting on the development of every God-given faculty belonging to him for his own dear sake, while secular education insists on developing only such faculties of body and mind as may be used, cat's-paw-like, in dragging money from the hot embers of commerce. She cares nothing whatever for the man as such, just so he knows how to run her business. If he understands telegraphy, typewriting, shorthand, and the like, he is in demand. If she insist on sobriety, it is in the interest of her business, and not the man. That a thorough business education is of incalculable value no thoughtful mind will deny; but that the making of a man should stop here—the very thought is pitiable enough, and yet it must be extensively and favorably entertained, judging from the character of an alarming per cent. of the business men in this commonwealth; men of princely carriage, with brilliant minds—skilled accountants—whose morals are below the level of the common herd of mankind; giants in business, pigmies in morals. This fact is as sad as it is true, the lives of the men themselves being witnesses. To save such men from such one-sided development and its consequent evils is a divine mission. Such is the purpose and such the mission of Christian education.

Who will take the lead in this soul-saving and man-saving process of education? The State could not if it would, for the simple reason that too many of her representatives stand themselves directly in need of just such development. The blind can not lead the blind. If she could, it would not be the best course to follow, for the reason that the church herself needs the reflex effect for good which such a work always produces. Large donations from single individuals can not maintain a regular system of Christian education, because there is too much uncertainty about it with reference to amount, time, and direction.

Again, if such donations tend to encourage the church at large to depend on such a course, the effect must be to dwarf the spirit of liberality among the masses.

Finally, if the church would encourage Christian education, she must insist on the individual membership taking an active part in the building and maintaining of such schools as can be trusted to develop and save the students in toto; clinging to and cultivating all that God has given them for the sake of the students themselves, and not simply the business they may follow.

R. M. EVANS.

"Is the Devil Black?"

In the ADVOCATES of March 23 and 30, Dr. Julien C. Brown, under the caption, "Is the Devil Black?" attempts to wipe out the foul blot which history has left upon the name of Judas Iscariot. The Doctor bases the eloquent defense which he makes for his client upon the ground that behind the deed there was a motive which if not entirely blameless was, at least, excusable.

Surely no one with the spirit of him who mingled with his agonizing groans upon the cross the prayer, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," could object to the mantle of charity being thrown over the hideous moral deformity of his betrayer. But it seems to us that the Doctor has endeavored to tear in shreds one of the purest characters of sacred history, and out of these shreds has endeavored to manufacture such a mantle for Judas. While he claims to be the only defendant that Judas has found during the eighteen and a half centuries which have elapsed since the night of the betrayal of the world's Redeemer, he seems to us to occupy the unenviable position of being the first Christian writer who ever cast a slur upon the spotless character of him who was nearest his Lord; one of the trio selected to tread with him the transfiguring heights of Hermon and the Gethsemanean vales of grief, and who was the honored recipient of the apocalyptic vision on the Isle of Patmos. When we read in the Doctor's first article the statement, "If during (referring to Judas' treasurership) all that time there was any peculation, any misuse, embezzling or squandering of their funds, no mention is anywhere made of it. Neither is it intimated at any time that any of them suspected him of either dishonesty or avarice." It seemed to us to clash directly with inspiration. We waited anxiously for the second article to see how he would reconcile these words with John xii, 6. We were not disappointed, for in the Doctor's second article we find a passage which we suppose he intends as explanatory of his seemingly plain contradiction of Scripture in the above quotation:

Here it is: "A loving, but ambitious mother was sent, perhaps at the suggestion of her sons, James and John, to ask of Christ that one might be exalted to his right and the other to his left hand in the new kingdom. Observe here—it was this same John who later called Judas a thief, and it was he and his brother who proposed to call down fire from heaven to consume the inhabitants of two Samaritan villages. If Judas was ever possessed of so diabolical spirit as that, no mention is made of it, and we are tempted to believe him a better man than the one who so violently charged him with dishonesty."

We do not know what theory of inspiration the Doctor holds. We would indeed like to know what theory he can consistently hold with such sentiments as are expressed in the above. Surely it can not be the theory of Paul and Peter as found in II. Tim. iii, 16, 17, and II. Peter i, 21.

Being a tyro in theology, we would ask what kind of "biblical criticism" is this? We are sadly perplexed. Here is a plain statement of a book which we have been taught to believe as written under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, and here is a doctor of divinity of the nineteenth century pronouncing this statement as a violent charge of dishonesty, and saying that he is tempted to believe the accused a better man than the accuser. We believe the tendency of this kind of interpretation of Scripture to be dangerous in the extreme. When we lower the writings of this evangelist to the plane of uninspired history, and begin to look for the personal prejudice which may lie back of his statements of fact with reference to character, we are taking a liberty which smacks of the irreverence of infidelity.

When the Methodist student of theology turns from Wesley, Clarke, Watson, Raitton, and other standard theologians of our church, to the emanations of the Methodist press of to-day, he finds many strange things. But we have ceased to be surprised, and hold an attitude something like that of a parrot which we heard of when a boy.

"Poll" was sitting in an upper room where a lot of gentlemen were spending a social evening with their cigars. Ever and anon when a story was finished some one was heard to say, "And what comes next?" It chanced that under the room where they were there was a magazine of gunpowder. Late in the evening a lighted match found its way through a crevice in the floor to the powder below. An explosion ensued. Later the parrot was seen at some distance perched on a fence minus his feathers and black with powder, croaking, "What comes next?"

New Orleans Central W. C. T. U.

All know something of the temperance work that the women of this country are doing, and of the great temperance temple in Chicago to which the women of the world have contributed. No small sum has been raised through the medium of mite-boxes, which have been distributed in the different unions, and in which each woman is supposed to drop a penny each day for a year.

Not to be behind, we, of the New Orleans Central W. C. T. U., sent for mite-boxes a year ago and gave them to whoever felt like giving her mite in that way. The first box was filled and sent to Chicago in July by Mrs. O'Dowd, a lady seventy-three years of age, and an earnest temperance worker so far as her age and strength will permit. A few weeks later Mrs. Dalton had her mite of three dollars and sixty-five cents ready for the temple. Mrs. Dalton is the mother of our excellent president, Mrs. Zahle. She was a member of the first organization of the W. C. T. U. in the city about eighteen years ago. She is now an aged lady, and has been blind for years, but says she "can still work for temperance."

On last Thursday evening we had a delightful entertainment and opening of the mite-boxes at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Zahle. As only a part of the boxes were brought in, we realized but about one-half of what we had hoped for, having promised ourselves to give one hundred dollars. We have now to our credit fifty-four dollars. Mrs. Dalton had her second mite-box more than full, both of her contributions amounting to eight dollars and ninety cents. Mrs. J. N. Mackie also brought her second box.

If it will afford any of our friends pleasure to make us small donations, they will be as gladly received.

We wish all our members and friends could have enjoyed Thursday evening with us. Our thanks are due, not only to Mr. and Mrs. Zahle for a very pleasant time, but to Miss Zahle, Miss Helen Rickey and Mr. and Mrs. Allen for delightful music, and to Miss Baer for charming recitations, and to the ladies for the refreshments to which was given ample evidence of their excellence.

WHITE RIBBON.

"Facilis Descensus Averni: Sed Revocare—"

Dr. Stuckenberg, in the European department of the Homiletic Review, for January, 1892, as quoted in the Review of Reviews for March, 1892, page 224, says the influence of the Roman Catholic Church "outside of its own borders is chiefly spent in promoting Romanizing tendencies in Protestant Churches;" and that "the growth of Catholicism has been political and social rather than numerical;" and that "the Jesuits have got a controlling hand over the church, and Jesuitism is now the dominant factor."

In 1892 the Nashville Christian Advocate contained the following item: "Ritualistic practices in the Church of England seem on the increase. The following statistics show the advance since 1890: 'In that year the names of 3,138 churches were given in which the "Eastward Position" was adopted. This year the number is 3,918. Ten years since it was only 1,662. In 1890 "Altar Lights" were burned in 1,402 churches; in 1892 the number has risen to 2,048. Popish vestments were two years since worn in 707 churches; this year in 1,029. In 1890 incense was burnt in 135 churches; this year the number is 177. Ten years ago it was nine.'"

In 1892 Dr. I. G. John, corresponding secretary of the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, of his own notion and without authority, scattered "Easter programs" for church and Sunday-school broadcast over the land and exhorted our people to su "Easter" observance and a missionary collection. In 1893 this same Dr. John and a few others of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, at the request of their wives, attempted to authorize the Woman's Board of Missions to set apart the so-called "Easter" as "Woman's Day;" and the Rev. E. R. Hendrix, D. D., LL.D., a Bishop in the M. E. Church, South, without warrant of law or the shadow of right under our Book of Discipline, sends to every preacher throughout our connection a circular calling upon them to observe "Easter" and take up a collection for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. The church papers, including even the Sunday-school Visitor, join in the laudation of "Easter;" and the Woman's Missionary Advocate, for April, 1893, pages 307-310, contains a pathetic little story in advocacy not only of "Easter," but also of Lent! Now for the "Popish Vestments," and the "Right-Reverends," the "Altar Lights" and the "Eastward Position," the "Auricular Confession" and "Absolution!" Let us be genuine Romanists and not Methodist monkeys.

And we are warned against attempting to purify the church by raising the standard of membership, lest our numbers should not increase; or by enforcing the laws of the church against any offenders at all, because some hypocrites are too sharp to be caught, ministerial vows to the contrary notwithstanding. And we are told the true church can not be contaminated, no matter how many scoundrels may be enrolled in the membership of the visible church! What a fool Martin Luther was! and what a terrible blunder—worse than a crime—was the Protestant Reformation!

And the preacher who goes gunning must not load his gun with small shot—just blank cartridges! make faces and turn somersaults according to ancient Chinese military tactics! Be pathetic and æsthetic. Fill the houses of worship with flowers—thornless roses—and the church registers with the names of people who know nothing about religion and care less, who make vows only to trample them under foot, and commit perjury before God and glory in their infamy. Look on, O ye ministers of God! but lift neither voice nor hand to turn the tide. Propbesy smooth things. Part your hair in the middle, perfume your handkerchiefs and the paper on which your little sermonette is written with perfumed ink. Let the æsthetically disposed women adorn the churches with garlands of flowers and caged canary birds (a la Tuscaloosa); wind up your Sunday-school entertainments with a dance; and let "periodical piety" atone for habitual impiety; "but know thou that for all these things God will bring thee judgment." (Ecc. xi, 9)

T. L. MELLEN.

"Is the Devil Black?"

I have read with much interest two articles with the above heading from the pen of Dr. Julien C. Brown in two recent numbers of the ADVOCATE. I was greatly pleased with the first article, also with the last, except a few lines in regard to the Apostle John, which I here quote, viz.: "Observe here—it was this same John who later called Judas a thief, and it was he and his brother who prepared to call down fire from heaven to consume the inhabitants of two Samaritan villages. If Judas was ever possessed of so diabolical a spirit as that, no mention is made of it, and we are tempted to believe him a better man than the one who so violently charged him with dishonesty." I must say that I was pained and shocked to read such statements from the pen of a minister of the gospel. It seems to me that the Reverend Doctor, in his zeal and sympathy for Judas, has done great injustice to the "beloved disciple."

As I am neither a theologian nor skilled in argument, I will merely state in the form of questions what seems to me serious objections to the above quotation, hoping that the learned author, or some one else who is competent, will enlighten my ignorance and set me right if I am wrong.

Did not my Savior, who knew the most secret thoughts and feelings of every heart, know which was the better man, John or Judas? Did he not manifest special affection for, and show special favor to the former? Is it probable he would have done so if John had been "possessed of a diabolical spirit" and capable of "bearing false witness" against his brother disciple, as the Reverend Doctor states he was? Rather, was it not his affection and mistaken zeal for his Master which prompted the question, "Lord, will thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them, even as Elias did?" This question being called forth by these Samaritans refusing their hospitality and denying Jesus and his followers the privilege of stopping in their villages, "because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem."

In the next place, either Judas was a thief or else John was a liar. For my part, I can not accept the latter proposition, which would logically follow a denial of the former. Only think of the consequences of such an admission. For if John could not only "bear false witness" against his brother disciple, but also deliberately incorporate the falsehood into his gospel narrative, would any of [illegible] narrative be entitled to our respect [illegible] confidence? And with the loss [illegible] John's gospel the church and [illegible] world would lose some of the most [illegible] comforting as well as most beautiful chapters in the Holy Writ.

I must think that the lines quoted were written without reflection [illegible] the results to which such teaching would lead.

I hope that for the sake of the young and the weak who read the ADVOCATE the Reverend Doctor will go over the ground again and reconsider his position that Judas was a better man than John.

Discipline at Millsaps College.

Something was published some time since about a thievish college boy in Jackson, Miss. That boy is now in jail. He is called a kleptomaniac, but was not a student at Millsaps, and if he had been, how could the authorities there be in any way responsible for the young man's actions. Now, the boys at Millsaps are good boys, and if you don't believe me, just ask what the parents and guardians of these boys wrote about them when they sent them there, and they ought to know their own boys.

Now, I wrote to the hostess where my boys were to board that they were good boys. All other parents that did not do the same thing will please hold up their hands. I see no hands up. Now, I wrote that one of my boys might be a little mischievous and the other a little some other way, but nevertheless good boys. And notwithstanding all this, the impression that my boys make on others will differ a little from the impression they make on me. So, then, they must have wedged into Millsaps College some boys that some folks might think were bad boys. But I am inclined to think it is not a very healthy place for a bad boy if his badness gets to the ears of the faculty. Yet I don't believe if your boy is a thief that Millsaps College will necessarily make him honest, nor if he is honest, will it make him a rogue. While the discipline is good at Millsaps, there are some things they can't do. I don't know of any college where the discipline is better than at Millsaps, or where the faculty is making more honest effort to improve their boys. If I had any complaint at all to make, I would say they were too exacting on my boys; but I have no complaint to make. I have three boys at Millsaps College, and I had rather they were there than anywhere in the world. And between you and I and the post, I am determined to believe myself the very best I can at Capitol Street Chapel, for I want to stay there four years, so as to keep my boys at Millsaps.

Where Are We To-day?

Some years ago the Church of Rome called a council to decide the question whether or not the Pope was infallible! Would it not now be equally in order for the Protestant Church to call a council to decide whether we believe the Bible or not? Do we not like we believe it is the Word of God and that we are accountable to Him for the observance of its precepts?

If one preacher carries around with him an empty gun to make a man believe he would shoot him with it, or if another one breaks a man's jaw-bone with a stick, is it to be wondered at that "two good members of the Methodist Church" (the Delta says) fought a duel the other day? And didn't many members of all churches attend a horse race the other day, and bet money too? What does the world do but the church don't indulge in or connive at instead of standing, Gibraltar like, against everything that is wrong? Then in what do they differ?—except that one pretends to do what neither does, as a whole—comply with the positive commandments of the Almighty given us in the Bible.

It is true that individuals in both the church and in the world also do very commendably. But how little the average member of the church is distinguished from that of the world! And what more influence for good does he exert? Does he not, on the contrary, exert more for evil, as much more is expected of him, when he falls so much further short of it? Can the church afford to thus compromise its intended influence for good in the world? Will it not fail of its high mission on earth in this way? God forbid that the salt of the earth shall lose its savor, and be cast out to be trodden under foot of men!

Where are we drifting to? and how fast at that! Is it not high time to cast a bait somewhere in this pell-mell rush of inconsistency among both preachers and laymen?

Now, when it be frankly stated [illegible] personal friends are among those [illegible] luded to, it is hoped that the motive which prompt these remarks will be properly appreciated. The wise man said long ago: "Tranquil are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful." "What shall we do to be saved?"

INTRODUCTORY.

-day we approach the end of this wonder- ook. We have seen the patience of Job, have learned that the Lord is very pitiful ol tender mercy. The problem of sin and ring has not been solved, but God's wis- and goodness have been vindicated, and ay trust in him, assured that some time, ewhere, the veil will be taken away and hall know even as we are known. The esson gave us Job's appeal to God, with its mingled confidence and perplexing doubt. an not understand how it is that the ed so often go unpunished, and thinks must be some secret judgment of the un- seen. Then Bildad answers, showing the rity of man before God, and Job replies, king his accusers, protesting his inno- e, and bewailing his condition. After this hree friends are silent. They have done utmost, their theories have been spurned, exhortations have been unavailing, and self-righteous men still maintains his od. At this point a new character enters ylander, a young man who has listened he long debate until his heart burned in him—breaks in upon them. He is in- ant at the self-sufficiency of Job, and is y with the friends, who are answered, but convinced; silenced, but still condemn. discourse of Elihu, given in chapters -xxxvii, is of great wisdom and beauty. speaker is modest in demeanor, but honest fearless in the conduct of his argument. irst reproves Job's confidence in his perfect cence, and then proceeds to discuss the tion of sinful men to God, to prove that is righteous, to declare that piety is pro- ive of happiness to men, to exhibit the be- olent activities of God, and to vindicate the ne justice by showing that through suffer- God designs to chasten and purify his chil- n. During the latter part of his speech he s a vivid description of the approach and of a storm, which seems suddenly to have e. At the conclusion of Elihu's speech speaks out of the whirlwind, addressing words to Job; and he who had been filled self-sufficiency when talking to his friends confesses his sins and repents in dust and e. The book closes with God's vindica- of Job, his censure of the three friends, a description of Job's restoration to dig- , honor and prosperity.

EXPLANATORY.

1.—JOB'S CONFESSION.

Ver. 1. "Job answered the Lord and d." Many times had "Job an- red," but never in the spirit that w possessed him—a spirit of humili- , repentance and confession.

Ver. 2. "I know that thou canst do rything." Job had just listened to ovah's description of his power and, ercome by a sense of divine majesty, declares his firm persuasion of the nipotence of God. "And that no ught can be withholden from thee." e infinite wisdom of God, as well as infinite power, is shown in his cre- ve acts. This was not a new truth Job, but realized as never before. had been theoretically orthodox be- e, now he is practically so.

Ver. 3. "Who is this that hideth nsel without knowledge?" This is ovah's question asked in chapter 38, se 2, and repeated here by Job with mble confession. I am the foolish n. I confess my sin and am ashamed. have uttered that I understand not; ngs too wonderful for me." In my ndness and self-confidence I have arged thee with injustice and indif- ence, and complained that my afflic- ns were unmerited. However guilty ers may have been of this sin. Job's nscience condemns him, and his st ned and humble heart makes neet confession.

Ver. 4. "Hear, I beseech thee, and will speak." In very humble and missive spirit these words are oken. Job had said (xxiii, 4) that if could come before God's seat, he uld fill his mouth with arguments, would order his cause before him. w he only wishes to make his con- sion, and "to sit docile at the feet of Almighty. True contrition is al- ys attended with a teachable dispo- lon." (Burr.) Matthew Henry says this verse: "I desire to speak not as int ff, nor as defendant, but as a mble petitioner."

Ver. 5. "I have heard of thee by the aring of the ear, but now my eye th thee." He thought he had known d before; he had known him to be nite in wisdom, power and right- ueness; he had learned of him as the ator of the stars above him, and e earth under his feet, and had heard his wonderful works among the ildren of men; but never before as w had such an overpowering reali- tion of his majesty and glory come on him. We are not, of course, to derstand that Job literally saw God, l that the simple manifestation of presence so operated upon the ickened spiritual sense of his serv- t as to convey more awful im- pressions of his infinite perfections than Job had felt before.

Ver. 6. "Wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." Under such a sense of divine majesty, the thought of his own wickedness and folly prostrates him in the dust. The same feelings overwhelm Isaiah when he sees the vision of the Lord; Peter when he beholds the divine power of Jesus; and John in his apocalyptic vision. How inconceivably overpowering must be the unclouded revelation of Jehovah's glory!

II.—RESTORATION.

Ver. 7. "After the Lord had spoken these words unto Job, the Lord said to Eliphaz, the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee and against thy two friends." Let us imagine the three friends, impressed indeed by the presence of God, but still capable of contemplating with complacency the humble confession of Job. At last the stubborn spirit is bowed and Job confesses what they, all the while, had claimed. But they are soon to learn that penitent Job is commended while their self-conscious wisdom is rebuked. "For ye have not spoken of me (or unto me) the thing that is right." The rebuke is rather for their self-righteousness than the folly of their theories, and Job is commended not so much for his superior wisdom as for his humility of heart.

Ver. 8. "Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks and seven rams," etc. The perfect number, seven, indicates the complete atonement, and the command to go to Job as their intercessor is the strongest possible endorsement of his righteousness. Their self-complacency gives place to wonder, and their wonder to a realization of the great truth that the man whom they had thought to be suffering under the avenging stroke of God was a righteous man, and that they, his accusers, had need of his intercessory prayers. The sacrifice was the visible confession of their sin and Job, their high priest. The words, "my servant Job," are full of grace and tenderness. They take us back to the opening chapters of the book where God vouched for the righteousness of Job, and imply God's claim that he is his perfect servant still.

Ver. 9. "So Eliphaz . . . and Bildad . . . and Zophar . . . went, and did according as the Lord commanded them: and the Lord accepted Job." This verse gives us the picture of their confession and forgiveness and of Job praying for his accusers. Any good man would have done as Job did, but only a good man would.

Ver. 10. "And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends, and the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before." "Job's sufferings had been as of one exiled from God, and home and friends. They were bitter as of a captive in a strange land, under a hard master." (Pelouhet's Notes.) His restoration was like the captive's return. It is striking and surely not without significance that Job's deliverance is completed at the very moment in which he forgives those who have done him wrong, and prays for them. The increased prosperity with which God blessed his afflicted servant is no warrant for the belief that God will restore the broken fortunes of his chastised and sorrowing children. But the "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" is as sure as the throne of the Almighty.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Many a truth has been held for years and its power never felt, and when at last the clearer vision comes we think we have learned something new, when, in fact, we have simply realized the fullness of a long-known truth. Many a man believes no more after his conversion than he did before. (Verse 2.)

2. One moment of personal experience is worth more than a lifetime of theory. (Verse 5.)

3. A manifestation of the divine character humbles the righteous in the dust. What must be its effects upon the wicked! (Verse 6.)

4. A contrite heart is better in God's sight than a clear head. (Verse 7.)

5. The gracious God suggests to the wicked a way by which to escape his anger. (Verse 8.)

6. No man ever lost anything by serving God. (Verse 10.)

Queen Anne of Austria once said to Cardinal Richelieu, "My Lord Cardinal, God does not pay at the end of every week; but at the end he pays."

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

THE PREACHER'S COMPLETE HOMILETIC COMMENTARY ON THE OLD TESTAMENT. (With Critical and Exegetical Notes.) By Twenty Distinguished Homilists. Vol. II., Exodus. By Rev. J. S. Exell, M. A. Cloth, 8vo, 516 pp. $3. New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company.

This is the second volume of an extensive work of twenty volumes on the Old Testament, printed from imported plates obtained from the publishers in London, where the entire work has been issued after years of preparation. As we have already mentioned, in this great Commentary, by various authors, is found a sermon outline or homiletic suggestion on every paragraph or verse of the Old Testament that can be turned to use in the preparation of a sermon.

Abundant choice selections of illustration, from many eminent sources other than the authors of the volumes, are also given.

Except in some introductory, critical, and explanatory notes, preceding each chapter, no foreign words, such as Hebrew or Greek, are used.

The type is large and clear, and the books convenient to handle.

Thousands of American clergymen have already subscribed for the entire series (20 volumes and index) of this vast Commentary, which has called forth needs of praise from representative preachers of all denominations.

A RAMBLE AMONG SURNAMES. By Rev. J. W. Daniel. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 80 cents.

This little book evidences a good deal of research and study. The study of words is an interesting study, but the study of names is much more interesting. To know the origin and signification of names is a natural desire, and in this little volume this desire is fully gratified.

INDUCTIVE STUDIES IN THE MINOR PROPHETS. By W. W. White, Ph.D. Young Men's Era Publishing Company, Chicago, Ill. Cloth, 50 cents.

We do not think the ordinary reader will get much out of this book, and the student of the Bible will hardly be helped at all.

Deaf for a Year
Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh being a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had physicians, but no improvement was apparent. I could distinguish no sound. I was intending putting myself under the care of a specialist, when some one suggested that Hood's Sarsaparilla might do me some good. I began taking it without the expectation of any lasting help. To my surprise and great joy I found when I had taken three bottles that my hearing was returning. I kept on till I had taken three more. It is now over a year and I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and recommend

Published quarterly. Each number has 216 beautifully printed pages on the best book paper, making a volume of more than 800 pages for the year. Our QUARTERLY is not commended by the ablest of our clergy and laity only, but it is mentioned with the highest respect by the editors of the best periodical literature throughout our country and abroad. It is a needed medium for the discussion of subjects too large for adequate treatment in the columns of our weekly papers. It should be unanimously supported by our preachers, and widely distributed among the thoughtful of our laity. The subscription price of the QUARTERLY is $2. Your subscription is solicited.

New Orleans District Conference.

This body of ministers and laymen convened in Rayne Memorial Chapel, Thursday of last week, at 10:30 A. M. All the pastors, with two exceptions, and a good number of lay delegates answered to their names at the opening of the session. The Conference dispensed with all committees, excepting a Committee on Public Worship and a Committee on Quarterly Conference Records. All the different phases of church work and life were carefully looked into and discussed as the pastors gave in the reports of the condition of their charges. From these reports we were able to gather some very encouraging signs of promise. In respect to the spiritual condition of the churches the reports show a good advance over previous years. The revival spirit has come down upon many congregations and is moving out in quickening power among the people. There have been "great searchings of hearts," and sinners in many places have come to Christ, and Christians have cried mightily for the fullness of the great salvation, and in answer have been revived in love and power. It seems to us that the prospects for a deep and wide-spread revival of religion in our district were never so promising as today.

In the matter of Sunday-school work, our people are diligent and active and faithful. Superintendents and teachers, in hearty co operation with the pastors, are using all lawful endeavors, not only to teach the Word of God, but to fit themselves for better teaching of that Word, so that the young people may be saved through that Word. We have many mission schools which are doing excellent service in the outlying districts. This mission work is the salvation of many a church.

The reports showed that the condition of our houses of worship is, for the most part, very good. There is very little debt on any of them. One handsome building has been dedicated this year, and several have been quite recently repaired and repainted and frescoed. We need now in this city two or three neat chapels to be built this year. Where are the God-loving men and women who will come forward with the money to start these new enterprises? They can find the presiding elder of the district at 112 Camp street, and he will be glad to confer with them on this vital point in the interest of the future Methodism of this city.

The report of the Seashore Camp Ground Association shows the affairs of that body in good condition, and the same Board of Trustees, with one exception, was reappointed.

During the session Rev. J. W. McLaurin gave the Conference an interesting talk on the Bible cause, and Dr. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College, represented that venerable institution as doing excellent and valuable work in the education of our young men. While there are not so many students attending as formerly, there are more in the college classes, and the training they are receiving is not inferior to that which any college gives.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, W. H. N. Magruder, E. P. Mackie and J. H. Keller.

The next session of the Conference will be held in Baton Rouge. Bishop Keener presided during part of one session of the Conference.

Ignorance and Presumption Extraordinary.

A short while ago we took occasion to call the attention of our readers to the marvelous ignorance of the police of this city on the subject of gambling-houses. The present Grand Jury has been investigating that dense ignorance. It has found out "from numerous and sundry witnesses that more than a dozen prominent gambling-houses are run almost every day and night in the first and third police precincts, right under the eyes of the police of said precincts." The jury says these facts are known to the frequenters of such resorts and to the youths of the city and to strangers. And yet in face of these well-known facts, "with the exception of the Chief of Police, each and every police official examined by us testified that they did not know of the existence of a single gambling-house in their respective districts." This is a display of most extraordinary ignorance.

Now for the presumption. The Chief of Police knew of the existence of these gambling-places, and when the Grand Jury asked why they were not suppressed he gave as reasons: First, it has not been customary to suppress them. Second, he considers gambling a minor offense, and is opposed to raids for fear some innocent man may be caught. For a police officer to interpret an offense instead of executing a plain law against said offense is presumption of a most extraordinary kind, and if such action is to be condoned, woe be unto the law.

The Grand Jury, determined to push this matter, called the Police Board and inquired why their officers had not executed the law, and the answer was, that public sentiment does not sustain them in enforcing it, and the police force was too small to enable them to do so. This is more than extraordinary when we consider that the principal daily papers—supposed to voice public sentiment—has been almost a unit in favor of the enforcement of the particular statute against gambling. Here is a peculiar state of affairs which will only be resolved out of its peculiarity by the people themselves. This report of the present Grand Jury is the last batch of cumulative evidence which says to the people of this city that neither the police officers, nor the Police Board, nor the mayor, who is the head of both, intend to do anything for the suppression of gambling. The people must now take the matter in their own hands. They are above all officers and are the court of final resort. What will they do?

Think on This.

The gravest question of the ago is the education of the young. This question touches every interest of the country. It is moulding the destiny of the State. It is shaping the career of the Church. It has arrested the deepest attention of the lawmakers of the land and is engaging the hearts of the leaders in Zion. The fact that the young people will soon take the place and acquire the rights and incur the obligations of the older people invests the subject of education with an importance that is supreme. The fact that twenty-five years from this date this country will be ruled—both in the civil and religious spheres—by those who now are in their boyhood and girlhood, is a fact upon which every man and woman should ponder deeply. The significance of the fact that the formation of the characters of the future citizens and rulers is largely in the hands of the educators can not be too strongly emphasized. Back of these solemn facts, and imparting to them much of their meaning and giving to them their general trend, is the responsibility of parents and guardians. What a mighty power is lodged in their hands! What an influence they may exert upon the world through a steady and persistent discharge of duty!

The supreme importance of this subject is further revealed in the fact that education has to do with mind. Mind is the governing force in this world. Government that is wise and kind and strong must be by trained intellects, by sensibilities that are in touch with real conditions, and by powerful wills. It is only during the period of youth that minds can be educated to wisdom and kindness and strength.

Another point which shows the importance of this subject is its moral aspects. In this life it is impossible to ignore moral questions. They force their way everywhere. The general mind recognizes a distinction between right and wrong. Moral excellence and moral turpitude, like Gerizim with its blessings and Ebal with its curses, are, by the mind of every man, set over against each other. Character depends largely upon the influence these two exert upon the young, and the weal or woe of State and Church grows out of that influence.

Think on these things, ye parents and guardians of the future rulers and citizens of this great and growing country.

The Sunday-School Convention.

The seventh annual meeting of the Louisiana State Sunday-school Association was held in the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church, in this city, last week. The association is composed of Sunday-school workers from all the evangelical denominations operating in the State. The attendance of delegates was fairly good, representing the Sunday-school interests in various parts of our commonwealth. The enthusiasm engendered by the workings of this association seems to be continually rising, and, as a consequence, its influence for good is spreading out in many directions. There is no more important line of Christian work than the line on which this association is putting forth its efforts.

The work of this session was somewhat broader than formerly, and was entered upon and carried forward with commendable zeal and unity of purpose by the delegates. The essays read and the addresses made on the different phases of Sunday-school work all exhibited painstaking study and an earnest desire to contribute something toward the development of a more general interest in the moral and spiritual growth of the young people of our State. We doubt not many of our Sunday-school workers received and will profit by the lessons taught and the suggestions given by the essayists and speakers, and that the profit will be gladly passed on to their Sunday-school scholars when they reach again their own special fields of labor. We congratulate President Browne and his co-adjutors upon the great success of this session of their association.

The next annual meeting will be held in Shreveport.

Sunday-School Anniversary.

The forty-sixth anniversary of the New Orleans Sunday-school Union of the M. E. Church, South, was held in Carondelet Street Church last Sunday afternoon. We have sixteen schools in active and successful operation, and all were well represented in the anniversary meeting, the old church being well filled with children and teachers. Bro. E. P. Mackie, the president of the Union, had prepared a good program of addresses and songs, which was carried out in one hour and a quarter. Bishop Keener opened the exercises with prayer. Rev. J. M. Henry gave an interesting and instructive and religious address on "The Relation of the Sunday-school to the Church." It was listened to with great attention by the audience. Rev. F. N. Parker spoke on the "Sunday-school as Related to Mission Work." He gave a clear and ringing speech in favor of mission work by the Sunday-school, and showed that the Sunday-school is the true place to plant the missionary idea and to nurture the missionary impulse. We are satisfied that there will result good in our Sunday-schools from these two addresses. Bishop Keener, in a few words, called attention to the astounding fact that the three Conferences we have now in Mexico are the result of a movement which originated in Carondelet Sunday-school twenty years ago.

The secretary of the Union, David Zable, read an interesting statistical report. There are in our 16 schools 1,988 officers, teachers and scholars, and they contributed last year for general purposes $1,707,61, and for foreign missions, $635 38.

The anniversary was a decided success, for which the church is indebted to President Mackie and his trusty and faithful co-adjutors.

Destruction on the Wing.

The number and severity of the storms occurring last week have attracted much attention. In the West, Northwest, and South these disturbances have abounded to the great destruction of property and considerable loss of life. They seem to come almost without warning, do their work of devastation and are gone before anybody can take a good breath. In our own section they have been exceptionally violent. Mississippi has suffered greatly in the past few weeks, and last week a furious cyclone did its destructive work in Southern Louisiana and Northeast Louisiana. Tensas and Madison parishes suffered much, as also did the parishes of Iberville, St. Mary and Natchitoches.

Some people regard these things as the judgments of God for the wickedness of the land. Whether that be the case or not, we are sure of one thing. That is, the man who loves God and his neighbor as he ought, is prepared for cyclones or anything else. Whether the cyclone crushes out his life or blows away his property he is ready for either. So the best thing for everybody is to get into that condition.

Last week could be called religious week in our city. Besides interesting revival services in the First Baptist and Felicity Street Methodist Churches, there was the State Sunday-school Convention, the Southern Unitarian Conference, Episcopal State Convention, and the New Orleans District Conference of the M. E. Church, South. These various conferences and conventions kept our Christian people quite busy, and we trust have imparted more vigor and deeper spirituality to their daily living.

A New Proposition for Increasing the Endowment of Centenary.

MR. EDITOR: Your stirring editorial on the "Obligations of Wealth," and the strong plea of Dr. Hoss urging the church to "redeem our pledges and remove our reproach," in regard to Christian education, ought to awaken the consciences of many Methodists. Education must continue to be one of the chief interests of our race so long as there are children to educate; and the church must train the minds and hearts of the young or lose her hold upon the world.

Our last General Conference adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That Christian education is one of the greatest instrumentalities that can possibly be employed for the enlightenment, conversion and salvation of the world.

Resolved, That as a church we will do all within our power to rehabilitate, endow and place upon a solid basis the institutions of learning within our bounds, so as to place the facilities for complete Christian education within the reach of our people.

We are glad to know that these are the sentiments of the men who composed that great legislative body, but are sorry to see that the church is slow in putting them into execution. Some single Northern and Western colleges have more added to their endowments in a year than all of our Southern colleges put together. True, there are fewer persons of large possessions in the South than in the North and the West, nevertheless the South is not lacking in ability to endow her colleges. Let us go forward with the work, earnestly, zealously.

The friends of Centenary College have done nobly in raising its endowment to more than seventy-five thousand dollars within the last five years. In this they have succeeded to the gratification of all and beyond the expectation of many. But they must not halt, for a growing college requires an ever-enlarging endowment, and must have it or cease to grow.

My proposition when I accepted the presidency of Centenary was that its endowment should be increased at the rate of $25,000 a year.

I, therefore, now propose to be one of twenty-five, or of any other number, to add $25,000 to the endowment by giving one thousand dollars in cash myself whenever $24,000 shall have been given by other persons. A professorship may be endowed by this sum if parties contributing so prefer. Those whose hearts prompt them to join me in this plan will please write to me at Jackson, La.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

That excellent institution, the Christian Woman's Exchange, has had another successful year. The annual meeting last week revealed the fact of progress on every line, and the outlook for the future is full of promise.

The different departments—House, Lunch, Library and Sales departments—have all been managed with skill and success. These, together with membership fees, donations, cooking-school and lectures, earned for the institution during the past year $4,752.33. The expenditures during the same time were $3,963.76, thus showing the net profits to be $788.56. The institution is now clear of all liabilities with a net capital of $35,861.47. If that is not success, what is?

Important Notice.

Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, president of W. M. S. of North Mississippi Conference, will hold the district meeting for Holly Springs district at Holly Springs, Miss., on April 29 and 30. All visitors and delegates will please send their names at once to the undersigned. A full attendance is greatly desired.

NANNIE B. FANT,
Dist. Sec., Holly Springs District.

On the Wing.

Water Valley lies on the top of numerous hills and spreads itself into the adjoining country. The business part of the city plays "hide-and-seek" with the town creek. Water Valley does not look like a booming town, but like one whose rapid and solid growth outrun surveys and surveyors, until no regularity of outline was possible.

Dr. Price is in charge of our Methodism at this point. He glories in his large choir of trained voices, in his organ, his cornets, violin and bass viol. When my eye scanned his large congregation (the largest I have yet seen) I concluded that the people, too, loved this way of praising God. One of the Bible class told me that they did not think that Bro. Price ought always to be having some one else fill his pulpit. He is in honor among these people. Our endowment fund was largely helped by the agent's visit to Water Valley.

At Courtland we met the brethren of the Sardis district. The Pastoral and Theological Society was at its best. The subjects were well handled and generally discussed. Bro. Newell distinguished himself, and so did many others of the brethren. The revival fires were burning. Tears and shouts were united. Souls were being converted and added unto the church. We left with regret; our hearts refreshed, our work for the college furthered, and all of life made brighter. God bless Bro. Geddie and those who labor with him!

We spent Saturday with Bro. Hargrove in the quiet town of Sardis. Here much had been done in other days, but still were left hearts ready to help.

Dr. Cameron had the pleasure of entertaining "our college agent" on Sunday. It makes me rejoice as I hear all these brethren say "our college," with emphasis on the our. Senatobia says to the college, "You shall not fail of securing your endowment for lack of what we can do." Gov. Shands was in charge of the Sabbath-school. The manner of passing the verses of the lesson from class to class commended itself to us. Our Presbyterian brethren were conducting revival services, so we worshiped with them.

Monday found us in Crystal Springs, and many were the brethren who gladdened our hearts by paying their notes.

Tuesday we touched at Gallman and Hazlehurst, where we received some promises which will soon mature. Bro. Norsworthy added another large amount to our debt of gratitude by driving us behind his spirited horse to Hazlehurst, and more still by his genial confidence and by giving the agent an opportunity to preach. This section is just beginning to ship its strawberries and English peas. Tomatoes are in bloom and growing finely, while other fruits and vegetables are promising.

Wednesday we met those working brethren, Lewis and Honnoll, of Holly Springs. Notwithstanding the rain, we made good collections. In the evening Potts' Camp added something to our endowment. Of Holly Springs and its surroundings I will write at another time.

Thursday found us at Vicksburg and Edwards. Friday at Canton and Winona.

Next week I will write you about Indianola.

Brethren, just keep on paying your notes, and by the first day of June both you and I will rejoice over the completion of the greatest gift to humanity that Mississippi Methodism ever undertook. Brethren, help now.

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Rocky Springs circuit, G. A. Guice, P. C. $10 00

My figures in ADVOCATE, of April 13, are all right; so is the addition, as the editor and others may see by adding to the payments since Conference to the total reported at Conference: $1,154 74 equals $1,916 54 up to March 31.

Success is assured. Conference after Conference is meeting the respective apportionments of the debt, the Virginia Conference contributing about $2,000 more than called for from that Conference. We must not let the Mississippi Conference fall behind. Let us meet the portion of the debt assigned to us, and do even better things.

Let us have your orders immediately. Fraternally,

The dispatches state that Col. E. F. Sheppard by will bequeathed $100,000 to St. Paul's Church, of Tarsus, Asia Minor, and $100,000 to the New York Presbytery for general religious work in that city, and $50,000 to the Seventh Presbyterian Church in that city.

It is announced that a special train will make the daily run from New York City to Chicago, beginning April 30, in nineteen hours. By way of Detroit the distance is 976 miles, which compels a speed of over fifty-one and a half miles an hour for the whole distance.

An exchange says:

Senator Dawes, when in Yale College, sawed wood at 75 cents per cord as a means of self-support. He has participated in the legislation in Congress for the admission of thirteen States into the Union.

Now, let the boys at Centenary and Millsaps go to sawing wood.

Bro. LaPrade at Carondelet, and Bro. Henry at Carrollton, began protracted services last Sunday. The meetings are well attended and the interest increasing. Our Baptist brethren, the Purser Brothers, are holding a meeting of great success in the Garden District Theater. Surely the revival spirit has come upon us.

Notice.

The District Conference of Kosciusko district will be held at Eupora, May 18 to 21. Bishop C. B. Galloway is expected to preside. The Discipline, page 55, paragraph 72, gives direction as to the business of the Conference. Will the preachers please prepare a written report on each of the five topics separately. This will aid the secretary and will facilitate the work of the Conference. These reports may be as short as a statement of all pertinent facts will allow. It is particularly desired that the reports "as to Sunday-school" shall be separate, all ready to be handed in Thursday afternoon, the eighteenth, so that the reports can go to a committee which shall bring in its report on Saturday afternoon. The Rev. G. W. Baehman, the Sunday-school agent of our Conference, desires Saturday afternoon to be set apart for discussions of the Sunday-school subject. I hope there will be no objection. Let the question of suitable houses for Sunday-school work be embraced in the reports and discussions. Why do so many Sunday-schools suspend during Winter? What influence has the protracted meeting season on the work of Sunday-schools? Do grown and young of the Sunday-school attend preaching? Would it be a change for the better to have the Sunday-school in the afternoon?

Let us consider also to what extent our spiritual work is hindered by unsuitable house for parsonage and for worship.

The Conference will meet at ten o'clock A. M., for organization, on Thursday, May 18. At eight P. M. Bro. W. D. McCullough will preach the Conference sermon.

Will the recording stewards please have the Quarterly Conference Records present for examination, in accordance with the Discipline, page 118, paragraph 192. Let us all pray and work for the blessing of the Holy Spirit on that occasion.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, P. E.

That Sabbath Resolution.

SOME "NON SEQUITURS."

1. It does not follow, because a committee of an Annual Conference reports its opinion on Sabbath observance, that that opinion is the law on that subject.

2. It does not follow, because the report of a committee is adopted without a dissenting voice, that every member of the Conference is pledged to that view of the subject.

3. It does not follow, because one member feels pledged to that view of the subject, that every other member should feel so pledged.

4. It does not follow, because it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, that it is wrong to go anywhere else on Sunday if we use the Sabbath trains, though not in cases of extreme necessity.

Therefore (5) it does not follow, because the Mississippi Conference adopted resolution four of the report of Committee on the Sabbath, that members of the Mississippi Conference are doing wrong by riding on Sunday trains. R. J. JONES.

P. and H. M. Society of Winona District, North Mississippi Conference.

The district meeting of the P. and H. M. Society of Winona district will be held in Winona, May 25, the day before the District Conference.

Let the names of the delegates be forwarded to Mrs. S. M. Thamos, of Winona, as early as possible.

Delegates will please meet at the Methodist Church promptly at 2:30 P. M. MISS MATTIE ROBINSON, Dist. Sec.

Felicity Street Church Revival.

The meeting at Felicity Street Church continues with increasing interest. On last Monday there were twelve conversions and three sanctifications, while penitents were numbered by scores. Messrs. Walker and Rinehart, the evangelists who labor with the pastor, are not only men of talent and refinement, but also of grace and power. The number of confessions to date exceed one hundred and fifty, and of this number about one-half are bright conversions. A peculiar feature of the meeting is that some have been blessed at every service. Mr. Walker excels in Bible exegesis, and Mr. Rinehart is known all over the church as a sweet singer. The meetings will continue indefinitely.

Seashore Camp Ground.

The annual Spring meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held on the grounds, on Thursday, the twentieth instant, at 7:30 P. M.

Arrangements will then be made for the approaching camp meeting. Parties desiring to secure assignments of lots for erecting permanent or temporary tents, should present their applications at this time, if possible. Tent owners desiring to rent or sell their tents, should so report to the Tent and Cot Committee.

Meridian District Conference

will convene in East End Church, Meridian, Thursday, May 11, at 9 o'clock A. M. Bishop Haygood has promised to preside. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. D. G. W. Ellis. A full attendance of all members and delegates is urgently requested and expected. A cordial welcome and hospitable entertainment await them. The preachers will prepare reports according to printed form furnished, and will see that the recording stewards have the Quarterly Conference Record Books present for examination according to Book of Discipline. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi Conference

Dear Brethren: For the sake of suffering humanity, and in order to be true to our Conference promises, let me exhort you to take up collections for our domestic missions, and forward the whole or, at least, a part of your assessment to the treasurer. It was never more urgently needed than just now. Brethren's hearts are failing them for lack of financial support. Let us rally to our comrades' help, and that speedily. Please take and preserve your separate voucher.

Yours in the work,

Trusts and combinations are unpopular. But there is one form of trust against which no one has anything to say. That is the trust the public reposes in Hood's Sarsaparilla—because they know HOOD'S CURES.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable.

Important Notice.

The time of holding the Meridian District Conference has been fixed and will be soon announced. Will all pastors in the district please furnish me a list and postoffice of all delegates and members of the Conference who will be present. Not elected simply. This is necessary, as we wish to communicate with each member separately.

Please comply with this request, brethren, and save us annoyance and confusion. B. F. LEWIS.

Philip Werlein.

We take pleasure in informing our thousands of readers that since Rev. Robert Harry has been business manager of Philip Werlein's, the sales of pianos and organs has largely increased. This is, no doubt, in considerable degree due to the energy and tact with which Bro. Harry carries out the wise and enterprising plans of his employer. The experience of many years in the music business in this city gives Philip Werlein, the reliable and wealthy head of this emporium of music, large advantages to purchasers desiring to obtain first-class pianos, organs, musical instruments of all kinds, as well as book and sheet music at lowest prices and on easy terms.

To Whom It May Concern

Macon, Ga., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

PRAYER.

BY DEAN TRENCH.

Lord, what a change within us, one short hour
Spent in thy presence can suffice to make;
What heavy burdens from our bosoms take,
What parched grounds refresh as with a shower!
We kneel, and all around us seem to lower;
We rise, and all, the distant and the near,
Stands forth in sunny outline brave and clear,
We kneel, how weak! We rise, how full of power!
Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
Or others, that we are not always strong,
That we are ever overborne with care,
That we should ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer,
And joy and strength and courage are with thee?

I Know.

BY LE BRAN.

"What the world needs are not negations, but positions; not denials, but affirmations," wrote Emerson

This is especially true in reference to Christian experience. A man by his daily walk may demonstrate the truth of religions teaching as applied to his own heart, and the genuineness of his trust in the power of God to deliver him from the "snare of the fowler," without voicing the emotions of his soul or the assent of his intellect; but when he does speak it must be with no uncertain sound if he would convince the world of his faith and trust. Like grand old Paul, he must emphasize belief—"I know whom I have believed."

A search for knowledge has constituted the grand battle of the ages. Our world is full of mystery, and ever since the creation men have been seeking the key to hidden treasure-houses. The secrets of the physical world are being mastered day by day; the torch of investigation lighted by inspiration flashes in the very bowels of the earth, and the words "seek and ye shall find" are being verified in the intellectual and moral, even as in the material realm. So broad and deep have been the discoveries of man that he has grown arrogant, and demands logical demonstration in the illimitable fields of thought, and ocular demonstration in the physical kingdom before he will be persuaded to believe anything.

Not so with the Christian. With heart attuned to heavenly melody and soul all aglow with divine light; with sure confidence and abiding trust in the invisible power that upholds him, and faith in the word that causeth his peace to flow as a river, he can with blessed assurance say "I know whom I have believed."

Christian, with humility yet with boldness, speak to men of this spiritual knowledge. Set the "I knows"—these mosaics in religious experience—plainly before them, that they too may catch the glad strain, "The Lord is risen," and be able from full hearts to say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."—Christian at Work.

What a Hymn Did.

A touching little incident occurred not long ago in the woman's prison on Blackwell's Island. It happened at a Sabbath afternoon service in the chapel of the prison. The first part of the service was a sermon. It was short and simple and full of earnest feeling. But it seemed to fall like good seed upon the stoniest ground. The hundreds of poor wretched creatures ranged before the preacher apparently lost none of the hard, desperate look that sin and despair had stamped upon their features. They sat bolt upright, seemingly hearing nothing that was going on before them. After the sermon, two lady visitors present asked the privilege of singing a few hymns. They began with that sweetest spiritual song, "Jesus, lover of my soul," which they sang with much expression. "Very soon" said one who was present, "I noticed the faces beginning to soften. And in a moment's time the heads began to go down, and before the verse was finished they were sobbing aloud in all parts of the room." Rev. S. Howland conducted a song services in Tompkins' Square, New York, every Sabbath afternoon last Summer. The power of Christian song has never been more strikingly illustrated than in that series of services. Thousands of men and women, many of them among the worst characters in the city, were brought together Sabbath after Sabbath to listen to the singing of hymns. Evidence is not wanting that the saving truths of the blessed gospel were in this manner, on the wings of sweet music, carried home to many hearts. It would have been impossible, such is the general character of the neighborhood, to have held any kind of religious service in Tompkins' Square. They would not listen to sermons, but they could not resist the influence of sweet singing.—Selected.

Three Dutiful Acts.

There are three dutiful acts which a Christian should conscientiously do every morning. The first is an act of thanksgiving for the mercies of the night; the second is an act of faith by which one commits one's soul to the keeping of the Redeemer in the full persuasion that Christ will faithfully keep what is thus trustfully placed in his hands; the third is an act of determination to speak a kind word of cheer or to do some helpful deed to, at least, one fellow-creature during the day. Sidney Smith, quoting from an unknown writer, says that to thus place a drop of comfort into the life of one tired spirit every day would be to make three hundred and sixty-five people more or less happy every year. Should one do this every day for forty years, he would brighten the lives of fourteen thousand six hundred persons! And in thus making his life a stream of blessing to others the Christian would greatly add to his own happiness, since "it is more blessed to give than to receive."—New York Christian Advocate.

Experience of a Merchant—The Lord Was His Helper.

A merchant in New York had pledged to the Lord a certain portion of his business receipts as fast as they were collected. He called this the Lord's insurance money. "For," said he, "so long as I give, so long will the Lord help and bless me, and in some way will give me the means to give. It is a blessing to my heart to keep it open in gratitude; a blessing to dispose of it to gladden other hearts, and the surest way to keep the Lord's favor with me."

The results of his experience were blessed, indeed, as he said: "I never realized before how he helps me in all my business plans. Things happen daily which show me that some one who knows more than I is protecting me. Bad debts have been paid that I did not expect. Errand boys just getting into sly and bad habits have been discovered ere their thefts had proceeded far. As I needed competent help in my business, it has came just as it was wanted.

"When customers were about to fail, somehow their debts to me were paid, although they failed to pay others.

"A severe fire came to my office and seemed to have swept all my valuables away. But it was stopped at just the right moment, and not one thing valuable was lost. The insurance companies paid me enough to replace every damage, and the office was renewed better than before. The Lord sends me business enough to pay my debts while others are dull.

"I can not tell why it is, except that I always pray for my business, and ask the Lord to bless it for the good of others, and that the means which come from it may be used for his cause.

"When I stop giving, business stops coming. When I stop praying for it, perplexities arise. As long as I pray for it all moves easily, and I have no care or trouble.

"The Lord is my banker, my insurer, my deliverer, my patron, and my blessed guardian of temporal things as well as spiritual."—The Wonders of Prayer.

The Beatitude of the Unsuccessful.

There may be no Bible beatitude saying expressly, "Blessed are the unsuccessful," but there are beatitudes which are equivalent to this. We take from our Lord's own lips, "Blessed are they that mourn," "Blessed be ye poor," "Blessed are they which are persecuted," "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you," "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you." Then many other Scripture passages have like teaching. Evidently not all blessings lie in the sunshine; many of them hide in the shadows. We do not read far in the Bible, especially in the New Testament, without finding that earthly prosperity is not the highest good that God has for men. Our Lord speaks very plainly about the perils of worldly success.

The Bible is indeed a book for the unsuccessful. Its sweetest messages are to those who have fallen. It is a book of love and sympathy. It is like a mother's bosom to lay one's head upon in time of distress or pain. Its pages teem with cheer for those who are discouraged. It sets its lamps of hope to shine in darkened chambers. It reaches out its hands of help to the fainting and to those who have fallen. It is full of comfort for those who are in sorrow. It has its many special promises for the needy, the poor, the bereft. It is a book for those who have failed, for the disappointed, the defeated, the discouraged.

It is this quality in the Bible that makes it so dear to the heart of humanity. If it were a book only for the strong, the successful, the victorious, the unfallen, those who have no sorrow, who never fail—the whole, the happy—it would not find such a welcome wherever it goes in this world. So long as there are tears and sorrows and broken hearts and crushed hopes and human failures, and lives burdened and bowed down, and spirits sad and despairing, so long will the Bible be a book believed in as of God—an inspired book, and full of inspiration, light, help, and strength for earth's weary ones.—Rev. J. R. Nutter, D. D

The Beautiful Side of Life.

It is hardly an exaggeration to say that two-thirds of all that makes it "beautiful to be alive" consists in cup-offerings of water. Not an hour of life's journey but is rendered easier by their freshening or harder by their absence. Why? Because most of us are burden-bearers of one sort or another; because to most of us a large part of the journey is a dull and trivial trudge; because there is so much dust upon the road, and not so many bad places as we probably think, yet many commonplaces; and it is load and dust and stretches of the commonplace that make one thirsty. If the feeling on our shoulders were of wings instead of load; if on Mondays, "in some good cause not our own," we were marching singing to a battle, and on Saturdays were coming back victorious, then the greetings on the way would make less difference to us. But as it is, we crave the roadside recognition, which gives praise for the good deed attempted, pity for the hard luck and the fall, a hand-lift now and then to ease the burden's chafe, and now and then a word of sympathy in the step-step-stepping that takes us through the dust. And this is all that most of us can wait to give, for we, too, are here on business. You can not step my journey for me, can not carry me on your back, can not do me any great service; but it makes a world of difference to me whether I do my part in the world with or without these little helps which fellow-travelers exchange. "I am busy, Johnnie, and can't help it," said the father, writing away when the little fellow hurt his fingers. "Yes, you could—you might have said 'Oh!'" sobbed Johnnie. There's a Johnnie in tears inside of all of us upon occasions. The old Quaker was right: "I expect to pass through this life but once. If there is any kindness or any good thing I can do to my fellow-beings, let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once."—Selected.

He that would relish success to purpose, should keep his passions cool, and his expectations low; and then it is possible that his fortune might exceed his fancy; for an advantage always rises by surprise, and is almost always doubled by being unlooked for.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

WATCHING THE TONGUE.

Keep a watch on your words, my children,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet like the bees' fresh honey—
Like bees, they have terrible stings;
They can bless like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten the lonely life;
They can cut in the strife of anger—
Yes, cut like a two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged
If their errand be true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind;
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them be unsaid;
They may flash through the brain like lightning,
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back, if they're cold and cruel,
Under bar and lock and seal;
The wounds they make, my children,
Are always slow to heal.
May Christ guard your lips, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the words of the beautiful truth!

In Japan.

Some new-made Japanese acquaintances, seeing my plight, agreed to telegraph for the passport from the next city, and a Matanyama man was found who offered consolation that the authorities might not be so particular if they knew that the paper would be forthcoming. So my mind was finally composed enough to observe some things along the way.

WHAT I SAW AT TANOTSU.

The boat stopped only an hour at Tadotsu, and about one hundred yards from the land. I did not go ashore, but from the boat I saw some things. One passenger, an old man, came out upon the deck, stood facing an eminence in the town, clapped his hands, and bowed. A student on board who could speak English told me that it was a famous Shinto shrine towards which the old man was worshiping. Nine little stores rowed alongside; of course, with some little contest for the positions nearest and most convenient for the passengers. The goods were fruits, confections, lemonade, ice, beer and wine. The house was a sampan. The same person managed the vessel, cried aloud of his goods, acted as salesman and cashier. Some were handsome men; others, boys whose faces would brighten at any movement that gave hope of a sale. One had fish, and, excepting a supply of these bought by the steward of the boat, I think the total of the sales of the nine was six cents.

Besides these nine stores I saw one home on the sea. An old man was noticed bowing, and I first thought he was worshiping the sun, but soon it was revealed that he was blind and begging. A woman, supposed to be his wife or daughter, cared, and, at any proposition to give, held up a little basket attached to a long pole. They had their cooking utensils and mats along, and probably live greatly upon the sea.

It may be known by some that Tadotsu is the place where Christians sold their ancestral swords and armor in order to get money to build a church. H. G. HAWKINS.

MR. EDITOR: I will again write a letter to the dear ADVOCATE, which I hope will be published. Yesterday was a very rainy, disagreeable day; but this is a lovely day. I am making a very pretty silk patchwork sofa-cushion. After I finish it I will make a lace one. We have a very nice orange grove. We also have a few lemon, guava and grapefruit trees. We have just started a flower garden. I am very fond of flowers, both wild and tame. There are some lovely wild flowers here, and I enjoy picking them. I am not going to school now, as we are having a short vacation. I am a member of the Methodist Church. I also am a member of the "Christian Endeavor," and I am trying to be a good Christian. I wish all the cousins of the ADVOCATE would pray for me, that I may be faithful. My papa is troubled so much with rheumatism; but since he has been in Florida, he has improved ever so much. My mama is the dearest and best mama in the world, and I try to be kind to her and papa. I will close by asking the cousins this question: How old was Noah when the flood came? Ever the ADVOCATE's friend,

A Working Boy.

As I write, a coal cart has driven up to the house opposite in charge of a boy, perhaps seventeen years old. On the sidewalk a man with gray hair was leaning on his shovel, waiting for the coal to be dumped. The boy backed his cart, went in to have the ticket of delivery signed, hurried out, and drew the pins from the backboard of the cart. He tugged and pulled to dump the cart, at last being assisted by the older men, who did not exert any degree of strength in his effort. At last the cart was dumped, and the man began to shovel the coal. While waiting for the man to get the coal out of the way so that the balance of the coal would run out on the sidewalk, the boy drew from the pocket of his coat a woolen cloth, and began to polish and rub the heavy harness on the horse. On the blinders were some ornaments of brass, and for this he used polish that he evidently kept for the purpose. He braided the horse's mane after combing it with his fingers, and straightened and arranged the harness with evident pride and enjoyment. As I watched, I thought: "I do not believe that that boy will shovel coal when his head is gray. He uses his time to the advantage of his employer, and the improvement of his employer's property. Somebody who needs service that demands devotion and industry will find this boy out, and give him employment that his character fits him for."

When the horse was driven away, he held his head up and stepped off as if he knew his personal appearance had been greatly improved. The young driver looked at him critically, as if his standard had not been reached. —Christian Union.

Susie's mother sent her to Warren's the other day for some shoestrings. The little girl tipped the doorlatch, and slowly walked up to the proprietor. "Mama sent me down for a pair of shoestrings," and Susie fingered her pennies nervously as she looked into the dealer's face. Warran turned to a bunch of strings upon the wall and began to pull a couple out. Then he stopped. "How long does she want them?" Susie looked flustered. "I don't know, but I think mama wants them to keep."—Boston Transcript.

Chewing Gum.

BY REV. C. H. SMITH.

It is after midnight. I am watching at the bedside of a little boy so sick that the physician has ordered his medicine taken every half-hour. How lonely is the night! How slowly the hours pass! Everyone who is now sleeping should be very thankful that he can rest. The good Lord gives us so many blessings we forget to be thankful. Health, sleep, home, friends! Golden words! Greater riches in either of them than in the mines of the mountains.

Perhaps the readers of The Junior Herald, which has been keeping me company to-night, will help me keep awake by allowing me to write to them.

Our doctor was to-day talking of his business. Said he does not like the Sunday work that physicians have to do. Many people call for medical help Sunday morning when they could just as well have called Saturday evening. They seem to forget that doctors ought to have a day for rest and worship.

"Then," said the doctor, "there is another cause for our Sunday business. Many kind papas bring home candy, nuts and gum on Saturday night, and the children eat too much, and Sunday get sick."

"How the gum-chewing habit has increased of late!" I ventured to remark.

"Oh, yes," the doctor answered. "I have considerable money invested in the chewing-gum business," he continued. I wondered if he was one of the owners of a factory somewhere. Then he said: "To-day I gave a girl five cents if she wouldn't chew any more for a week, and the other day I gave a boy a dollar if he would quit for a year. I think it a good way to spend money. It is very hard for some of them to stop, they have the habit so strongly fixed. I want the boys and girls to quit using gum—in part, because it does not look well, but more because it injures their health. Gum-chewing makes people nervous. To be nervous is to be cross, quick-tempered, and unhappy."

And the doctor took his medicine case and hurried away to see another patient, saying as he left: "Oh, yes, it is a splendid work of mercy and help to get boys and girls to quit chewing gum!"—Epworth Herald.

The Texan Cow-Boy.

Cow-boy life has in the last few years lost much of its roughness. The cattle barons have discharged most of the men who drank, and have frowned so persistently upon gambling that little of it is done. Cards and whisky being put away, there is small temptation to disorderly conduct; so it is only when they reach some large city and are not on duty that they indulge in a genuine spree. On the ranches kept under fence they have little to do when not on the drive or in branding-time, the cattle being all safely enclosed. But they must take their turns at line riding, which means a close inspection of the fences and the repairs of all breaks and damages. Where night overtakes them, there they sleep, staking their horses, and rolling themselves in their blankets. These rides of inspection take days to accomplish, for there are ranches in Texas which extend in a straight line over seventy-five miles. Those ranches which are not kept under fence necessitate more work. The boys must then keep their cattle in sight, and while allowing them to graze in every direction, must see that none in the many thousands stray beyond the limits of their own particular pastures. They go then in parties, scattering over the territory, for they must cover hundreds of thousands of acres in a day.

It is not a life of hardship, and pays well enough. Everything is furnished to them free and of the very best, and they are paid besides $30 per month. Each party stays out from two to three weeks at a time; but they take with them the finest of camp wagons, with beds and bedding, cooking utensils, the best of groceries of all kinds, and as excellent a cook as money can employ. The prairies are full of game, and their rifles are ever handy. The life is free, fascinating, and peculiarly healthy. These men are exceedingly chivalrous to all women; this seems to be a trait born in them, as much a part of their moral nature as it is of their physical to have small feet, for it is seldom that a genuine Texas cow boy can be found who has not the distinguishing mark of a handsome foot, and his boots are to him all that the sombrero is to a Mexican. He will deny himself many pleasures, he will go without a coat and be seen in most dilapidated attire, but his boots must be of the best and most beautiful make that the country can afford; high of heel and curved of instep, a fine upper and a thin sole, fitting like a glove, and showing the handsome foot to perfection. Take the cow-boys as a class, they are bold, fearless and generous, a warm-hearted and manly set, with nothing small, vicious, nor mean about them, and Texas need not be ashamed of the brave and skillful riders who traverse the length and breadth of her expansive prairies.—Harper's Magazine.

Young Man, You Will Do.

A young man was recently graduated from a scientific school. His home had been a religious one. He was a member of a Christian church, had pious parents, brothers and sisters; his family was one in Christ.

On graduating he determined upon a western life among the mines. Full of courage and hope, he started out on his long journey to strike out for himself in a new world.

The home prayers followed him. As he went he fell into company with older men. They liked him for his frank manners and his manly independence. As they journeyed together they stopped for a Sabbath in a border town. On the morning of the Sabbath one of his fellow-travelers said to him:

"Come, let us be off for a drive and the sights."

"No," said the young man, "I am going to church. I have been brought up to keep the Sabbath, and I have promised my mother to keep on in that way."

His road acquaintance looked at him for a moment, and then slapping him on the shoulder, said:

"Right, my boy. I began in that way. I wish I had kept on. Young man, you will do. Stick to your bringing up and your mother's words, and you will win."

The boy went to church, all honor to him in that far-away place, and among such men. His companions had their drive, but the boy gained their confidence and won their respect by his manly avowal of sacred obligations. Already success is smiling upon the young man. There is no lack of places for him.—Christian Weekly.

MARTIN—Died, at the home of her son-in-law, M. H. Knight, near Winona, Miss., Dec. 31, 1892, Sister ANNA J. MARTIN. She was the daughter of Malcolm and Mary Baker, and was born in Robinson county, N. C., June 22, 1838. Her mother dying when she was yet a child, her father with his four little children moved to Mississippi in 1847, and died in 1855. Thrown thus, fatherless and motherless, into the wide world at life's most critical period, Sister Martin was left with two sisters and a young brother to tread life's dangerous pathway; but by circumspect was her conduct that she won the love of all who knew her. Judging by the daughters, their mother must have been a most excellent woman of more than ordinary refinement.

Sister Martin professed religion in 1855, and joined the M. E. Church, South, and till the day of her death ever adorned her profession. She was married to T. P. Martin in 1857, who was mortally wounded at the battle of Franklin and died in Nashville a few day after, leaving a little boy and girl to her training, and well did she meet the obligations and discharge the duties thus imposed, ever leading her children in wisdom's pleasant paths.

The writer knew her intimately for more than forty years. When but a girl she was often in his home, and he knew her during the happy period of her brief married life; and in her bereavement and affliction's dark hour, amid all the duties and trials thus thrown on her, she was the same humble Christian. For more than thirty years we were members of the same church and worshipped at the same altar, and we can truly say that during all these years we never knew her, by word or deed, to compromise her Christian character. While modest, she was ever willing to testify publicly for the Master on all proper occasions. She died as she lived—an humble Christian. On the first day and first Sunday in the present year we laid her beside loved ones in the churchyard at Bethlehem, to await the resurrection of the just.

To the bereft son and daughter we would say: Walk in your mother's footsteps, live as she lived, and the blessings of God will attend you through life, and you will meet her in the sweet by-and-by.

W. H. HOLMES.

Winona, Miss.

LEWIS—Bro. EPPIE J. LEWIS has been removed from the sphere he filled so well in this world to fill a nobler and brighter sphere in the world of light and glory. Only a few days before his death all was well; then came the telegram, "Your son is very sick; come at once," and before a loving father could reach him, another came, saying, "He is dead."

Bro. Eppie has been at Houston, Miss., in school. How hard it was for mother to give her consent for her boy to go so far from her kind home, and little did she think when she said "Good-by," that she would see him no more in life, but that he would be brought to her cold and dead! But such was the case. It is so sad. He was so young and strong. The strong arm upon which father and mother would soon lean is broken; the fond hopes are scattered, the plans all changed, the prospects blighted. But, thank God! father and mother, brothers and sisters, look for the resurrection with more interest than ever before, and the spirit-world seems more real as their family circle is represented there.

Eppie was a good, obedient boy, a noble, Christian young man. He filled his place in the family circle with love and affection, his place in the Sunday-school with promptness, and his place in society with a beautiful, consistent Christian character. He will be sadly missed in many places. The church needs such true, devoted men; the world needs such examples of Christianity; the Sunday-school needs such workers—in fact, such men are in demand wherever a man is needed. So in all the various relations of life Bro. Eppie Lewis will be greatly missed; but nowhere will he be missed so much as in the home circle.

Eppie J. Lewis was a son of J. W. and Ellen Lewis, of Watorhole, Miss., and was born Aug. 18, 1873, and died in Houston, Miss., March 12, 1893. May God comfort the bereaved ones, and may they all meet again around the great white throne!

M. J. MILLER.

Though months have passed since the sweet spirit of our darling little Willie was peacefully borne to the beautiful home of the soul, yet his precious little image is as fresh in our memory as the day when the Father took him home.

It is a sad reality that our loved one has gone from us, never more to brighten our home, where he was the joy of all hearts. The little brothers and sisters never grow tired talking of little Willie, and even now we can almost hear the patter of his little feet in the hall running to meet papa. He was just learning to say the words, "mama," "papa."

God gave the precious little treasure to gladden our hearts for a few short months, and only a home was never blessed with a better, sweeter babe than was our little Willie. Too pure for this earth, so God, gathering his jewels, has plucked this little bud to bloom forever in paradise.

Dear parents, grieve no longer for your loved one; though he will never more comfort your hearts here, yet there is joy in the fact that you have one more tie in heaven, even your precious little Willie. He is standing "at the beautiful gates, waiting and watching for you." Strive to enter in, and the meeting will be forever.

GRANNMA D.

LEWIS—Rev. J. E. LEWIS was born in Georgia in the year 1821; joined the M. E. Church in his twenty-seventh year; was licensed to preach in 1858. He moved to Mississippi in 1866. Bro. Lewis served as a local preacher until December, 1892, when he was appointed by Bishop Granbery to the Westville mission. On Feb. 23 God called him from his field of labor to rest in the home of the blest. He suffered untold agony before his death, but he bore it with Christian patience. His last words were full of comfort to weeping friends and relatives. He expressed perfect submission to the will of God. Thank God for a religion that makes life pure and robs death of every sting!

R. H. BAER, P. C.

CHILDS—NATHAN MARION CHILDS, son of Wm. Childs and Nancy Harthorn, was born Dec. 23, 1820, in Montgomery county, Ala. After a short time his father moved to Pike county, where he remained until 1844, when with a large family he moved to Bradley county, Ark. On May 5, 1847, Nathan Marion was married to Miss Rebecca Bell. He soon built up a good home. By hard work on a farm he accumulated property. He served in the Confederate Army, and in 1864 he moved to Kaufman county, Texas. He moved to Smith county in 1865, and to St. Landry, La., in 1867, where he remained until his death. Bro. Childs raised a large family; was a quiet, honorable and a beloved neighbor and citizen. In 1890 he professed religion, and was by the writer received into the M. E. Church, South, in his own home near Church Point.

Bro. Childs lived a consistent life, and was ever hopeful and happy. Just before leaving for Conference last year, I called on this dear old saint to pay him my last visit, as I had finished up my pastorate on that circuit, and had to be removed to another charge. He was full of tears, and yet his face was aglow with heavenly light as he spoke of his oncoming departure for the better land. He expressed a great desire that his whole family might so live as to join him in heaven. After a lesson from the dear old family Bible, we sang and prayed together, and parted to meet on the other shore.

Bro. Childs lingered for several days in his last illness, feeling that soon he would be called home to glory. Finally he lost consciousness, which was at last restored in answer to the prayers of his family and friends. He consoled them, forgave the injustice done him in the past by his dear ones in their thoughtless moments, and rejoiced with them in a general family reunion as they read the Scriptures, talked and sang praises to God with neighbors who had gathered in to care for the dying. But the angels came. Christ said, "It is enough; come up higher," and amid the sobs of a loving family—wife, sons and daughter, grandchildren—and many warm friends, he left this world for glory on Feb. 19, 1893. May God bless his dear ones left behind!

R. M. BLOCKER.

ELLIS—JOHN EDWIN ELLIS, son of Edwin and Catharine Ellis, was born Sept. 9, 1874; died March 8, 1893. He joined the church when quite young. He had a Christ-like mother, and was raised to love and respect his Savior. Though young, he had formed beautiful habits.

He suffered very much ten days before his death, was tenderly nursed through his sickness by fond parents, brother and sisters, and anxious friends, and everything possible was done to arrest the progress of disease and prolong his life; but all to no avail.

We know that he died in the Lord, and his soul has entered that rest that has been prepared for the good and obedient. To the bereaved parents I will say: Remember the star that set upon your earthly home is now only risen in glory and in purer skies is shining. The lamp of your happy fireside hours is now shedding its soft radiance in a much better home. The gates have swung open and the angels have taken your dear son to Jesus' bosom, and he is so much safer there, and there, too, he will be to give you a glad welcome from your longer and rougher pathway home. Farewell, dear brother, suffering is over, heaven is gained, and by the grace of God I'll meet you "by and by." His sister-in-law,

KATE ELLIS.

SILLIMAN—The subject of this notice, Bro. JOHN ISAAC SILLIMAN, was a native of Connecticut, having been born in Chester, in that State, in 1817. In early life he moved to Mississippi, and was married in Natchez, in this State, to Miss Eliza Ely, in 1843. He died in Canton, Miss., on Jan. 14, 1893, having been preceded by his devoted wife two years before. There were no children added to their home, and all the love of their natures seemed concentrated upon each other.

Bro. Silliman will long be remembered for his straightforward, consistent life. In all things and at all times he was the same quiet, though firm and resolute, Christian man. It was often and truthfully said of him that he was a "good man;" one that eschewed evil in every form. During a four years' pastorate it was my pleasure to meet him often and deal with him much, and in nothing did I find him wanting in integrity. We may sincerely write of him, Behold the upright man!

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

JONES—JOHN ANDREW JONES was born April 7, 1875; died March 30, 1893. He made a profession of religion and joined the Methodist Church, Sept. 10, 1891, under the ministry of Rev. R. C. Calloway.

Bro. John was a boy that loved and honored his mother and father, and he will be missed very badly in the home circle. His funeral was preached by the writer at Shiloh Church to a large congregation.

May the Lord comfort the sorrowing hearts which he leaves behind, and help them to realize that their loss is his eternal gain!

HOLCOMBE—Died, at the residence of Dr. A. R. Holcombe, March 28, after an illness of three weeks, RICHARD HOLCOMBE, son of Rev. Richard Holcombe. The Hillsboro Mirror voices the sentiment of the community in saying: "His death caused deep sorrow. His loving disposition and manliness won the friendship of all. We have never known a brighter, more attractive or manlier disposition in one so young. His life, though short, will yield a greater influence than many that include three-score years and ten."

W. R. SINGLETON.

We, the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

CHRIST LEAVING THE PRAETORIUM.

BY GUSTAVE DORE.

THIS is one of the greatest religious paintings of the century, as it is one of the most wonderful creations of the genius of Gustave Dore. He was a painter of the French school, although his unequalled originality and weird fancy made it impossible for him strictly to belong to any school. The scene represents Christ descending the steps leading from the official tribunal of the Roman Government of Jerusalem after his condemnation. The figure of the Savior, erect and commanding, is the centre of attraction. Dore's aspiration turned towards religious subjects, and he became so fascinated with the delineation of the Savior's face that he painted it fifty times; and in no effort of his genius has the heavenly radiance which emanates from the figure of Christ been so apparent as in this sublime and elevated picture. The gaping crowd, some of them friends, others attracted by excitement; the leering Jews pressing forward with uplifted hands; the poor and wretched who adored him expressing the most profound sorrow; the sick whom he had healed and those who still craved his divine help all pressing forward to get one last glance at him, while the Roman soldiers with spears and shields driving them back, are graphically displayed in this wonderful picture. The infinite love and pity on His sacred face, as painted with the inspiration of Dore's pencil, is something beyond all description. The reproduction is a photo etching, engraved with the greatest care, preserving all the beautiful softness and value of the original, and has been pronounced by Art critics to be equal in execution to the marked proofs sold by subscription only, for $100 each, in the Dore Gallery, London.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

CHRIST IN THE TEMPLE.

THE original painting, by Hoffman, of Christ teaching in the Temple, now hanging in the Gallery at Dresden, has produced a more profound emotion, in the religious and artistic world, than any picture in the modern gallery of fine arts. It is to the modern school what the Sistine Madonna was to the old. The reproduction is an etching from steel plate, engraved by an expert in the art, and printed on the best plate paper, size 22x28. It has all the beautiful softness and exquisite harmony of tone and value which have placed etchings at the head of all other artistic reproductions. No one who has ever seen this picture can forget the earnest, melancholy eyes and exalted expression of infinite loveliness and purity of the inspired boy as he stood surrounded by the grave and gray rabbis intently listening to every word that fell from his lips. We all know the story of his journey up to Jerusalem, when he was twelve years old; how he tarried there, and Joseph and Mary knew not of it, but supposed he was returning to Nazareth with his kinsfolk and acquaintances; but they found him in the midst of the doctors, both hearing and asking them questions. "And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers." The painter has chosen this scene and portrayed it with such vividness of expression, such original and profound conception of the subject, that all nations and creeds attest their intelligent appreciation by the enormous demands for copies of this great work.

The above handsome picture will be mailed free to each old subscriber sending $2 to renew his subscription for another year, and remitting amount due. It will also be mailed free to each new subscriber sending us $2.

The Value of a Dollar.

Every boy should learn the true value of a dollar. To know what a dollar costs and what it buys is one of the stepping stones to success. It is also desirable that everyone should know that a half dollar will buy a bottle of

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

According to the report of the auditor of Virginia, the negroes of that State pay taxes on real estate valued at $9,425,685 and on personal property valued at $3,342,950.

The Duke of Veragua, a lineal descendant of Christopher Columbus, and chief of the World's Fair Commission from Spain, arrived in New York on April 15, and was given a cordial reception.

Advocates of feminine suffrage have scored another argument. Kansas papers say that "the effect of women campaigning at the polls was that the election was the quietest and most orderly ever held in the State."

The New York Legislature has passed a bill abolishing capital punishment. The action was taken last week, and went through by the large majority of 78 to 29. If it becomes a law, it will go into effect Sept. 1.

Regarding the appointment of Pension Examining Boards, of which there are 1,000 or 1,200 throughout the country, each being composed of three physicians, Secretary Hoke Smith is accredited with saying that he would not appoint to these positions any old physicians. As a rule, these boards have been composed of the oldest physicians in the districts over which they have jurisdiction, and it is the intention of Secretary Hoke Smith to appoint younger men.

The governors of the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Missouri assembled in convention at the city of Richmond, Va., on April 12, 1893, for the sole purpose of advancing, by co-operation and concert of action, the industrial interests and well-being of their several States, and issued an address to the people of the United States and those in Europe who may contemplate making a settlement in this country, or immigrating here in search of homes.

The third Annual Report of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital, in this city, has been published. During the year past the number of persons treated at the hospital was 4,570, to whom 30,705 consultations were given, an average of over 85 a day, and on whom 1,176 operations of various kinds were performed. The total of cases treated since the opening of the hospital in 1889 is 13 928, with 106,488 consultations and 2 256 operations. The hospital is intended solely for the benefit of persons unable to pay for the services rendered, and all others are discouraged from making application for treatment.

FOREIGN.

More than 200 Methodist ministers in Ireland have signed an appeal to the Methodist ministers in England that they oppose home rule, both on religious and commercial grounds.

A prominent merchant and millionaire of Denver, Colo., who was granted a concession several months ago for a railroad around the City of Mexico, has arrived there to arrange for beginning the work of constructing the line. The corporation which will undertake the project is the Metropolitan Belt Railway Company. The road will circumvent the city and pass through all the principal suburbs.

In response to the appeals issued by the Dock Laborers Union at Hull a meeting of seventy-six representatives of dock laborers and other Unions, whose members are employed in the shipping trade, was held in that city on April 15. The unions represented are all in London. After considerable discussion the delegates agreed to inaugurate a general strike at all the ports in the United Kingdom.

Alexander I., King of Servia, gave a banquet to the regents and all the ministers of state, and while they were enjoying themselves at the palace, detachments of soldiers and bodies of police took possession of the ministers' houses and occupied the government buildings. At midnight, while the festivities were still in progress, King Alexander proclaimed that he had attained his majority, and that he had assumed control of the government of the country.

The stars and stripes, which for two months have floated from the government building in Honolulu, have been hauled down, and the remaining forces from the United States cruiser Boston have been sent aboard. On April 1, in the presence of a crowd of 2,000 persons, Lieutenant Draper, marine officer of the Boston, blew the notes of the retreat from his bugle, and the "bunting" sank from the sight of the throng, and was replaced by the colors of the Hawaiian monarchy, which still remains the flag on that island.

Distressing accounts are coming in of the ravages of famine in parts of Russia. It is specially bad in the European part of the government of Perm, where the poor are said to be dying by the hundred. So great is the distress that relatives are often not able to provide burial for the dead, and the bodies are left to decay in the open air. The provincial authorities are reported to be taking no steps to provide relief, and private societies are forming to provide food and clothes for the sufferers, though there are stringent laws against the collection of funds, except through official channels.

The Spring.

Of all seasons in the year, is the one of making radical changes in regard to health. During the Winter the system becomes to a certain extent clogged with waste, and the blood loaded with impurities, owing to lack of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated shops and homes, and other causes. This is the cause of the dull, sluggish, tired feeling so general at this season, and which must be overcome, or the health may be entirely broken down. Hood's Sarsaparilla has attained the greatest popularity all over the country as the favorite Spring Medicine. It expels the accumulation of impurities through the bowels, kidneys, liver, lungs and skin, gives to the blood the purity and quality necessary to good health, and overcomes that tired feeling.

To the Pastors of the Methodist Churches in Mississippi:

The Sixth Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Mississippi will be in session at the University, in Oxford, April 27-30.

We would be very glad to have not only every town, but every country church represented by one or more delegates.

We want to ask you to take up this subject in your congregations, if you have no Young Men's Christian Association in your midst, and arrange to send a delegate. If you can not send some young men from your congregation, can you not go yourselves?

All who expect to attend and will send their names to Mr. Chas F. Webb, University, Miss., will be provided with free entertainment while the convention is in session.

Arrangements have about been completed for reduced rates on the railroads, and it will cost very little to go from any part of the State. Your congregation could not possibly invest that much money to better advantage. In going, wherever a ticket is purchased, get a certificate that full fare has been paid, so as to get the benefit of any reduction that may be allowed in returning.

We presume that every pastor reads his church paper, and we take this means of addressing you because of the saving in money and labor. We hope that every pastor who reads this letter will consider it directed personally to him; and the chairman would be pleased to have a card from each one acknowledging its receipt.

Let us ask that you join with the committee in an earnest petition to the Great Head of the church to make our convention abundantly successful. Yours fraternally,

J. R. DOBYNS, Chairman.

For the Committee.

Seashore District Conference.

All ministers and delegates that expect to attend the District Conference that convenes at Pearlington, May 16, will please send me their names at once, in order that I may provide for their accommodation. I am sorry I can not invite the wives of ministers and delegates.

On and after April 17, 1893, the new central station of the above road at Chicago, beautifully located between Twelfth Street and Park Row, on the lake front, will be opened for the arrival and departure of through trains, the running of such to and from its old station, foot of Lake street, being abandoned.

SORES FROM HEAD TO FEET

Skin Dried Up. Could not Shut Her Eyes. Weighed at Six Months less than Seven Pounds. Spent $100 in Druggists and Doctors. Completely Cured in One Month by CUTICURA REMEDIES at Cost of $5.00. Now a Strong, Healthy, Full-Weight Child. See Portrait.

When my little girl was one month old, she had a scab form on her face and kept spreading until she was completely covered from head to foot. We doctored for it, but she did not improve, and finally the scab started to fall off, and then she had boils. She had as many as forty on her head at one time, and as many more on her body. After a boil would break the scab would form again. When she was six months old she did not weigh seven pounds, a pound and a half less than she did when she was born, and her skin started to dry up and got so bad that she could not shut her eyes to sleep, but laid with them half open. About this time, at the earnest request of friends, I started using the

CUTICURA

Remedies, and in one month she was completely cured. The scab and boils were entirely gone and she slept and ate like another baby. The doctor and drug bill were over one hundred dollars, the Cuticura bill was not more than five dollars. My child is now two years old and is as strong and healthy as any child of her age, and I can truthfully say it is owing to the CUTICURA REMEDIES. See photograph inclosed. I will willingly write to any mother whose child has skin disease, giving full particulars of how I used them.

Yours with a Mother's Blessing,

The Great Exposition.

Probably no more gorgeous sight has ever delighted the eye of man than that which will greet the visitor at Jackson Park after May 1, when the two great electric fountains will send their jets of water and spray up into the air, to be painted by an unseen artist in all the hues that are known to nature. The fountains are exactly identical, and together will lift into space 874 gallons of water per minute. The center stream will be two inches in diameter, and will ascend to a height of 150 feet, while about it will be many smaller jets. Pipes will be provided with brass nozzles, concealed in imitation ferns, through which the water is forced into the air. Through a sheet of glass below come the rays of light which are to illuminate the rising stream. Directly beneath each aperture is a strong light known as an "80 ampere light," with a two-feet corneolic reflector below to intensify the light. Between the light and the water is arranged a great wheel, between the spokes of which are glasses of different colors. When the lights and water are turned on, the wheel revolves slowly, and the effect is a most wonderful succession of artistic colors, enchanting and beautiful. Whether the gates are closed at night or not, these fountains, running simultaneously until ten o'clock at night, may be seen by visitors, and these groups of geysers, with their marvelous dyes leaping into space, will assuredly be one of the most fantastic and bewildering scenes of the entire Fair.

A programme has been arranged of entertainments to be given to the Duke of Veragua and his brother, Marque de Barboalas, during their stay in Chicago. The Duke is the direct lineal descendant of Columbus. They will arrive next week at the auditorium, and during their stay will be befittingly feted by Presidents Palmer and Higinbotham, and other dignitaries of the Fair and city.

Germany made such a poor exhibition at the Philadelphia Exposition that her own commissioner was compelled to denounce it as "cheap and nasty." "Rich and marvelous" would be a more proper term to use in describing the display to be made by the Fatherland at this greatest of all expositions. Whether in art or machinery, China-ware or domestic display, in printing or electrical exhibits, in the official contribution, or in the semi-official "German Village" on Midway, it is safe to say no more comprehensive exhibition of the resources and intelligence of any country will be made. The total space to be occupied by Germany will be 500,000 square feet, and the privats exhibitors will number upwards of 6,000. The Government building, known as the "Deutsches Haus," is of the early German renaissance style of architecture, and represents an expenditure of $250,000. It is one of the most remarkable and beautiful on the entire expanse of the Park. It has a frontage of 150 feet, by the depth of 175 feet, and is 78 feet in height. Bay windows, projecting turrets and towers lend a most pleasing and picturesque effect.

The exhibit by Krupp Gun Works forms a most interesting part of the German display. The monster gun of 127 tons, the largest ever cast, is among last week's arrivals at the White City. It was accompanied by several smaller guns of 40 and 60 tons each, and an assortment of other huge appliances for use in war and in peace. One of the structures on Midway Plaisance which is attracting no inconsiderable attention, and which will be a prominent feature of that interesting portion of the great Fair, is the Ferris wheel for conveyance of passengers. It will be 264 feet in height. Around it, suspended between the two columns by steel trunnion pins, will be cars, each having a seating capacity for 60 persons. The entire structure is of steel, and resembles an old-style waterwater wheel, in that it consists of a stiff outer crown, which is suspended from the center axle by a system of iron rods. The wheel practically consists of two wheels placed on the same axle at a distance of 28 feet apart, and held together by steel ties. The axle is supported by towers 137 feet high, each supported by four legs, two vertical and two horizontal. Passengers, while indulging in their novel ride, will be surrounded by 3,000 electric lights of various colors, which will be turned on and off with charming effect.

Mexico's exhibit is rapidly being placed in order, and as the director of the commissioners, Fernando Perez says, "It will be the finest display ever made by our interesting country." The products of Mexico will be varied as the resources of the country. Four hundred and fifty cases of mineral, each weighing 1,000 pounds, have already arrived. The interior of the Mexican building will be almost completely covered with transparent photographs on glass representing Indian life and scenes and interesting points about the City of Mexico.

Chiming bells operated by electricity will give short hourly concerts in the Manufactures Building next Summer. The clock itself is operated by electricity, and will be regulated directly from Washington. The chiming bells are put in as an exhibit by an Eastern house. There will be a keyboard, similar to that of a piano, in one room of the tower. Any pianist will then be able to play the chimes, as each key, when depressed, completes an electrical circuit striking a certain note. A strip of heavy paper passes over a roller, similar to the strips working in tickers bearing returns from the races. On each strip are a number of perforations, which allow the contacts necessary to produce the chimes. Any air wanted can be punched on the strips.

The Arabs, in their contact with civilization, seem to have lost none of their native traits. Indeed, spurred on by beer and hot sausage, these "sons of the desert" have been making it lively for nearly everybody with whom they have become acquainted. One day we hear of their attacking the Esquimaux, and the next they are running foul of the policemen. They seem fully bent on fistic exhibits, and if no one else confronts them, they are at each other's throats, or belaboring each other's sconces with sticks and stones, regardless of the effect upon their red fez caps, or patriarchal robes. The men are rapidly becoming devotees of Bacchus, and, unless restrained, will be fit subjects for the Keeley Institute before the Fair is over. The women, however, are very quiet and retiring. They are generally dark, with soft, velvety eyes, although among the number at the Park is one with hair which would justify one to make a hurried search for the white horse. The eyebrows are freely painted; this, together with striped hosiery and French heeled slippers, gives these citizens from Cairo a decided nineteenth century appearance.

Chicago, April 18.

Camp Meeting Associations.

The legal status and consequent privileges of camp meeting associations constitute a very pertinent question in some quarters, and one which must be settled at once, or serious results will follow.

Such an association has no recognition whatever in our law. This does not mean that they are unlawful. They serve a very good purpose, but have no legal status and no legal rights. Members of the Methodist Church have a perfect right to so associate themselves, if they wish; so have they a right to form a debating club or farmers' association; but a camp meeting association has no more right to control the conduct of a camp meeting than a debating club to control a protracted meeting. A camp meeting, like a protracted meeting, is only one form of public worship, all of which are under the direction of the preacher in charge or presiding elder. If the camp ground belongs to the M. E. Church, South, it, like other preaching-places, is held "in trust, that said premises shall be used, kept, maintained and disposed of as a place of divine worship for the use of the ministry and membership of the M. E. Church, South, subject to the discipline, usage and ministerial appointments of said church, as from time to time authorized and declared by the General Conference of said church, and the Annual Conference within whose bounds the said premises are situated."

Now, by the law, as well as usage, the preacher in charge, and, when present, the presiding elder, have charge of all the public worship at any place of worship belonging to our church. If the grounds do not belong to our church, and yet we hold a camp meeting thereon, they are, for the time being, lent to our church, and the same order is the legal order. Some camp meeting associations appoint committees on public worship. They have no more right to do so than a Ladies' Aid Society or a debating club has to appoint such a committee to direct the filling of the pulpit at a protracted meeting. If the pastor and presiding elder would like the advice of a few godly laymen, there is no reason to deny them the favor, and they may select or request the association to appoint these advisers; but the law makes these preachers responsible for the filling of the pulpit, and no pastor and no presiding elder can surrender his right, or fail from any cause to perform this duty, without recreancy to his high trust. He can not, willingly or unwillingly, delegate this work to an irresponsible camp meeting association without blame and without hurt, directly or indirectly, to the church. Suppose A, B and C form a club, and say that Rev. X Y Z must preach every fourth Sunday in Woodville station; then suppose this club goes further and says that Rev. X Y Z shall preach every Sunday—where is the pastor? Where will be the Methodism of that church? Now, if a camp meeting association does this thing for one week, why may not it, or some other irresponsible body unknown to the law, do it for fifty-two weeks in the year?

Some camp meeting associations arrogate to themselves the right to invite certain noted evangelists. If this irresponsible body, unknown to the law, shall this year have Rev. Sam Jones to hold the camp meeting, why may it not have Mr. O P Q, a Campbellite, next year to do the same thing? If, in the judgment of the pastor, it is well to have Bro. Jones, or any other evangelist, let him invite him, because it is his prerogative to do so, and at the Annual Conference his official acts will be brought under careful review, and he will be held strictly responsible for the way in which he performs these duties, and the church thereby is secure against the insidious introduction of unmethodistic innovations; while, on the other hand, if we permit an extra-legal usage of leaving this matter to irresponsible control, to become prevalent, there will arise an occasion in course of time when some hurtful error will run rampant through the church, using our camp meetings as means of propagandism, and the church will be left powerless to avert it.

The camp meeting association has its function. Let it meet faithfully all the demands of that function; but by no means let it assume the functions given by the church only to preachers in charge and presiding elders. I exhort our preachers everywhere: As you love the cause of Christ, so wonderfully advanced through the peculiar methods of Methodism, do not permit any irresponsible man, or set of men, however wise or good, to take control of your pulpit at a camp meeting, protracted meeting, or any other meeting recognized as an arm of public worship. The church holds you responsible for the filling of that pulpit, and you can not get rid of that responsibility, and you must personally see to it that only such men go into that pulpit to teach whose general conduct and teaching you can conscientiously endorse. Do this in the fear of God, or "step down and out," and let the church put a braver and worthier man in your place.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. G. Galloway, Clinton, La., April 17: "The decks are cleared; Clinton is making a forward move. On Sunday, the ninth instant, I received in cash and good subscriptions more than enough to cover all assessments ordered by the Conference for 1893. The first time in eight or ten years this church has come up in full. We will soon remodel our church at a cost of about eight hundred dollars. Bros. Simmons and Tucker have been with us several days in a meeting. Pray for us."

Rev. B. H. Sheppard, P. C., Babb's Bridge, La., April 4: "We have on this work (Spring Creek circuit, Louisiana Conference) five appointments, with a membership, according to our Minutes, of 283. During the present quarter we have received one member on profession of faith; have baptized three infants. Our ladies have collected thirty dollars toward furnishing our parsonage. Everybody seems hopeful. We are working and praying for this work to come to the front this year. Pray for us, brethren."

Rev. G. H. Jacobs, Mt. Pleasant, Miss., April 12: "I am glad to say to the brethren through the ADVOCATE that we are in our new parsonage. Not two months since our parsonage was burned. This shows what can be done when we decide to do something. The brethren and friends deserve great credit because of the interest they have manifested. Men left their farms and worked on the parsonage. While we haven't as much house as we had before, yet we can get along for a while. May the good Lord bless the kind people for their kindness!"

Rev. Chas. R. Montgomery, Washington, La.: "April 9 was a high day with us at Washington; services at eleven o'clock A. M. After reading and commenting on the general rules of the church, we extended an invitation to any wishing to join the church, and five came forward as applicants for membership on profession of faith, and, after administering baptism to three of that number, we proceeded to administer the church vows, and closed the service with, 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!' We have as nice people on this work as ever lived."

Rev. J. D. Harper, Ruston, La., April 15: "We report for Ruston station: Congregations at preaching services good and attentive, prayer meetings well attended; Sabbath-school flourishing, 145 present last Sunday. We have paid $42.25 since Conference on missionary debt, paid $7.75 at Conference, making $50—the amount I pledged to Doctor Morrison—and is more than twenty-five cents per member. Collected $14 for Scarritt Training-school on Easter Sunday. We need more zeal and more genuine religion in this town. Ruston is legally and practically a dry place now."

Rev. J. A. Parker, Homer, La., April 10: "Our meeting continued till Thursday evening of the sixth week. Beside the quickening of the spiritual forces of the membership, about a score were converted, and twenty-one 'added unto them that believe.' Some will join the Baptist and some the Presbyterian Churches. The young men—twenty or more—have organized a young men's prayer meeting, and the young women will organize similarly. Now, with our financial resources worked up, our young station will be in first-class condition for our Conference session for 1893-4."

Rev. C. McDonald: "The Brandon District Conference is to be held at Pelahatchie, July 7 and 8. The mission in connection with Westville circuit, made vacant by the death of Rev. J. E. Lewis (supply), will be filled for the balance of the year by Rev. Louis Kendall. Rev. W. H. Huntley, of Brandon, is to preach the commencement sermon for the Brandon District High School, at Montrose, Miss. Dr. W. B. Murrah has been engaged for an address on education on Saturday, and a sermon on Sabbath of our District Conference. We have just finished the first round. The preachers are all working faithfully. The financial reports better than last year. The indications are good for a prosperous year."

Rev. T. B. Malone, Grenada, Miss., April 9: "We have a wonderful meeting now in progress at Grenada; begun last Sunday. Bro. W. M. McIntosh, of the North Alabama Conference, is with me, working and preaching in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. The churches of the town are taking active part with us. Have had about eighty conversions to date, and a class of forty-three to join our church, and the work goes on gloriously. Our faith compasses two hundred souls, and more. The work is of the Lord. The methods are old-time. Penitents at the altar, church at work, Christians talking to penitents and sinners, and are glad of the chance. 'It's the old-time religion, and it's good enough for me.' It will go on till the God says, 'Stop.' Hallelujah! Pray for us, that God may save every sinner in Grenada."

Rev. W. P. Jones, Amite circuit, April 15: "I wish in this wise to express the appreciation I feel for the kind reception given us by this people on our arrival here. Many welcomed us in person as well as by thoughtful provision for our wants, which manifestation of esteem continues to this day. I assert with pride that my charge is in a better spiritual condition than it was at the beginning of the year. We have four good Sunday-schools, with efficient superintendents, who spare no toil to promote the kingdom of Christ. I believe I can boast of more earnest praying members, young and old, than any other preacher in the district. It is, indeed, soul-inspiring to hear in our prayer and class meetings (organized this year) prayers from youths of fifteen years, echoed by hearty Amens as far back as three generations. May God bless these good people, and bring them to the eternal reward of the righteous!"

Rev. W. M. Williams, Decatur, Miss., April 17: "We are moving upward, and looking still higher. We have organized two prayer meetings since I wrote you, that are doing good work. The people showed their appreciation by their attendance and willingness to pray, sing, or do anything we want them to do. Our presiding elder, Bro. McDonald, was with us at our quarterly meeting, Saturday and Sunday, at Centerville. Our reports for this second quarter were gratifying to him as well as to us. Notwithstanding the stringency in finances, we made the best report for the second quarter that this work has ever made. Besides the money paid for parsonage, these people have paid their entire assessment for Conference claimants, and nearly one-fifth of the preacher's salary. Three of the stewards were sick, and did not work, or I think they would have paid one-fourth. Have sent on ten new subscribers to the ADVOCATE. We are praying and expecting a revival all over this work. Pray for us."

Rev. Isaac L. Peebles: "Enterprise and Stonewall charge consists of three appointments, at two of which we have a new church-building, erected during Bro. J. W. Chambers' pastorate here. They are nice buildings. Other important changes were made by him for the betterment of this charge. (He lacked much of being a failure here.) We are now agitating the subject of a new church at Enterprise, and we think, from all indications, that our people will build, or, at least, begin one this year. Our congregations are good and attentive. We have some spiritual members, and may the Lord grant that the day is not far off when all will be spiritual, for we know without it all else will avail nothing in the judgment. Our second Quarterly Conference has been held. At each Conference our presiding elder, Bro. T. L. Mellen, was present with his characteristic spirit of forward movement on all lines of church work. Our finances are coming up very well, considering the stringency of the times. All of the Bishops', half of the foreign missionary and Conference claimants, and some on all the rest of the assessments, have been paid."

Rev. T. B. White, Arcadia, La., April 19: "Our presiding elder, Bro. Sheppard, has been confined to his bed several days, suffering acutely and intensely with facial neuralgia, with other complications. Light is repulsive; he can scarcely recognize anyone. He is so greatly afflicted that he can not get to his quarterly meetings. He requests me to say to his preachers to collect and forward to him the amount due the presiding elder; to proceed with the quarterly meetings until the good Lord shall permit him to meet them, which may be in three or four weeks. His physician, Dr. Atkinson, tells me it will likely be that length of time before he can get out to work. Let prayer be made for our brother. We are in the midst of a glorious revival of religion at this place. Rev. R A. Davis, my oldest nephew, has been preaching the blessed gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ to large and serious congregations with great power and acceptability for about ten days. Altar full of penitents. One has claimed the blessing of conversion, and two the blessing of sanctification. We praise God, give him all the glory, take courage, and press on to greater and more glorious experiences in the kingdom which 'is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.'"

Rev. P. Howard, Adams circuit, Mississippi Conference: "This is my first attempt to write from Adams this year: First, because I have had nothing of special interest, and am by no means fond of scribbling any way. Second, I see your columns have been pounded and 'breeze-shaken' so heavily that you need a rest. Even now I have neither ordinary nor 'extraordinary pounding' to report; but it may be due the good people (if not all) of Adams circuit to say that the atmosphere around our parsonage has been kept in pretty healthy circulation since Conference, and though finances are low, yet by the assistance of a good merchant steward, who sells the preacher goods on account at cost, we are getting on moderately well. One item of interest I may note is the fact that we have two Sabbath-schools at country churches that do not hibernate, and a weekly prayer meeting has been kept up at Adams every Wednesday night for years. Think of old men and young men, (as well as ladies), after working in the field all day, coming out from one to six miles to prayer meeting. Do those pounding churches do better? And yet there is much to deplore among us. While our prayer meetings and Sunday-schools are well attended in comparison with those at other places where I have been, there are many that do not attend, and while our Sunday congregations are above an average, the vacant seats of many members are frequently observable. We have organized a new society at Grange Hall, near Summit, with sixteen members, where we hope to build up a permanent and prosperous church."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Port Vincent circuit, Mississippi Conference: "By virtue of the location of the parsonage and other things considered, this work should be known as the Bayou Barbary circuit. We have four regular appointments on this work, and preach twice at each appointment monthly. I have met every engagement, preached thirty-two sermons, baptized three infants, received five members into the church, married two couples, held four Church Conferences, made eighty pastoral visits, secured seven new subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, raised in cash and subscription $90 75 and $10 for missionary debt, which will be forwarded in a few days; made two tables, five gate latches and two pairs of door-steps. This accounts for my not having made my report sooner—plenty to do. My people are so kind and good to us that I have not been troubled at all about the necessaries of life. Plenty has been and is being furnished daily. They look out for me, and I am praying and working for their spiritual improvement. We have three regular prayer meetings on the work; two of them well attended; one young men's prayer meeting that is proving to be of great good. Last, but not least in importance, is the children's prayer meeting at Maurepas Church, conducted by Sister A. Detress, who is proving, to the satisfaction of all, very efficient in this line of work, where little children pray and commune with their dear Lord, and their souls are made happy in his love. I heard seven children pray in that meeting one Sunday morning. They always meet every Sabbath at ten o'clock A. M. There have been four bright conversions in these children services. I hope this report will be the means of cheering other congregations, and cause them to see what the little ones can do. Bishop Keener's timely piece has been instrumental in stirring and awaking a deeper interest on the part of many of my people; also stimulating this band of little workers to nobler and higher aspirations."

STORM AT FREE RUN, MISS.

We often read of storms upon the homes of our traveling preachers, depositing many valuables, and we felt glad for them; and the same kind of a storm came to the home of a local preacher, even our home, depositing hams, sugar, coffee, tea, rice, molasses, potatoes, and many other valuables that we highly appreciate. We pray the Lord to continue to bless this good people, and help us to have access to their hearts and minds, to the salvation of their souls.

FORGIVENESS.

BY DELDEE CROFT.

A little sorrow came to me to-day,
A little blow, not meant, perhaps, but given;
And after it was o'er I could but kneel to pray—
The friendship of long years was riven—
"Bend over me, dear God."

Kneeling it seemed so long before the words would come;
The heart was hot, the thoughts were restless, too
I tried to find some soft forgiving words, some Words which I might speak and never rue;
They would not come.

I kneeled on still, I wanted so to pray:
But I could not forgive, it hurt me so.
"Lord, I forgive!" I could not, could not say.
"Brood over me in love."

But still the attitude of prayer I kept;
I felt that God would know I meant to pray.
I think I may have gently wept,
But "I forgive" I could not say.
"Dear God, give me the strength."

A soft sweet peace came over all,
My heart was full, I could not see.
"Dear Father, do you hear me call?
Forgive, forgive thou me!
I thank thee, thank thee, God."
And sweet peace came.

The Sanctity of the Pulpit.

"Take off the shoes from off thy feet, for the ground whereon thou standest is holy ground." Christianity is the insignia of national as well as individual greatness. Even so also is national and individual greatness inseparably linked with a cherished reverence for the sanctity of the pulpit.

The pulpit runs back and fades into the ancient Jewish altar. They both have the same origin and are destined for one and the same purpose. That which was symbolical in the altar has ceased to be a type, but has found in the pulpit a fulfillment. That which was prefigured in the ceremonies of the altar is from the pulpit preached as a risen and glorified Redeemer. Respect and reverence for the pulpit is essential, not only on account of its nature and origin, but because a man can neither love or worship that which he does not respect. So important has this been deemed that religionists have ever attempted to encircle the pulpit with all those external embellishments which are calculated to keep alive in the mind of the worshiper the most profound respect for the pulpit, its ordinances and ministers. The ancient Jewish priest dared not approach the sacred altar, gorgeous and gilded with the golden cherubim with encircling wings, and divinely aromatized with the sweetest frankincense of earth's fairest gardens, and he robed in gold and ermine with the costly trappings of his sacred office, even he, dared not approach the awful presence of the Most High until by fast and penitential offerings he had purified himself, and then he trod in the sacred presence softly, and ever as he would pronounce his Maker's name it would be with a breathing whispering of the name, "Je-ho-vah." How does this compare with the methods of some evangelists, who vaunt boldly into the pulpit, and when there rig and jeer the audience with light jests and coarse jokes, with sallies of wit and shady allusions, with a dash of the bravado and a mixture of the priest, with a description of their own prior depravity, but great successes since they have become evangelist, end, finally, with a great display of the man, with but little of the preacher?

Much of this is at the expense of the sanctity of the pulpit, and though the audience may jeer and laugh, it is that laughter which makes the sincere Christian shudder. Mark the tendency to frivolity and lightness in the house of God—for the beginning of these things is the disintegretion of the church.

What is it that gives the pulpit so great a hold on the masses and commands their respect and homage? It is its divine office and the office and character of those who minister therein, and whenever the occupant of a pulpit says aught or acts otherwise than es becomes his holy office, he is so far and to such extent an ambassador of evil and not of good.

Can a man handle fire and not be burned? Can a man walk through the flames and not be scorched? Even so, neither can a man use the rough jest and rude joke, bring the action and manners of him who performs before the footlights into the pulpit, lowering the pulpit to the level of the hustings, without disrobing it of the respect and reverence of the people.

Don't misunderstand me. I reverence that minister who with a bold fearlessness denounces vice in its multifarious forms. I could listen to this all day. The most ruining invective and withering sarcasm that ever fell from human lips was used by the Savior.

Listen: "Ye generation of vipers—ye whited sepulchers; ye strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." These as adapted to the men and times have never been surpassed. This was bold and cutting, but chaste and correct. There is not the least savor of impropriety about it. We are told by tradition that the ancient Jew would not gather fuel on the Sabbath lest the cracking of the dry leaves under the feet would disturb the holy calm of this day of rest. Yet we have seen and heard laughter from ill-timed jokes and light jests on the Sabbath in the house of God—and that, too, emanating from the pulpit.

Is this the reverential spirit which should characterize the altar? Is this the mien and manner of one who feels impressed, not only impressed, but who bows in reverential homage before the high and transcendently august Presence into which he has come, and who in the spirit of, "Speak Lord, thy servant heareth," talks as a dying man to dying men? Will such a one have any of these things? Mark this contrast to the reverent minister: This latter enters with a kind of swagger, careless, with an utter absence of anything like humility or reverence, and begins his discourse—I will not say sermon—with something like this, "You fellows in the rear there; you are out with your sweethearts to-night, but where will you go when you take them home?" And again, "You flop-eared hounds, why don't you do so and so." My God! men and brethren, is the pulpit the place for such language as this? Are our wives and daughters to be forced to hear in the house of God such language in, to them, the holiest place on earth? Are our sons to hear such language from the pulpit as their fathers would not use in the presence of their wives and daughters? Is the pulpit to be the mouthpiece of such language as is not tolerated in good society? Is the sanctity of the pulpit to be preserved?

I know that such talk and conduct in the pulpit draws crowds. There is a certain element in society that has a prurient itching for such preaching as will make a modest woman hang her head in blushes. Why is it that such preaching draws crowds? It is, in the first place, on account of the novelty of the thing, but principally by reason of the earth, earthy, in us that makes us love the earthy. Did you ever see an humble, sincere Christian minister—a man who when he entered the pulpit felt that he was on holy ground—use such language? No, and you never will. The one is the language of him who walks the boards of the theatre; the other, the high priest on whom the ineffable glory of the Shekinah has shone, and whose shiboleth of "Holiness to the Lord" awakes responsive echoes from those who serve with him in the Illuminated Presence.

I would ask, Why is it that these breaches of pulpit decorum and propriety are confined almost entirely to discussion of transgression between the sexes? And the language and jokes offend principally because the one is impure and the other filthy. I have listened to sermons two-thirds of which were devoted to ringing the changes on this subject. Surely there are other sins of, at least, equal importance. This particular offense is not pre eminent in the catalogue of offenses. Examine the Savior's sermons and see how he treats this subject and the relation it bears to other subjects of his discourses. These men do not find the pattern after which they preach in the Bible. They take to these forbidden subjects with a keen avidity. They pass by all the great crimes and serious misdemeanors and light joyfully on this, and there they dwell. The blushes of the ladies have no effect on them. They seem even to roll these blushes as a sweet morsel under their tongues. You would think that they were appointed and commissioned to deal with this one subject. Why the necessity for this? There is no vice which can not be denounced, and yet in a manner that will not offend the most modest. Then, why not use this method? Do you wish to break down all distinction, so far as the rules of decorum are concerned, between the sexes? Do you wish that men talk to ladies and treat them as if they were men? Shall a man be allowed to talk in a crowd of ladies as if he were talking to men? I repeat, do you wish to break down those rules of decorum and correct deportment founded on the divinely created differences between the sexes? Are you a nihilist? Do you wish no distinction made between men and women in the use of language?

We all know that the difference between an immodest word and an immodest act is very slight, and that the one quickly passes into the other in the case of females, so that when you break down modesty in the use of language, you will soon have no modesty in action. These things may appear at first trifling and of little importance, but they are all-important, and are founded on the divinely created relation of the sexes, and when you make war on modesty in the use of language, you also at the same time attack modesty in action.

The regular ministry do not offend in these particulars—at least, ours do not. The regular Methodist ministry are gentlemen—they are gentlemen both in and out of the pulpit. They are clean-mouthed, clean-handed and clean-headed. They are as modest as women; yet in the defense of right, as the bearers of a sacred banner, as the color guard of a royal Captain, they are the bold and fearless champions of the right. With a just appreciation of their duties, and with royal loving hearts, they in humility and reverence preach a pure gospel. LAYMAN OR SEXTUS.

Letter from Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me to resume my "experiences," a bit of which I gave you some months ago? The last was of our District Conference, in which allusion was made to the fact that in two or three counties, with an area nearly half as large as the whole State of Mississippi and a population of about 30,000 people, there was scarcely ever any preaching, and that most of this people is more approachable by us than by anybody else. Well, a month later I had opportunity to see much of this country.

Just before noon on a Monday I got off the train about sixty miles south of Grant's Pass, where I was met by one of our old pioneer preachers, Rev. R. C. Ogleshy, and we started on a jaunt over the mountains. We, however, spent that morning and night only a few miles away, enjoying the luxury of Jackson county, Soda Springs, or one set of them, for within a few miles there are several clusters of them. Several times next morning we had a view of that wonder in engineering skill where the S. P. R. R. doubles upon itself no less than three times in crossing the Siskiou Mountains. We had been told that in crossing the mountains you had to drive over rocks that were like sugar barrels thrown along the streets. Oftimes it was even worse, for while one wheel is so low you fear falling down, there is danger of striking a rock with the upper wheel and throwing both buggy and riders far down the mountain side below. Of course, the rocks are fast to the earth; still occasionally we would meet persons driving one horse. How they got over these rough places I could not see, but they did it, and in some instances the drivers were women. Our first night out was quite oppressive, for the mountains to the north of us were on fire, and the smoke was quite oppressive. The second night we reached Klamath Falls on the Klameth river. There is a village of 600 to 800 inhabitants situated in as romantic a place as one will seldom find. There are two lakes, the upper about 8x35 miles in extent, upon which steamers run, the lower about 2 or 3x12 miles, and they are about one mile apart, with nearly 100 feet fall, giving a magnificent water power. On the west side the mountains come almost to the river, but east and south there are large scopes of sage brush lands, and much of it is being brought into cultivation, and the people are beginning to avail themselves of the advantage of this great water advantage by taking out irrigating ditches, for it must be recollected there is not much rain in this portion of the State. It begins to snow in November and generally continues until March or April, when most of their "season" is gone. But the many mountain streams of pure limpid water makes full amends for want of rain, for where there is any concert of action upon the part of the people they can soon irrigate all the land they want. True, early or tender vegetables do not flourish here, the altitude in the valleys being over 3,000 feet above sea level. Still the cereals and harder fruits do well; but the chief business is stock raising, and it is surprising how stock thrives. There is a grass called "bunch grass" grows thickly over mountain and plain, and is as nourishing after it dries as when green, and stock seem to relish it as well. There is a large Indian reservation which comes to the upper lake in the east, and extends up Hood, Williamson and Sprague rivers to the north and east, which has a large lot of fine land, and there being less than 1,000 of these Indians, when they sell to the government and the land is thrown open there will be a rush for settlement.

I noticed, as we were driving through some of these unsettled "prairies"—they called them—stakes set up along the road like I've seen in creek and river bottoms in the South. I asked what they were for. "To enable you to keep the road." "Why, the water does not get that high along here," said I, for I thought of some experiences in Big Black river bottom. 'On no, but the snow does." "What! as high as those stakes?" "Yes, the snow frequently gets six feet deep and sometimes deeper, and the mercury goes down to forty-two degrees below zero here on the plains and valleys." "Whew! how do you stand it?" "Our blood becomes thick and we do not mind it." We have two preachers in this vast region of country, and they tell me the best meetings they hold is in these coldest spells and when snow is deepest. They harness their sleighs and hurry to church, cover their horses and have their best times, for there is little to do and the nights are very light.

We spent a week in and near Klamath, preaching at night and hunting and fishing during the day. We had a unique experience along the falls one morning. I feel sure we must have seen 1,000 snakes in two hours' time. They seemed to be everywhere and on everything. They were from size of thumb to half as large as wrist. Fortunately they were harmless. One of our preachers told us he had seen fish so thick in one of the rivers there that you could back a large wagon into the stream and fill it with fish with a pitchfork in a few minutes; that actually they were wedged so close that their fins formed an almost solid surface above the water, and this when the river was up. It is during what they call the running season.

We continued our trip eastward up the headwaters of Lost River, then across into Lake county on to Sprague river, where we also spent several days visiting, fishing, hunting and preaching. Returning down Sprague, we crossed the cascades at Crater Lake and down the romantic Rogue river, home. Much occurred and was seen on this latter trip worthy of note, but we can not tell it now. Maybe we will do so before long.

Rev. T. Y. Armstrong.

Rev. Thomas Young Armstrong, eldest son of Andrew and Sarah Armstrong, was born in Bullock county, Ga., Aug. 21, 1812, and peacefully fell on sleep on the morning of March 7, 1893.

The father was a farmer of moderate means, and young Thomas early became disciplined in the use of the plow and hoe. Pushing their way westward with the tide of emigration, he was kept from school advantegee, except such as could be had from the "village school." But his parents left to him a legacy richer than houses and lands—a legacy of an unspotted family record and a deeply pious example; the blessings of a home where the first thoughts of childhood were thoughts of God and his Christ, and the first lispings were accents of prayer. He was of staunch Methodist parentage. His family has given many preachers to the Methodist Church, not a few of whom are men of superior ability. Rev. T. Y. Armstrong, of the Alabama Advocate, is a relative. His ministerial relatives are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

In 1835 young Armstrong attended a meeting near Allinton, Wilcox county, Ala., where he professed religion, and ever after that his conversion was an undoubted fact of his life's history. It was through the preaching of Rev. James Shaw that this change was wrought.

For some time he debated a call to the ministry, but finally yielded, and in May of 1841 he was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Cedar Creek circuit, Alabama Conference, and in December, of the same year, he was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference, which met at Mobile. During the year of 1842 he traveled the Kemper circuit, and in 1843 he was on the Lauderdale circuit. During this year he met, wooed and wed Miss Amanda S. Simmons, of Sumpter county, Ala., who was, indeed, a helpmete for him. She has been the silent partner in all his labors, and has shared his joys and sorrows alike. She now gazes in silence at the vacant chair, made dearer by nearly fifty years of companionship. Nine children were born of this union.

Our sainted brother has served charges from which he received less than $75, and has often lived and supported his family on less than $250 per year, and yet, by the care of his wife—for she has been "business manager" of the home—they have never allowed one dollar's worth of goods to be charged to them.

He was ordained deacon by Bishop James O. Andrew at Wetumpke, Ala., in 1845, and was ordained elder by Bishop Paine at Montgomery, Ala., in 1847.

The following gives the places and dates of his ministerial labors: Kemper circuit, 1842; Lauderdale circuit, 1843; Fayetteville circuit, 1844; Winchester circuit, 1845; Pascagoula circuit, 1846; Lower Peach Tree circuit, 1847; Winchester Colored Mission, 1848; Gaston circuit, 1849 and 1850; Lower Peach Tree circuit, 1851; Lauderdale circuit, 1852; Gaston circuit, 1853 and 1854; Lower Peach Tree circuit, 1855; Gaston Colored Mission, 1856; Arcola Colored Mission, 1857. At the close of the Conference year, 1857, he was located at his own request, but was readmitted into the Mississippi Conference in December of 1870, and traveled the Decatur mission in 1871; Enterprise circuit, 1872, 1873 and 1874; Chunkey circuit, 1875; Marion circuit, 1876 and 1877; DeKalb circuit, 1878; Shady Grove mission, 1879; Philadelphia circuit, 1880; Shady Grove mission, 1881; Enterprise circuit, 1882. December 16, 1882, he asked for and obtained a superannuated relation.

It will be seen from the above list that three years of his ministerial labors were spent as a missionary to the slaves. In his latter years he reflected over this part of his labors with a great deal of satisfaction. The unquestioning manner with which the "brother in black" received the truth delighted this missionary. As long as strength permitted him to preach, he preached to the negroes as often as occasion allowed.

As a student, he was a man of two books—the Bible and hymn book. He never thought that Christianity needed any aid from science. "A thus saith the Lord" was all the authority he wanted. But few preachers are more familiar with the Bible than he was. When in his strength his voice was strong and clear, and his gospel songs have strangely warmed many a soul. I have not known anyone who retained such a store of hymns in his memory. In his last illness, when he seemed unconscious of all things about him, I, sitting at his side, with open hymn book, would read the first two lines of most any hymn. He would then take up the remaining lines, and would some time go over the remaining verses.

As a pastor, he was painstaking, looking well after every detail of the work. He believed that it was easier to form character than to reform it; therefore, looked well after the children. He was familiarly called "Uncle Tommie" by the young people. His preaching was practical, spiritual and scriptural. He has witnessed many revivals as the fruits of his preaching. To preach was to him a joy, and he preached with as much fervor to ten as to a hundred. Once, on a cold Sunday morning, he went to church, and found a congregation of one—a young man. Bro. Armstrong preached to this audience. The young man afterward became a lawyer, and died in Meridian; but he never forgot this sermon, which influenced him until the day of his death.

Below I add the testimony of a few friends of our glorified brother who have known him long and intimately.

Rev. R. S. Woodward writes: "As a child, I knew him as the faithful pastor of my father's family—an earnest preacher, mighty in prayer; an incessant worker in the vineyard of God." ..."While he made no compromise with sin, but preached the terrors of Sinai, there was a vein of tenderness that melted the sinner's heart into contrition."

Dr. T. S. West says: "He was patient and painstaking in youth, bold and fearless in middle manhood, gentle and sweet-spirited in old age."

Rev. George Bancroft writes: "I never knew a more sincere Christian minister in my life. He always grew on me. His memory is as ointment poured forth."

Bro. Armstrong grew old beautifully. He was as sweet-spirited at eighty as at twenty-eight. He did not believe that the brightest days of the church were in the past. He gloried in her prosperity. He often said that he helped to fell the trees, and now the younger brethren were cultivating the ground. His was a life of labor. Living at a time when our preachers preached every day, save one, he traveled circuits with thirty, or more, appointments, which covered an area as large, or larger, than a presiding elder's district. He never missed an annual session of his Conference. Once, while on his way, his horse fell and broke the rider's leg, which detained him for a day; but he answered to roll-call. I count it one of the great blessings of life to have been associated with him for fifteen months. During this time he anxiously awaited the end. His eyesight became so dim he could not read, and his mind so weak he could not think; but he kneeled in family prayer night and morning, though often in silence; yet he went through the form and observed the spirit. Though gasping for breath, he got strength enough to leave the dying testimony, "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," and then peacefully entered into rest—the reward of a quiet, though glorious life.

Have a Care.

Some weeks ago Bro. J. A. Parker wrote us some words in season about improving parsonage property, to all of which we say from the heart, "So mote it be." Yet there are other things growing out of the same subject which seem to me to be ripe for development. We would "improve this occasion" by earnest exhortation to the brethren who revolve with the "great iron wheel" to take care of the improvements already made, as well as add thereto. In several different sections of our Conference territory I have found the same complaint, viz.: that it avails little to plant either fruit or flowers at our parsonages. On several occasions, as I would diligently plan and work to produce desirable, beautiful and useful result of careful horticulture, I've been almost jeered at by the leading brethren and the sisters of parsonage faithfulness. The all, but universal story has been: "Bro. A and Bro. B tried that faithfully here years ago, and more recently; but Bros C, D, E, F and G either turned in the stock and destroyed it all, or let the 'little hatchet' brigade cut down and hack to death all that was so hopefully progressing."

In some places "the saints" have gotten so disheartened that they view with actual disfavor any effort to improve "the glebe," fearing it will prove another opportunity for all to pass by the way to pluck our vineyard, saying: "What sort of men are preachers, anyhow?" Some generous laymen who keep nurseries have often given freely of their fruit and flowers to the parsonages; but they are become very weary when, coming around a few years later, they find only stumps, or vacant places, which their liberality once filled. I do not wonder; but I do marvel that any minister of the gospel who ought to be educated, heart and life, to benefiting the race, should be so thoughtless of his successors (they have some humanity and ought not to be exoluded from sympathetic aid), so careless of the influence this neglect has on the laity and the argus-eyed world, and so reckless of his own character, as to pursue such a course. It would be incredible if not so palpable.

I leave it to some good slater to exhort on the occasional neglect of the parsonage, where dishes, etc., are scattered and peeled too much, walls are sometimes defaced in shameful style.

Brethren, for very shame, let us turn over a new leaf in caring for parsonage concerns. ITINERANT.

Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The second annual meeting of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference convened in Macon, Miss., April 7. The officers were all present and the representation very good. The session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. N. B. Fant. The president, Mrs. Somerville, is a very efficient officer, and the business was transacted with perfect system and harmony, and all present were inspired with renewed zeal and energy in this all-important work. The reports from the various districts were encouraging, and show a large increase in membership.

The program throughout was interesting and helpful. The address of welcome by Mrs. Featherston and response by Mrs. Hargrove evinced much earnestness in arousing our people to the duty of providing homes for the preachers. The president's address was very explicit in detailing the various fields for home mission work, stressing the duty of a "word fitly spoken" to different sinners, as well as visiting the distressed and relieving the needy.

Mrs. Smith represented the Woman's Missionary Society with fraternal greetings, and assurances of perfect sympathy and an earnest desire that new fields opened up and the good extended throughout our own "native land," as well as sending the joyful tidings of salvation "over land and sea." Mrs. Short, in behalf of the W. C. T. U., presented fraternal greetings and bade us "God-speed" in the good work.

The Revs. J. H. Mitchell (pastor of the Macon Church), D. L. Cogdell, E. Buck, D. W. Babb and R. I. Allen were all in attendance, with kind words and expressions of much interest in the success of the work.

The sermon on Sunday, by Rev. A. Bowen, was replete with encouragement to woman's work in all of its departments.

The Sunday afternoon service, conducted by Mrs. Hargrove in her felicitous style, was a delightful occasion. And the praise service, Sunday evening, brought us to the great source of all success, and was one of real consecration to the work of the Lord.

Our motto for this year is, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (II. Tim. ii, 15.)

MRS. J. S. FEATHERSTON,
Conference Corresponding Secretary.

The exhibit of the American Bible Society at the Columbian Exposition will be unique and interesting. Many rare and valuable volumes from the library in the Bible House in this city have been shipped to Chicago, among which are a copy of the original King James edition, published in 1611; a fac-simile of the first page of the first Bible ever printed, a copy of the Biblia Pauperum, presenting the art of printing from wooden blocks before the invention of movable types, and the English Hexepla, showing six early versions of the Scriptures together with the Greek text. There will be a free distribution of the New Testament, and 250,000 copies of the five-cent edition have been printed to meet the probable demand.—Christian at Work.

It is the pulpit's duty to keep people away from the drink. It is the saloon man's duty to keep drink away from the people, but where one of these ends and the other begins is a question that no one can find out; for which reason it would seem that the statesman is largely a divine, and the best doctor of divinity something of a statesman.—Union Signal.

INTRODUCTORY.

The Book of Proverbs, in its original form, was probably written by Solomon. It consists, then, it is thought, of chapters x-xxii, 16, of the present collection, and presents a collection of brief, pointed sayings expressive of that practical wisdom, and suited to the requirements of every-day life. To this collection was added, at a later period, the introductory section, comprising the first nine chapters, and consisting of a description, in highly poetical and beautiful style, of wisdom personified. From time to time other additions were made, the most important of which—Hezekiah's collection—consists of chapters xxv-xxix, and is supposed to have been added during the reign of King Hezekiah. The remaining chapters, xxx and xxxi, are supposed to represent three distinct passages added at different times: The words of Agar (xxx), (2) the words of King Lemuel (xxxi, 1-9), and (3) the description of the virtuous woman (xxxi, 9-31). The whole book is part of what is called the "Wisdom Literature" of the Bible, the other books of this section being Job, Ecclesiastes and Solomon's Songs. The dates of the different collections would, as is evident from what has been said about the composition of the book, extend from Solomon's time (1000 B. C.) to possibly the time of the return from captivity (450 B. C.). The section containing our lesson was written, perhaps, about 900 B. C. "The book of Proverbs is the best statesman's manual that ever written. An adherence to the political economy and spirit of that collection.... would do more to eradicate from a people the vices of extravagance, debasement and ruin than all the contributions to political economy of Say, Smith Matthies and Chalmers put together." (Coleridge.) "The book, as a whole, may be called the book of divine common sense—that is, a book of instruction concerning behavior in the common transactions of life, in which the thought of God and of his continual presence holds the chief place." (Dillon.) "It approaches human things and things divine from quite another side from the prophets or the Psalms. It is the philosophy of practical life. It is the sign to us that life does not despise common sense and discretion....above all, it insists over and over again upon the doctrine that goodness is wisdom, and that wickedness and vice are folly." (Tinley.)

EXPLANATORY.

I.—WISDOM'S CRY.

Ver. 20. "Wisdom crieth without; she uttereth her voice in the streets." In this lesson Wisdom is introduced in the most solemn and impressive manner, publicly inviting men to receive her teachings, warning those who reject and encouraging those who accept the offered instructions." (J. F. and B.) The plural form used here (wisdoms) is thus turned to account by Dr. Hunter in Whedon's Commentary: "The voices of Wisdom are heard all abroad, and especially in the crowded marts of men, in the streets, in the public squares, or in the openings or spaces near the gates, which were great places of concourse and of business; and courts were also held there." Not in solitude, but in the haunts of men, her cry is heard; within the city's walls and outside its gates, wherever men are congregated, the words of instruction are given. "The attitude in which Wisdom is represented in this passage is the attitude in which the Church should constantly find herself." (Parker.)

II.—WISDOM'S WARNING.

Ver. 22. "How long, ye simple ones, while ye love simplicity? And scorners delight them in scorning, and fools hate knowledge?" Here, as in the first clause, three classes are addressed. The simple are the thoughtless, inconsiderate, foolish, who in idle carelessness are content to drift aimlessly along and are subject to the allurements of sin. The scorners are the mockers of virtue and the deriders of those who would warn them of danger; they laugh at piety as being old-fashioned, and ridicule the idea of God punishing sin. "The fools are the worst of all. Saying in their heart that there is no God, they become hardened, obstinate, perverse, hating the knowledge of God because they have rejected." They have reached the very highest degree of folly. They hate knowledge because it condemns them.

Ver. 23. "Turn ye at my reproof; behold I will pour my spirit unto you. I will make known my words unto you." The offer of forgiveness is to the simple, the scorner, the fool, to all upon the condition of turning from the evil way. The promise of the poured spirit is not, I think, to be understood as referring to the Holy Ghost; but, "I will communicate my simple mind to you and explain things in the clearest manner." (Orlon.) "I will make known my words unto you." I will direct you in all knowledge. This promise to pour out the spirit and to make to know words reminds us of Peter's exhortation to grow in grace and in knowledge.

III.—THE WARNING NEGLECTED.

Ver. 24. "I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded." The picture is a very striking one: Wisdom stands pleading and, in earnest solicitude, stretches out her hands, and the thoughtless, the trifler, the sneering scoffer, the sullen fool, all alike refuse. Surely they know not what they do.

Ver. 25. "Ye have set at naught my counsel and would none of my reproof." Ye have contemptuously slighted my warning and disregarded my admonitions. The warnings of wisdom are rejected, the overtures of mercy spurned. The solemn fact is declared, and nothing remains but the description of the consequences: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

IV.—THE CONSEQUENCES OF NEGLECT.

Vers. 26, 27. "I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh." These words are not to be understood as teaching that Wisdom rejoices in the punishment of the wicked or that God will mock the sinner in calamity; but that Wisdom, rejected, turns finally away, and that God, in the inflexible justice of his moral government, will refuse to relieve the miseries of the impenitent sinner. It also declares, with all the authority of inspiration, that the day of calamity and fear will come. How strong the words, how terrible the figures; the storm of fear, the whirlwind of calamity, the flood of distress and anguish shall come upon the wicked!

Ver. 28. "Then shall they call upon me; but I will not answer." It will be too late then. You had better turn to-day. Wisdom calls to-day and is rejected; in that day you will call and be turned away. (See Luke xii, 8, 9.)

Vers. 29, 30. "For they hated knowledge and did not choose the fear of the Lord," etc. These verses substantially repeat the charges of verses 22, 24 and 25, and give the reasons for the final rejection of the incorrigible sinner.

Ver. 31. "Therefore shall they eat the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices." They are not arbitrarily condemned, but simply reap the harvest of their own sowing, and the pleasures that they had devised shall pall upon their taste. The instrumentality of the sin becomes the instrumentality of the suffering.

Ver. 32. "For the turning away of the simple shall slay them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them." Wisdom has said (verse 23), Turn to me, and promised to give her spirit to them who would turn. This invitation has been slighted, and she now declares that the turning away of the simple shall cause their destruction. Their own folly shall slay them, and the prosperity or security of the wicked shall be the cause of their overthrow.

V.—THE WAY OF SAFETY.

Ver. 33. "But whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell securely, and shall be quiet without fear of evil." This verse presents a striking contrast to the warning given above, and the contrast is based upon the difference in character as indicated by the response to Wisdom's call. The one hearkens, the other sets at naught; so while the one dwells securely, the other shall be visited by the whirlwind of calamity; to one there is no fear of evil, upon the other the storm of fear cometh. This man may have been simple, scornful, foolish; but he heard Wisdom's voice and heeded her warning.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. The invitations and warnings of the gospel are to all men. (Verse 20.)

2. The invitation comes to men when and where they need it most. (Verse 21.)

3. He who would teach men must go where men are to be found. (Verse 21.)

4. The danger to men is not found in the fact that they do not hear the warning, but that they love their sins. (Verse 22. See also John iii, 19.)

5. God appeals to both our fears and hopes. His reproofs should alarm and his promises persuade us to come to him. (Verse 23.)

6. So honest are God's warnings and so clear the terms of salvation that the lost will be left without excuse. (Verses 24-27.)

7. The time will come when the impenitent will call, but the call will be in vain. (Verses 28-30.)

8. How unhappy the man whose very pleasures shall become disgusting to him! (Verse 31.)

9. The prosperity of many a wicked man has been his ruin. (Verse 32.)

10. Safety from foes without and from fears within is the reward of the wise.

Raised from the Dead

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery, and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead." Be sure to get HOOD'S.

HOOD'S PILLS should be in every family medicine chest. Once used, always preferred.

Christian Thoughtfulness.

This is one of the crowning graces of Christian character, as set forth in these words: "We, then, that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." The state of being weak is not a cause for reproach, since it is the result of either the inability to rightly apprehend and apply the truth, or of a mingling of false impressions with those of the truth. In either event it is a real state out of which the weak are not able to extricate themselves without aid, and that requires the tenderest thoughtfulness and help, and must not be made the occasion for harsh judgment or treatment. In like manner the strength of the strong is never a cause for praise, only as it is manifested in helpfulness to those who are in need.

The conditions of Christian life require the closest self-study if one would reach the highest development of character and, therefore, of usefulness. It is quite as offensive and sinful for the weak to assume a self-complacence, or dogmatic in insistence of the correctness of their views, as it would be in the strong to glory in their strength or to become oppressive by reason of it. While it is manifestly the duty of the strong to look with Christian charity upon the faults of the weak, and in this same spirit to offer what aid they can, this fact can never justify the refusal of the weak to accept proffered aid that they might become strong. Yet we must keep in view the fact that the greater responsibility rests with the strong. It is there that the apostle places it, and it is there that we must leave it. And it is at this point that the highest development of the real church state is attained. If we have any missi n among ourselves as the body of Christ, it is not found in the effort to please ourselves from the sources of our superior strength while our brother suffers. If we have the spirit of Christ, the manifested character that springs from the desire to be helpful is one of self-denial in deference to the views and feelings of the weaker brother: "For even Christ pleased not himself; but as it is written, the reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me."

Such a spirit manifested in the church would greatly accelerate the desire of the unconverted to come among and to be like us. They would see in us the very helpfulness they so much feel they need, and without which they are assured that effort would only end in failure and disgrace. Then, may it not be so, that there are those in every community who will be lost because of the lack of Christian thoughtfulness? "But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died."

J. M. WEEMS.

Brookhaven, Miss.

Wanted—A Chapel Building Fund.

To the Methodists of New Orleans, and Their Friends:

BRETHREN: It is agreed by all who have studied the problems awaiting solution by the church that the great problem of all is "the furtherance of the gospel" in our cities. The last census revealed the fact that the population is pouring into our cities in an enlarging volume and with a more rapid flow. It matters not what may be the cause of this. The fact is prominent, and we have now to deal with the fact, and not with the cause of the fact. This fact creates a problem for solution which every Christian should study. The church can not ignore the existence of this fact, nor throw off the responsibility which it lays upon her. Our Lord's last command imposed upon the church the obligation to give the gospel to "every creature" in "all the world," and these "marching orders" have never been countermanded by the commander-in-chief. The providence of God seems now to be working in such a manner as to make it easier for the church to fulfill this last command. In this steady stream of humanity toward our cities, millions of "creatures" once "scattered wide and far apart" are being congregated in hearing of the church bells and in easy reach of gospel activity. Has this providential fact no meaning to the people of God whose lots are cast in the cities? Is not this the loudest call the church has had during this century to bestir herself and go forth to carry the Bread of Life to the perishing ones whom God is causing to pass her very doors? Is not the presence of these unsaved ones a loud rap upon the doors of the church, and does not that rap mean, "Give us the Bread of Life"?

Now, there are many thousands of these people in our city. There are acres and acres of thickly populated portions of our city where the people have no gospel privileges whatever. It won't do to say, "The churches are open and free to all." Inviting the people to church is not carrying the gospel to the people. And should they come upon our invitation, where could we home them? We have twelve churches, and when we have filled them to running over, how many do we accommodate? It won't do to say, "Let us fill our churches with hearers before we go after outsiders." If such a method had prevailed in Jerusalem in apostolic times, Christianity would have risen just about to "the dignity of a Judean sect." If Christianity is anything whatever, it is missionary. Its impulse is to go out after the neglected and the lost in the waste places; and Christians show the genuineness of their religion by yielding to that impulse and co-operating with God in the providential facts which he discloses in current history. Brethren, the providence of God in surrounding us with the thousands of unsaved people in this city clearly points out our duty.

I am glad to say that we are doing something to supply the great want that exists. Besides our twelve churches, which are well-manned and are doing excellent work in their several spheres, we have five mission stations, and good work is being done at each point. But the work at all of these stations is hampered for want of suitable chapels in which to carry it on. The Sunday-schools and congregations at these five stations are practically "out of doors." We can not hope for stability for our work, nor for an out-reaching which will embrace the hundreds near those stations, unless we settle ourselves in our own houses. The history of every mission station that has grown into a permanent church is in proof of this statement.

Hence, brethren, this call for a chapel building fund by which we can give homes of permanence to these missions—these children of ours. This call is not inopportune. Our churches are now in a condition to enter upon this enterprise with large prospects of success. We have no church debts that embarrass us. We are at peace among ourselves. The revival spirit is moving in many hearts. We have plenty of workers who will gladly give themselves to this work, if they can be assured their work will be permanent. Now, then, is the time for us to go into this matter with all heartiness. The opportunity to give the gospel to thousands is now in our reach. Will we seize it in the name of the Lord?

It is true that not many of us are rich and able to give thousands of dollars, but all can do something and give something to start this enterprise for the perishing souls around us. We believe there are hundreds of people who are not members of the church who will come to our help in this matter when once they see we are in earnest. Every thoughtful man recognizes the fact that Christianity in a community is a leaven of influence for good in all directions. He knows that the Spirit of Christ working in human hearts sends the pulses of healthy life bounding through all life's relations, and quickens every good thing, and destroys every bad thing. He knows that money invested in such an enterprise brings large returns in blessings which are far better than money itself.

Brethren, the opportunity for a vast forward movement is before our Methodism in this city! May God help us to seize it right away!

Yours in the Lord and for his work,

C. W. CARTER, P. E.

"An Old Disciple."

This is the appellation applied to Mnason, Paul's host on his last visit to Jerusalem. It is possible from tradition that he was one of the "seventy" that Christ had sent forth to say the "kingdom of heaven is at hand." It was more than thirty years since Christ had ascended to heaven, and Mnason was growing old, but he was not lost to public view. He was still useful, and deemed the most fitting of all the saints at Jerusalem to be the host of the great apostle to the Gentiles.

Men need not be mentally dull, nor religiously useless, because they are chronologically old. We think some old men prematurely superannuate themselves from the claims of study and active usefulness. They cease to read, to think, to analyze and apply new accumulations of knowledge—they rust; the edge is beveled off; they are dull, and the verdict of the public relegates them to inaction and obscurity. Except in cases of physical inferiority, this need not be, nor ought to be. Moses and Paul labored up to their last day. Men who have a will to improve, can improve; can keep abreast of their times, and in active sympathy with all its useful movements. Socrates, in old age, studied music to cheer his mind and keep off the gloom of the fast-coming twilight. Cato, at eighty, began the study of Greek. Colbert, the famous French minister, began the study of Latin and law when sixty. Franklin was past fifty before he began the study of philosophy, in which he became so famous.

The Psalmist says that "those who are planted in the courts of the Lord's house shall be fat and flourishing in old age." A life of temperance, of purity, of love and active usefulness keeps them vigorous and bright beyond threescore and ten. Some of the most useful and honored in our Methodism have been illustrious examples of intellectual power and extended usefulness late in life, as Wesley, Asbury, McKendree, Soule, Paine and Dr. Pierce.

An "old disciple" is a most encouraging example to the young and the fearful who hesitate to take the forward step toward God. Life may be long, its conflicts many; the timid fear they may not have persistent grace, may grow weary in well-doing against prolonged opposition. But here before them in the "old disciple" is a most encouraging illustration of the sufficiency of grace to sustain the Christian soldier through many campaigns and hard-fought fields, so that they may boldly dare to avow the name and muster under the banner of Christ. The "old disciple" had resisted the temptations, had borne the crosses, had discharged the duties and overcome the obstacles that had opposed his Christian career.

How many acts of devotion, how many labors of love did this "old disciple" represent! How many times his heart had been glad when they said unto him, "Let us go up into the house of the Lord!" How often in hymning the praise of God in some of the songs of Zion his soul had taken wing and soared to fairer worlds on high! Full many times the old, old story of Jesus and his love had thrilled him with more than mortal rapture. How often with reverential joy he had hailed the return of the "sweet hour of prayer," where he communed with God, and laid his cares and burdens at his feet! How often the dews of grace in these hallowed hours had softly distilled upon his soul! How often he had come down from the mount of prayer with his soul all bright with supernal light! The "old disciple" had lived to see many times over the smiling face that had for a season been hidden by the clouds of adversity and bereavement.

In many conflicts between truth and error, when for a time the fate of the battle had seemed to tremble with doubt, had he seen the clouds disperse, the shadows flee, and victory smile and flash all along the advancing lines of truth.

The "old disciple" has lived to be a tower of strength. His long, consistent, consecrated and useful life has placed his feet upon an imperishable rock of character that commands the respect and reverence of all. All who know him say, "Behold a man of God." His whited locks grace the assemblies of the people, and all his life is a way-mark to God.

How beautiful is sanctified old age! The strifes, the rivalries and the ambitions of life hushed and still. The rushing torrent that poured from the hills has become the deep and gently flowing river of the plain.

The "old disciple" lives and moves in the hallowed circle of a thousand memories, sad or cheering, food for thought, fountains of wisdom and guides for his future steps. The "old disciple" ripened by age, mellowed and softened by the experiences of time, his heart is fragrant with holy graces and cheered and brightened with the glowing hopes of immortality.

J. B. WALKER.

The Revival Meetings.

The revival meetings in our churches continued during the past week with increasing attendance and growing interest. In Carrollton Bro. Henry, assisted by Bishop Keener, had quite a successful week. The numbers in attendance increased to the end of the week. There were several conversions. At Felicity the holiness evangelists, Walker and Rinehart, have had good meetings, and Dr. Beard, the pastor, reports the interest unabated. At Carondelet Bro. La Prade and his people have enjoyed many refreshing seasons. At the theater, on Magazine street, our Baptist brethren, under the lead of Purser Brothers, have had large crowds and many professions of saving grace received. There seems to be a general awakening and quickening of religious life, and we hope to see it continue through the whole year. In behalf of New Orleans, we ask the prayers of every reader of this paper.

The Law and Order Meeting.

Some time ago the Chief of Police and the Police Board put forth the opinion that public sentiment in this city was not in favor of the enforcement of the law against gambling. This was regarded as a monstrous perversion of the real truth of the case, and the Sunday Rest League determined to test the matter. The League issued a call to the citizens to assemble in Washington Artillery Hall, last Monday evening, to say whether they had been correctly reported. The enthusiastic manner in which the call was responded to was very remarkable. By the time the meeting was opened, the great hall was packed from door to platform with hundreds standing in the aisles and vacant places. We have seldom seen such an outpouring of the people. The ladies attended in great numbers. The meeting was a decided success. After several speeches, the following resolutions, which refute the slander put upon the people of this city, were passed by acclamation:

Whereas, There is imbedded in the Constitution of the State of Louisiana and in her statutes an express prohibition of the vice of gambling; And, whereas, There is a statute requiring the observance of Sunday in closing all stores, shops, groceries and saloons; And, whereas, Some of our authorities are willing and ready to enforce these laws, while others are lax in the discharge of their duties; therefore, the citizens of New Orleans in mass meeting assembled,

Resolve, That the safety and prosperity of any people depend upon the strict observance and the faithful execution of their laws.

Resolve, That in our opinion, the observance of a day of rest is absolutely necessary for the welfare, health and comfort of all laboring classes and communities (history teaching by experience demonstrating it), and that, therefore, the laws providing therefor should be rigidly enforced.

Resolve, That gambling, condemned by Constitution and prohibited by law, is inimical to the morals of any people, an open gateway to the ruin of many, the innocent as well as the participants, one of the worst vices of humanity, should be destroyed and every legal effort made to eradicate it.

Resolve, That every official who fails to do his whole duty, in the enforcement of the former, or in the removal of the great vice of gambling, in fact in enforcing any law, is disregardful of his highest duties as a citizen, recreant to the public trust confided to him and false to his solemn oath of office.

Resolved, That as citizens we recognize with pleasure the fact that some of our officials have tried faithfully to enforce the laws on our statute books, and desiring only the best interests of New Orleans, we will heartily indorse every effort on the part of our officials to enforce the complete observance of the Sunday law and in the destruction of gambling in our midst, and we pledge ourselves to aid them therein in every legitimate way that we can, and we demand of them to do their whole duty.

That the chairman of this meeting be authorized to appoint committees during the present week of such numbers as he may deem necessary for furthering the objects of these resolutions, one on finance, one charged with the duty of the enforcement of the Sunday law, and one charged with the duty of looking after the enforcement of the anti-gambling law.

The people must not stop with these resolutions. They must make their servants, the police, obey their will. The issue is now joined and it is, the People vs. the Police.

Revival at Felicity.

The meeting at Felicity Street continues with great power. On last Monday, twenty-fourth, there were twelve conversions and two or more sanctifications, and to date there have been two hundred and twenty conversions and sanctifications. A remarkable feature of the meeting, which has now been in continuance for a period of five weeks, and embracing morning and evening services, is that penitents have been blessed at every service. The evangelists, Messrs. Walker and Rinehart, have given great satisfaction in the work expected of them. Pray for us, brethren.

J. M. BEARD.

Some of our churches have too many members! They are in each other's way! We believe that in many cases the working force will be doubled if one big church is divided into two churches. Our observation is that a church of one thousand members has no more active workers than a church of five hundred members. We say, divide the big churches, and thus increase the working force.

NOTES.

"Doctrine without duty is a tree without fruits; duty without doctrine is a tree without roots."

Do not for one moment suppose that a religious coterie, where much religious gossip is tossed about, is the church of Christ.

No duty is onerous, no responsibility is heavy, no difficulty is invincible, if you have the presence and help of the Divine Spirit. "Strengthened by his Spirit with might in the inner man" is an equipment sufficient for every emergency.

Some people think knowledge is the most important thing. It depends on circumstances. Of how much importance is that knowledge which we can not use for the good of others nor for rounding out our own characters? Such knowledge is in the way.

The Bible is not only a revelation from God; it is a revelation of God. The man who gets away from the Bible gets away from God. For such a man to have a God he must construct him out of his own fancies. Such a God will not be the God of the universe nor the God of redemption.

If some preachers don't mend their manners in the pulpit, they will prove the truth of Darwinism yet, and prove it on the backward line of "reversion to type." "Monkey-shines" in the pulpit are becoming common enough to constitute just such proof. Brother, beware.

The preacher's message is a divine message; and will he deliver it in the language of slang? God forbid. Slang "brings down the house," but brings it a good deal lower than some people think. Imagine our Master using slang! No, you can't imagine that! Then beware of it. Brother, beware.

A pastor of a Baptist Church in New York City recently took a collection for foreign missions. Expressing the hope that the people would give $25,000, he sent around the collectors. When the contents of the baskets were counted there were $30,000. Another object-lesson in giving money for foreign missions for us to look at.

It is an unfortunate disposition which unduly magnifies difficulties, and yet it is a common tendency of our nature. We are prone to look at our difficulties as greater than those of any others, and the obstacles in the way of our progress as more numerous. If this is done to enhance our ability in the estimation of others we are insincere. If it is done under a spell of special discouragement, we should seek larger measures of divine help. Duty can never be greater than we can do.

Men are not saved, in the Scriptural sense of salvation, by preachings about the truth. The preacher who does that kind of preaching does not help men to salvation. His theories about the truth may be ingenious and interesting, but they are flimsy things upon which to hang eternal hopes. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," said Jesus. The truth which saves is a message from God, not the theory of a message, and the preacher is simply the messenger to carry that message to men.

I tell you that no person can be brought into close connection with the mysteries of nature, or make a study of chemistry, or of the law of growth, without being convinced that behind it all there is a Supreme Intelligence. I do not mean to say a supreme law, for that implies no consciousness; but I mean to say with emphasis a Supreme Intelligence, operating through unchangeable laws. I am convinced of that. And I think that I could, perhaps I may some time, demonstrate the existence of such intelligence through the operation of these mysterious laws with the certainty of a demonstration in mathematics.—Edison.

The Holy Spirit limits himself to the things of Christ. He does not go outside the lines which Christ determined. Nothing new is introduced by him who is the Lord of this Dispensation; no word may be added by us to the sacred sum of New Testament revelation, at the peril of being blotted out of the Lamb's book of life. The church can have no sympathy with theories of development, or of evolution. The company of believers in Christ are ready to risk all on the revelation of "the one Law-giver who is able to save and to destroy." Only by his mighty word, and by the Spirit of life which was in him, can the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of God.—Bishop Keener.

One of the marvelous things is the credulity of professed unbelievers. The creed of the Christian is nothing wonderful in comparison with the creed of an unbeliever. Here is just one part of the faith of an unbeliever. He believes that "liars proclaimed a Messiah who came into the world to bear witness to the truth; that the noblest and most spiritual of all creeds was conceived and propagated by low-minded swindlers; and that a group of homely men were glad to suffer the loss of all things, even life itself, in order to glorify a dead man by ascribing powers to him which they knew that he had not possessed." Nothing more absurd than that can be believed by anybody.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Lucy Larcom, the poetess, died recently in Boston.

A railroad from Jackson, La., to the Mississippi Valley road is to be built.

The office of the Baptist Chronicle, Baton, La., was recently destroyed by fire.

Rev. H. J. Harris, of Hattiesburg, Miss., gave us an appreciated call recently.

Edison says: "I never carried a watch in my life. I never wanted to know what time it was."

The New Iberia Salt Company will send to the World's Fair a mammoth statute of Lot's wife carved out of salt.

The total number of insane people under State care in Mississippi is 868. Of these 596 are white and 272 colored.

The International Epworth League Conference, at Cleveland, Ohio, will convene June 29, instead of July 6, heretofore published.

A fearful cyclone passed through portions of Jaspor and Clark counties, Miss., last week. Much property and several lives were destroyed.

Bishop Haygood's wife has steadily improved in health since she returned from the West. We are glad to be able to make this announcement.

There is one Scripture admonition which some Christians seem to have forgotten. It is this: "Study to be quiet and to do your own business."

It is not to taste sweet things, but to make noble and true things, and vindicate himself under God's heaven as self-made man, that the poorest son of Adam dimly longs.—Carlyle.

Dr. Reid, editor of Raleigh Christian Advocate, has been elected president of Greensboro Female College, and it is said that Dr. D. Atkins will edit the Raleigh Advocate after July 1.

Hon. John S. Williams, congressman from Fifth Mississippi District, will deliver the address to the Literary Societies of the University at Oxford at the commencement in June.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate and the Central Methodist both come to us now in beautiful new robes. We rejoice in the success of both, and wish they may increase an hundred-fold.

We regret to learn by Bro. White's notice, on another page, of the illness of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, presiding elder of the Arcadia district. We trust our brother will be soon recovered and go about "his loved employ."

A beautiful little book from the press of Thomas Whittaker, New York, is the "Service in Memory of Phillips Brooks." It contains the addresses of Dr. Greer, Rabbi Gottheil, Father Huntington, Lyman Beecher, Dr. Storrs, Dr. Day and Mr. Choate. Twenty-five cents will buy a copy, postage free.

The commencement sermon for Whitworth College will be preached, June 4, by Rev. C. F. Evans, D. D., of Meridian, Miss. In the evening of the same day Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent of Millsaps College, will preach before the Epworth League. The annual address, June 6, will be delivered by Col. E. W. Carmack, of the Memphis Commercial. There is promise of a great feast in that program.

On the Wing.

Indianola is the county seat of Sunflower. It is a growing town on the Y. & M. P. R. R., about thirty miles from Greenville. The lands are rich and above overflow. I met here many whom I had known in Central and East Mississippi. They were enthusiastic in their praises of their adopted county.

How about the notes? Well, the agent has no cause for complaint. Sometimes they meet me with sorrow and bid me farewell with joy; sometimes I receive a joyful welcome and sad farewell.

How I do hope that every man who has a mind to help us in this work would take this appeal as coming fresh from the lips of the agent!

To-day the payment of $2,750 would secure the completion of our $100,000 endowment. It will be completed. You want it completed and expect to help us. Why not join the army of helpers now? Are there not 600 who would send us $5 each? Could we not form a Gideon's band, and 300 of us with $10 each vanquish the last foe to the fulfillment of our hearts' desire as concerns Millsaps College? Suppose we make the start. I have started. Let the other 299 report at once to Jackson, Miss.

Philip Worlein,

New Orleans, wants you to write to him if you want to get a good Piano cheap, or an Organ, Music or Musical instruments. His is the old reliable music store of New Orleans.

All persons desiring to purchase choice Pianos, Organs, Musical Instruments or Music, should not fail to visit the large establishment of L. Grunewald Co., Limited, at No. 127 Canal street, New Orleans.

To Our Epworth Leagues.

The International Epworth League Conference, to meet at Cleveland, Ohio, on June 29, next, will be the greatest assembly of young Methodists the world has ever seen. The Conference will be addressed by representative men of all the Methodist Churches in America. You will be represented there by Bishop A. W. Wilson; Dr. W. A. Candler, of the North Georgia Conference; Dr. H. M. DuBose, of the Los Angeles Conference; Rev. Collins Denny, of the Baltimore Conference; Hon. E. H. East, of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. W. R. Lambuth, of the Japan Conference; Dr. S. H. Werlein, of the St. Louis Conference; and Rev. I. Z. T. Morris, of the Northwest Texas Conference.

These brethren were appointed to represent you in this Conference on the assumption that you would provide for their expenses while they were so serving you, and I have no doubt that all expectation of you in this regard will be cheerfully and liberally met. Nothing is asked for services, but only for necessary traveling expenses. It will be seen, however, that some of your representatives will have far to travel to reach the seat of the Conference, and it is hoped that no one of them will be left to make any part of the way to or from the Conference at his own charges. We, therefore, request each League to take a collection on Sunday, May 14, to pay these expenses. Mr. J. R. Pepper, of No. 1 Madison St., Memphis, Tenn., whose name and standing are well known to you, is appointed your treasurer, and you will please remit all collections to him.

Any surplus money remaining in the hands of the treasurer after the expenses of the delegates shall have been paid will be passed to the credit of the mission Sunday-school Aid Fund, and public notice given of the amount so carried over.

A young brother, who has so far utterly failed to regard the orders of the Board of Missions or the order of the Annual Conference appointing the Week of Prayer and Self-denial, says he is "perfectly out of patience with Bro. Mellen's course"—giving no thought or care as to whether Bro. Mellen, or the Conference, or the great Head of the church, may be out of patience with his course or not.

Another writes: "My people are poor, hard pressed. We have good many mooneyed men on this charge, but unfortunately they have not very much religion." And so the young brother thinks it best not to ask the moneyed men for $15 or $20 on the missionary debt, lest it should interfere with the spirituality of his people!

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

Bayou Sara circuit, J. R. Whittington, P. C.....$21 65

The presiding elder and preachers in the Woodville district are working like true yoke-fellows in earnest efforts to pay their apportionment of the missionary debt. Success is assured.

The editor was correct. In the quarterly statement the Brookhaven district, $106.94, was omitted from the statement of amounts reported to the Annual Conference last December, although the sum total, $1,154.74, was correctly given by me.

Christian Endeavor.

Prof. Hamill, of Illinois, who gave such excellent normal instruction at the late Sunday-school Convention here, made a special announcement of the Louisiana Y. P. S. C. E. Convention, which is to be held in Rayne Memorial Church, in this city, May 19-21. He requested all present to take a deep interest in this great work which in twelve years has enlisted one million and a half young workers "for Christ and the church." From one society then there are now about thirty thousand societies all over the world. One special feature of the convention will be a "sunrise prayer meeting" on Sunday, May 21. One hundred papers in the State have been sent notices of the convention, so that all Endeavorers, not connected with regular societies, may know of it and attend if possible.

Camp Meeting.

The Orville-Whittington Camp Meeting will begin Friday night, Aug. 18, and continue to Aug. 27, embracing the third and fourth Sundays. The ground is in East Feliciana parish, twelve miles southeast of Clinton, and four miles northwest of Grangeville. All preachers are cordially invited to attend, and will be cared for free of charge. There will be ample accommodation for all who wish to attend. There will be no gate fee.

$1,000 for Millsaps College.

HOW IT CAN BE DONE BEFORE THE FIRST OF JUNE.

Rev. D. L. Mitchel, publisher of the ADVOCATE, agreed with the agent that if the preachers and people of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conference would get 1,000 new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, he would turn over $1,000 to the endowment fund. Brother, how easy is this! You wanted to do something, but had not seen what you could do. Let every preacher send to the agent, J. W. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., five new subscribers. You will have blessed five homes. You will have strengthened our paper. You will have added $1 000 to our endowment. Now, brother, will you help? Let every preacher from the fifth Sunday in April to the fourth Sunday in May, both publicly and privately, urge upon our people the necessity of taking our church paper. If we do not reach the 1,000, Bro. Mitchel will still divide. Now, altogether. Let me hear from you early and often. How many laymen will join us in this work? How many preachers and laymen will join our Gideon band?

Meridian District Conference

will convene in East End Church, Meridian, Thursday, May 25, at 9 o'clock A. M. Bishop Haygood has promised to preside. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. D. G. W. Ellis. A full attendance of all members and delegates is urgently requested and expected. A cordial welcome and hospitable entertainment await them. The preachers will prepare reports according to printed form furnished, and will see that the recording stewards have the Quarterly Conference Record Books present for examination according to Book of Discipline. To Whom it May Concern

MACON, GA., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

THE CONQUEST OF MEXICO AND PERU. By Kinahan Cornwallis, Daily Investigator, New York.

This is the thrilling story of the Spanish Conquest in the New World told in verse. It is prefaced by the history of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean. The author says he has written it not for money, but for the love of such a pastime. We presume a busy banker would enjoy such a pastime very much. The story is told in smooth pleasing rhyme, and doubtless will afford a good, profitable, pleasing pastime to many.

THE SOUTHERN STATES is an illustrated monthly devoted to the South. The present number (March) is devoted to the State of Georgia. Manufacturer's Record Publishing Company, Baltimore. Price, $1.50.

THE REVIEW OF REVIEWS is a notable number. It contains: Mr. Cleveland and his Cabinet, by Woodrow Wilson; The World's First Parliament of Religions, by John Henry Barrows. These two are interesting papers and are profusely illustrated. Besides we have Dress Reform at the World's Fair, and The Quaker-Spiritualist Revival in Russia. If you want a good monthly and the cream of all the monthlies, this Review is the one for you. New York. Price, $2.50

THE MAGAZINE OF HISTORY opens with an interesting paper: New York after the Revolution, by Prof. Henry P. Johnston; then follow, Settlements West of the Alleghanys Prior to 1776, by Prof. G. C. Broadhead; The Historical Novel and American History, by Leonard Irving; The Ride of Paul Revere, by Howard A. Giddings; and The First Attempt to Found an American College, by Wm. Armitage Beardslee. History in Brief is a fine department. National History Company, New York. Price, $4

THE CALIFORNIAN ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE opens with The Marquesas Archipelago, by King Kalakaua, followed by The Ancient Hawaiians, by E. Ellsworth Cary. These two papers give us a very good idea of Hawaii and its people, which is a timely offering to the public. The First Exposition, by May Bigelow Edmonds, revives the memories of forty years ago, and is illustrated with some very funny pictures. Then we have The History of Hawaiian Annexation, by James O'Meara; Pre-Columbian Musicians, by J. J. Peatfield; Masterpieces of the Pacific Coast, by Genevieve L. Browne; The Late Revolution in Hawaii, by F. R. D.; The Greyhound in Sport, by Sam Hubbard, Jr. This is the Hawaiian number. Californian Publishing Company, San Francisco. Price, $3.

THE TREASURY OF RELIGIOUS THOUGHT, for April, continues to place before its readers well-filled pages, with articles able, varied and timely. The portrait of Rev. J. L. Campbell is the frontispiece and his able sermon on "The Family of God," is the first sermon. President Andrews, of Brown University, furnishes a sermon on "Social Responsibility" which should be read by everyone; Dr. Davidson's sermon on "A British Penny and its Significance," is a capital one for a children's service. "The Lessons of the Snow Flakes" is also worthy of all praise. The Leading Sermonic Thoughts are excellent. President Thwing compares Bishop Brooks with Beecher and Spurgeon. Some difficulties in the Old Testament are explained by Rev. G. Hansom. Several articles on Christian Edification are worthy of earnest thought. The editorials are on Expository Preaching, The Cry for Peace, A Good Sermon, Recipients of Pastoral Calls, Overwork. The index to the tenth volume is a valuable addition filling ten pages. Yearly subscription, $2 50. Clergymen, $2. Single copies, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana met in annual session in Lake Charles, on Thursday, April 20, 1893; Mrs. M. R. Goodale, State president, being in the chair. Twenty-four Unions were represented by eighty-nine delegates. More than 1,000 women are now earnestly engaged in this grand work in our State. The review of the year's work, read by Mrs. Zable, evinced fine progress and earnest work all along the line. Much disappointment was felt when a telegram from the honorary president, Mrs. C. E. Merrick, was received stating her inability to be with us.

Thursday night Mrs. Lyons presided and conducted devotional exercises. Some sweet music was listened to and several addresses of welcome were delivered on behalf of the Lake Charles W. C. T. U., Mrs. Knapp; the Lake Charles bar, Judge Gorham; the Lake Charles Y., Miss Parry; City Council, Mr. Poe; City press, Miss Neal; fire companies, Mr. Shattuck; clergy, Rev. H. W. May. Mrs. White responded most gracefully. The president's annual address was exhaustive and encouraging.

Friday morning Mrs. Pharr led in devotional exercises. The six district presidents gave their reports, also superintendents of different departments. All showed good work and much accomplished.

Friday night Mrs. Wilkins led in devotional exercises. Mrs. M. L. Wells, National organizer, made a stirring address, which was highly complimented by the gentlemen. To the regret of the entire convention, Mrs. M. M. Snell, of Mississippi, was not present to fill her appointments on the programme.

Saturday morning devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Whitley. Delegates of local Unions gave three-minute talks, reporting local work.

Election of officers next, as follows: President, Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, of Baton Rouge; vice-president, Mrs. H. C. Pharr, of Morgan City; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Zable, of New Orleans; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. White, of Monroe; treasurer, Mrs. S. A. Knapp, of Lake Charles; each one being led forward and presented to the convention, being given the Chatauqua salute.

Saturday evening, at 4 o'clock, a memorial service was led by Mrs. F. A. Lyons in remembrance of Mrs. E. P. Wood, late recording secretary; Madame Willard, Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Jennie Cassidy.

The services were most impressive. The uncompleted business of the morning was then concluded and the convention closed.

LITTLE THINGS.

A good-by kiss is a little thing,
With your hand on the door to go,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare,
After the toil of the day,
But it smooths the furrows out of the care,
And lines on the forehead grown once called fair,
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind,"
"I love you, my dear," each night,
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find;
For love is tender, as love is blind,
As we climb life's rugged height.

We starve each other for love's caress,
We take, but do not give;
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole love grudgingly, less and less,
Till 'tis bitter and hard to live.

The Epworth League: Its Management, Its Work, and Its Benefits.

[Read before the Pastoral and Theological Society of Sardis District, of North Mississippi Conference, April 6, by Rev. B. F. Jaco.]

It is interesting to notice the flexible and progressive character of Methodism evinced at every point in its history. In the initiatory efforts, as also in the modern victories and glorious achievements, Methodism has possessed the adaptability by which adjustment to the wants and conditions of the times was readily effected. And this was done without reconstruction, each new feature presenting a perfecting development and an enlarged usefulness. Invested with the principles and doctrines of evangelical truth, approved of God and quickened by the Holy Spirit into a conscious experience of vital godliness and living faith, it has been able to aid in any enterprise that offered to better the moral condition of the people. It has not engaged merely as a coadjutor or ally to other evangelical powers, but has risen in the majesty of its power to equal rank and often to the ascendency. Scriptural in its teachings, liberal in its usages, and full of sympathy, it greets heartily and welcomes warmly to its ranks all who love the Lord. Pressed by no ancestral traditions, loaded with no great assumption of superiority, bound by no line of succession, nor commanded by ancient dogmas, it is ready and able to apply its strength and wield its arms in the defense of truth. It can adjust its machinery to the necessity of new and developing circumstances. Such requirements have called for several changes in Methodism during the past few years, among which occurs the authorization of the organization of the Epworth League by our last General Conference. Since its organization its practical benefits and enlarging usefulness to the church have proven it not to have been just a call for more and additional machinery for the sake of magnificence, but a real demand in the church to meet our necessities. The necessity may be seen when we consider the work done by the Sunday-school. There the children and young people have been instructed in the principles of Christianity; symmetry of moral character is to a greater or less extent attained, religious life commenced, and the formal recognition of church relationship and assumption of its obligations should be effected. But here arises a difficulty, for formerly they were in some sense neglected—that is to say, the proper field of activity and usefulness was not supplied.

Passing from the consideration of the organization and necessity of the League, our attention is directed to its management. The duty of preparing a suitable Constitution and Bylaws for the League was imposed upon the General Sunday-school Committee, and thus they are indirectly charged with general oversight, and become responsible for the maintenance of its organic union. This committee exercises a connectional superintendency over the League as an institution of the church, and furnishes the general course of reading, badges, membership tickets, etc. The Quarterly Conference also has oversight of the League, and its secretary must make quarterly reports to same. . . . The next, and most essential to the success of individual Leagues, is the oversight vested in the pastor. He it is who, in most cases, must awaken an interest, and lead to organization. He should fully understand the mission and work of the League; should acquaint himself with the persons or material that is to make up the organization, with respect to their ability, and judge as to the advisability of organizing. I am convinced that much care should be exercised at every step by the pastor. He must not appear dictatorial, nor as eminently ruling, but should spread the leavening influence of wisdom and piety throughout the whole. And no place affords a better opportunity for him to impress himself upon the young than to become a working member of the League himself. This I say from personal experience, for I find that in that place the pastor can better influence the government. He can also control the active energies and direct to profitable work. When there is proposed that which he sees will be hurtful he opposes as a member having all the rights and privileges of a member, and yet the final authority as a pastor. . . . Care must be exercised in the selection of officers, considering their ability and adaptability to the work devolving upon them.

The work of the League is very properly divided into three departments: Christian Effort, Charity and Help, and Literary Work, which exhibits the wisdom of the institution. There is afforded in these departments just what we intimated was lacking in the reference made to Sunday-school work, viz: a field of usefulness in which the young people of the church can exercise themselves. The object of the League is to train the young people in Christian work, systematizing and regulating their work, so as to utilize their energies without loss to the church. Under the direction of the Committee on Christian Endeavor, they conduct prayer meetings, missionary meetings, temperance meetings, and children's meetings. In this department ample room for activity in public worship is afforded. The object being the promotion of personal piety, such means of grace are a necessity, and it is delightful to see how fast the young workers are developed. They begin at once to flow into the Sunday-school and regular prayer meeting. They add new and attractive features to the church, generally. Not only are they trained in the acts of formal worship, but in the work of charity and help they go about doing good to the bodies and souls of men. Constant vigilance enables this committee to find the sick, furnish nurses or other assistance; to relieve the poor, and do much in arousing careless members; securing better attendence upon public worship, and in reclaiming the offending ones, thus very greatly assisting the pastor.

Then we come to the literary work, than which none is more helpful and profitable. I find here just what we have long needed. We have suffered much because our church members were not sufficiently acquainted with our church history, polity, doctrines, discipline, and in many instances not intelligently informed concerning the leading doctrines of Christianity. But I am confident that a regular course of four years in the literary work of the League will obviate these difficulties, for they are kept for these four years at receiving instruction on all these lines from the Word of God, and from constant companionship with the leaders and builders of Methodism. As they proceed in this way they see divine truth sparkling on every hand, and the very ground principles of Methodism spring up about them, while the voice of divine approval of its methods and usages is heard in the record of the many allelulahs and great rejoicing of the thousands who have been saved by its instrumentality. This course is that solid, substantial pabulum which, if taken and assimilated, will produce and sustain Methodist manhood of the highest order. Provision is here made for the social nature of the young people. They may have debates, essays and readings along religious lines, profiting by the wholesome combination of religious, literary, and social engagements. In order to supply each member of our League with the reading course, we assess the members enough to purchase a few sets of each course, and use them as a circulating library under the careful supervision of a librarian. By this means record is made of the progress in the course of each member, thus aiding the committee to more effectually prosecute their duties. With efficient leaders on these committees, who wisely, diligently and perseveringly discharge the duties devolving upon them, we can expect success and be at no trouble to find large and ever-increasing benefits.

Indeed, I find my pen slow, paper dull, and words backward when I undertake to present the benefits that may come to the church through the work of the League; but feel safe in saying they are legion and they open to your view a few avenues through which the church may expect to receive abundant supplies and large forces to multiply its usefulness.

First, then, may be developed a church membership who are active and pious and diligent in works of charity.

Second. There may be developed a church membership intelligently informed in the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, acquainted with the Bible, conversant with Methodist history, drilled in the doctrines, discipline and usages of the church.

And, third, a membership who are loyal to their church, and who will glory in seeing its banners held aloft.

How immeasurable are the benefits comprised in such an attainment! When the prophet exhorted Zion to "put on her beautiful garments," he could surely not have had a grander conception than would be presented in Methodism with an active, pious, intelligent and loyal membership.

You must excuse me if I say that the Epworth League is early Methodism repeated. It has the principles, the essential elements and practical results; so that now is offered a way to return, if any have departed, and a sure way to continue to all who will walk therein. I have seen the careless, benighted sinner who cared nothing for preaching, and understood but little about Christianity, won to and interested in the League, and in less than six months rejoicing in the love of God. I have seen young members of the church, who were worldly minded, becomes interested in League work, thence to active work and prominence in the church. There may be seen Methodists who care about as much about politics as religion, and more for secular news than the Bible and the literature of the church, brought into the League, where they get acquainted with their church, its great history and machinery, and become loyal Methodists, paying Methodists, praying Methodists.

While the League adds a new care to the pastor's already crowded mind, it more than repays in the multiplied assistance given him. I am wont to believe every pastor derelict in duty who will not set to work an Epworth League in every society when sufficient material is available.

North Mississippi Conference P. and H. M Society.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S REPORT.

If a successful past can be taken as an indication of a prosperous future, then, indeed, may the women of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society "thank God, take courage, and go forward." The past year has been a very encouraging one. Reports show not only an increased membership, but a growing zeal. Our work seems to have been its own best advertisement, as a spirit of inquiry has been aroused in regard to it; a constant seeking and receiving of information about our methods that has resulted in new auxiliaries in some places, and in others, in a planning for future organization. It is true that a very few auxiliaries have faltered by the way, and, in their discouragement, have failed to let their light shine as brightly as it should, but these are the exceptions, and in one or two such cases reported it seems to have been not so much from indifference as the look of a leader; nobody willing to command the forces. We women are so prone to intensify our own incapacity and to exaggerate our inability to lead in any church work. If we could only always realize that it is not our work, but the Lord's, and that he is able both to will and to do in us of his own good pleasure, we would put aside our pitiful excuses and do the work that lies before us, not in our own strength, but in his.

Two years ago our Conference society was organized with adult and juvenile auxiliaries. Last April our first annual meeting was held at Carrollton, when the corresponding secretary reported: Adult auxiliaries, 21; juvenile auxiliaries, 8; parsonages assisted, 2.

It is now my pleasure to report to you 34 adult and 10 juvenile auxiliaries, making a total of 44 auxiliaries in our Conference. In this estimate I do not include a "Society of One" recently reported from Rienal. During the year we have assisted two parsonages as follows: Shuqualak parsonage, Columbus district, $75; Noxhit parsonage, Sardis district, $50. In addition to these, we have received applications for help from the following: Panola circuit, Sardis district; Mashulaville circuit, Columbus district; Ike circuit, Corinth district; Arcole, Greenville district.

Application blanks have been furnished by request to Pontotoc, Aberdeen district; Lehrton mission, Winona district; Starkville circuit, Columbus district; Dublin, Winona district.

I have sent out literature promptly every quarter to all district secretaries, and, wherever there was a vacancy in that office, to the auxiliaries themselves. I have also sent literature and written many letters and postal cards to various quarters where I thought it possible to awake an interest in the cause.

Some of our auxiliaries have reported very faithfully, others only semi-occasionally, and still others (a very few) not at all. But for the treasurer's report, I would not know that they were still in existence. The necessity of prompt reporting should be impressed upon all auxiliaries, and the fault of negligence, whether it lies with district secretaries or corresponding secretaries of auxiliaries, should be corrected. It is impossible for the Conference secretary to do justice to the work unless she is kept advised of its condition.

In the reports themselves I am glad to note a marked advance. There is evidently improvement in the home mission work of our Conference, resulting from organized effort. This work until made a feature of our society was largely individual, and, therefore, less effective. Not only is the work laid in the care of the poor, but, as an assistant to our pastors, its help is invaluable in looking after strangers and gathering in recruits for the Sunday-schools and churches. Two auxiliaries, Pleasant Grove and Cleveland, deserve special mention. One reports 30 additions to the Sunday-school during the year through its instrumentality; the other reports 60.

It is impossible to give an accurate report of amounts expended in the local work, home and district parsonages, etc., as our women have not yet begun to report this work fully. With the data on hand, I can report $954 26 raised for these purposes, and I may safely say this is not half that our society should receive credit for, as not half the auxiliaries have reported this local work.

There is the same trouble about the number of members. My book only shows 440 members, for notwithstanding the report blanks call every quarter for this information, there are still three adult and three juvenile auxiliaries that have failed to give it, and this estimate does not include three new auxiliaries just lately reported without giving number of members.

I can not give any account of our general work for the past year, as our Central Committee does not report until May, but an extract from the report of 1891 and 1892 will show you that "the Central Committee helped 28 parsonages to the amount of $4,675 in donations, and $1,000 in loans, the whole amount $5,675. The Central Committee and the Conferences together helped 56 parsonages to the amount of $8,075. This shows as helped by the Central Committee and Conferences an average of a parsonage a week, and four over. But, adding to that the 79 local parsonages helped by the auxiliaries, we have 135 parsonages helped by the society; that is more than 2 parsonages and a half in each week; and each one gave relief where it was greatly needed, permanently benefiting and strengthening the church." This far exceeds our record in any previous year, and arouses a hope that "the dream of a parsonage in every charge may in the near future become a reality." The foregoing extract, you will understand, shows only what was accomplished in the year ending March 31, 1892. When we receive the report of Central Committee for year ending March 31, 1893, we will find a great improvement even on this record, for we know that the work has made great advance along all lines.

By comparing our own Conference society with other Conferences, it is evident that we are ahead of many and have fallen behind very few in number of auxiliaries, money raised, or work accomplished; and yet while there are so many calls for our help, so many fields ripe for the harvest, we can not afford to relax our efforts. So we pray not that our "future may copy fair our past," but that "forgetting those things that are behind," we may reach forth unto those things that are before, as long as the poor are with us and there are waste places in our Zion to be built up.

SNOW FIGURES.

Let me ask the pardon of my young friends for violating the rules of good letter-writing by using the first personal pronoun so much. Without much interruption of regular duties, I can continue to send you a piece for each week, if you will allow me to write in simple language "what I did" and "what I saw."

This afternoon it is warmer than usual, and the sun shines brightly, so that the melted snow is flowing everywhere. This morning the snow-flakes and sunshine alternated. Yesterday, from long before dawn until two P. M., the snow fell so rapidly as to make the greatest depth of the season at this point. Walking from school, some figures made of the snow so much interested me that I decided later in the afternoon to go out and note what the taste of the people had prompted. The following are taken from the list made:

Small Boy—Very characteristic, with head shaved, except a rounded part immediately on top, and two square spots a little piece above the ears. Until it turns gray the hair of every Japanese is black, so that charcoal and India ink, both of which are abundant, served for making black rubs and hair, whether it be eyelashes and brows and hair of the head, or in other figures, mustache and head.

Kobo Daishi—A bonze who established eighty-eight shrines in Shikoku, the island upon which is Matsuyama.

A Deified Shinto Priest—You may know by the flag of paper frills held in his hand. Squating Rabbit. Huge Vase, with some flowers placed in it. Ancient Stone Lantern or Light-Post. Ancient Hero.

Futamiga wea—Twin rocks where the sun goddess once hid, leaving the world in darkness.

Daikoku—God of wealth, always seated on a bag of rice. He has large ears; and one whose ear tips are large enough and turned enough to hold a bean is rich. Devil's Head. Bottle of Wine.

A Bonze—The figure was made in sitting position, but still ten feet high, with head about three feet thick. This bonze is said to have sat upon the same mat for twelve years without moving, studying Buddhism.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy twelve years old. I will try to write a letter to form a small space in the children's column in your dear paper. Our pastor is Bro J. S. Parker. We all like him very much. I go to Sabbath-school every Sunday. Our beloved superintendent is Bro. J. G. Carter, and my teacher is Bro. C. W. Carley. Our Sunday-school books were burned in our March fire, and mama and I study the lessons in the ADVOCATE. I have two pets, a cat and a horse, which I like to ride very much. I go hunting sometimes. I like to hunt very much. I can go only on Saturday, as I go to school every day. We are looking for one of my sisters out to see us, but she has not come yet. In my last letter I asked the question, "Who was the king that had an iron bedstead, and how large was it?" but have not received an answer yet. It was Og. His bedstead was nine cubics long and six cubics wide thereof, according to the cubics of man. It is found in Deut. iii, 11. I will answer F. Eugania Baldridge's question. The longest and best prayer in the Bible is found in the Chronicles vii, 42: made by Solomon in dedicating the Temple. Hoping to see this in print, I remain,

Your friend, ULPIAN E. CROSS.

Purvis, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Although I am a real large boy, I have never written a letter for your valuable paper; but, after reading some of the letters in last week's paper, I became interested, and thought I would write, hoping it may not reach the waste-basket. Our pastor this year is Bro. L. S. Jones. He is a good preacher, and liked by all; has done much good here, but we all miss dear Bro. Hollomau. I will answer M. F. McLeau's question. His superintendent is D. W. McLean. If any of the cousins would like to know who my Sunday-school teacher is, they can easily find out by solving the following acrostic, and the first letter of each answer will form her first initial and last name: Where did Christ begin his sermon? For whom did Jacob serve seven years? Whose hand-maid was Hagar? Who was one hundred years old when his first son was born unto him? What is the third book of the New Testament? Who was Martha's and Mary's brother? Who was led by the ravan? Whose vineyard did Ahab covet? With best wishes for the dear ANVOCATE, I remain,

Your friend, C. M. HART.

Canton, Miss.

MR EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters from Marion I thought I would write one, though it may find its way to the waste-basket, but hope it won't. I am sixteen years old. My father has a store and the postoffice here. I like to stay in the store very much, but get rather lonesome sometimes. We have a thriving Sunday-school of about forty members. We have preaching the first Sunday of every month. Rev. Geo. Banerott is our preacher. We all like him very much. He is such a good man. We also have a "boys'" prayer meeting of Sunday evenings, and a great interest is taken. I like to go to Sunday-school, preaching and prayer meeting so much. Well, I will close by asking the cousins a question: What was the second miracle that Jesus did after he came out of the land of Galilee? JAS. B. HOLLAND.

Marion Station, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your paper before, I will put in my appearance. I am thirteen years old. I have two brothers and two sisters living, and four brothers dead. My grandpa, Rev. F. G. Davis, takes your paper. I like H. G. Hawkins' letters of Japan very much. Our pastor's name is Bro. G. E. Cameron. I will answer M. F. McLean's questions: Daniel was cast in the den of lions. The mother of Christ was the Virgin Mary. Christ said unto all that are weary and heavy-laden, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." The beginning of the fifteenth Psalm is, 'Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle, who shall dwell in thy holy hill?" Isaac's father was Abraham. With best wishes to the dear old ANVOCATE, I remain,

SEE "BAKAN IT."—A minister's little daughter, who had been to church for the first time and heard her father preach, was questioned by him on reaching home as to how she liked his sermon. There was an embarrassed silence; then the little maid, tired out with the long strain of "being good," and yet anxious not to offend, made answer, with a long-drawn breath of patient resignation: "You preached awful long, papa; but I beared it."

You can buy a chimney to fit your lamp that will last till some accident happens to it.

Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" is that chimney.

You can have it—your dealer will get it—if you insist on it. He may tell you it costs him three times as much as some others. That is true. He may say they are just as good. Don't you believe it—they may be better for him; he may like the breaking.

JONES—Mrs. HENRY MOUNGER JONES (nee Nettie Lee Rowe) was born in Alton, Ill., Jan. 15, 1866. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Baton Rouge, La., June 9, 1878. She was married Oct. 7, 1889, in the Felicity Street Methodist Church, in New Orleans, La., to Mr. Henry Mounger Jones, of Mississippi. After a long and painful illness, she died in Vicksburg, Miss., on March 6, 1893.

Sister Jones was possessed of such beauty of person, charms of manner and graces of mind and heart, that she attracted and attached to herself a large and devoted circle of friends. Hers was a kindly, sympathetic, truly loving nature. Her gentle and genuine womanhood expressed itself in her unwearying efforts to help and cheer and comfort others, whatever she did always being done in her own peculiarly unostentatious, artless, and yet hearty way. In the relations of daughter, wife and friend she did her part well, her devotion being thoroughly unselfish and her performance of duty complete. It was the delight of her heart to yield her best love and render her truest service to her dear ones, and as natural to her as breathing was the outgoing and lavish expenditure of her warmest affections upon parents, husband and friends. Oh, how must that inner circle mourn her absence from their midst! From her earliest years she was religiously inclined, and no great effort was it for her to join the church at twelve years of age and give up all for Christ. It seemed the very thing for such a child to do, for she had all along loved her Savior. She was, from its start to its end, consistent and active in her Christian life. Perfectly clear in her convictions of duty, firmly established in her principles, and determined and unswerving in her prosecution of those principles, she was blameless in all her walk and conversation, and so was "found faithful unto death." Having received her into the church, and being her pastor for years, and always interested in noting the developings of her beautiful Christian character, I was ever delighted at the evident relish with which she attended upon the ministry of the Word, and the conscientious earnestness with which she sought to practice in her life the teachings of the sanctuary. Her faith in God, her calm reliance upon her Lord, shone most gloriously during her last sickness. She talked a great deal about dying, and once when told that she must not die, but live and work for Jesus, she said: 'Yes, I want to get well, but perhaps God wants me to die; maybe, I can do more for him by dying than by living." At first she had said, "I would not mind dying if one of you could go with me," thinking, as she knew no one there, she would be so lonely. A few days afterwards she said to her mother: "Mother, I am not afraid to die now, if God wants me to, for he is there, you know, and I could not be lonely." She had her mother repeat, "How firm a foundation" from the beginning to end, and she sang it after her, so that she could find the last line, as she had forgotten where it came in, "I'll never, no never, no never, forsake." Among her last utterances was the statement that God's hands were around her. She was fully ripe for heaven, and in peace and triumph she passed to her eternal reward. For her "to live" was "Christ," and "to die" was "gain." May the father, mother and husband, in their sore affliction, have all divine consolation given to them, and looking heavenward, and walking heavenward, may they take sweet comfort in the thought that their dear one is forever blest, and that they may, after a brief while, meet and rejoice with her on the golden shore. JOHN T. SAWYER.

THOMPSON—Little EMMA was the daughter of James H. and Helen M. Thompson, and although her life was a short one (being only eleven years old), it was well worthy of imitation even by older persons.

She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when quite young, and always loved her church and Sabbath-school better than anything else. She told her mama, a short while before she died, that she knew what she was doing when she joined the church. In Sabbath-school she was never known to have a sorry lesson. She always prepared her lessons, and then helped her little brother and sister to learn theirs. When told by her parents that she was too weak to go to Sabbath-school she was very much grieved, and continued to prepare her lessons for each Sunday until she had grown too weak to study.

We are sad to give up our dear one, but we know that she has gone home with Jesus, there to dwell; gone home, his praises there to swell.

Oh, where is now our darling one?
Gone home to mansions bright and fair.
No more she'll shed the bitter tear,
She's happy in her mansion there.
No more she'll meet us here below,
Her pain and sufferings are o'er,
And by the river's gentle flow
She stands upon the golden shore.

But though she'll visit us no more,
Yet we may go to her at last,
And there we'll sing our troubles o'er
When all life's labors here are past.
Farewell, little Emma, till we meet
Before the throne of God above,
And cast our crowns at Jesus' feet
And sing the triumph of his love.

AUNT AD.

CADE—Mrs. ADRIENNA H. CADE (nee Pitman), died March 31, 1893, in Jackson, Miss. She was converted at fourteen, married at nineteen, was left a widow at thirty-one, with three little children to raise. Through a struggle with poverty she succeeded in raising them to honorable young manhood and womanhood. She was one of the most lovable and best of women. Her whole life, more than any word in death, lead us to believe she has found rest after life's hard-fought battle.

T. S. WEST.

ALLEN—RUTH LANE, second daughter of Frank U. and Willie A. Allen, was born in Claiborne parish, La., August 11, 1876, and died at her father's residence in Homer, La., March 25, 1893, aged sixteen years seven months and fourteen days.

The cause of her death was congestion of the brain. Her suffering was of short duration—less than twenty-four hours; but was of such painful type as to render her unconscious most of the time. The writer has known Ruth since her infancy, she being a large portion of the time his Sunday-school pupil, and she was not only a good girl, she was a Christian. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at nine years old, and not long after was soundly converted under the ministry of Bro. R. M. Blocker, who was assisting our pastor, Rev. T. B. White, D. D., in a protracted meeting in Homer, and it is strange that in the midst of another protracted service, Rev. J. A. Parker, pastor, in the same house in which she was converted, with the same Bro. Blocker assisting, that she should be so suddenly called from the church militant to the church triumphant. But such is true, and we are confident that, as soon as her pure spirit departed, it took its flight directly to that haven of rest to await the command, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, and inherit the kingdom prepared for you, and live with God forever."

To her sick father, her aged grandmother, her two surviving sisters and relatives, we say: Weep not, nor sorrow not; only be faithful, do your duty, and trust Jesus, and you shall all see Ruth again in the glory-land, where there will be no pain, no sorrow, no separation nor trouble, but all will be peace, joy, comfort and love forever and forever.

O! Ruth, your uncle Frank—as you always called me—will sing praises with you in heaven, as he has so often done on earth.

SMITH—JESSE JAMES SMITH, son of David and Elizabeth Smith, was born in Lunenburg county, Va., April 24, 1826, and departed this life March 30, 1893, at his residence in Brunswick county, Va. He was twice married—first, to Miss Drumright, of Mecklenburg, and, secondly, Miss Hawthorne, of the same county. Twelve children were born unto him, ten of whom survive—five in Virginia and five in Louisiana; in which latter State he lived some years. He was converted at a prayer meeting when quite young, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he continued a consistent member. Much of his time was passed in Sunday-schools and other religious meetings. The hymn he selected to be used at his funeral was No. 1036 of our old book:

"When languor and disease invade
This trembling house of clay," etc.

He chose his burial place; and, speaking very calmly about his demise, gave as his dying testimony II. Timothy ii, 6-8. The writer conducted his funeral service in the presence of a large number of his relatives and neighbors. J. CARSON WATSON.

BENNETTE—ELISHA COLMAN BENNETTE was born March 12, 1861; joined the church July, 1872; was married to Miss Mattie D. Holmes, Dec. 1, 1880; died Nov. 20, 1892. Bro. Bennetto was a good man: hence he died well.

His last sickness was of short duration, but his suffering was intense. He bore it patiently, and expressed himself ready and willing to die. He left behind him a wife and five small children to mourn their loss; but they mourn not as they who have no hope. Dying as he did in the Christian faith, he has gone to that beautiful place where Jesus had said, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also." Bereaved widow and children, your husband and father has gone to that place. Think not of him as lost to you forever. Live as he lived, and you shall see him again, yes, see him in that beautiful heaven to which he is gone. E. H. ROOK.

PARKER—SIDNEY PARKER, son of L. W. Parker, was born Nov. 8, 1868, and died, of consumption, at Cleveland, Miss., March 24, 1893. His parents were Baptist, but the boy seemed to lean towards the Methodist Church. He was not a member of any church.

His father who had prayed for him for many years was anxious about his future; but before he passed into the "great beyond" he assured his father that God had given him rest and that he was saved. God is merciful and willeth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he might turn from his wickedness and live; but, in view of the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death, let us now prepare to meet our God; let us call upon him while he is near. There is danger in delay. Accept Christ now, believe in him, obey him, trust him now.

THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

HENDRICK—Mrs. MARY A. HENRICK died in Temple, Texas, March 9, 1893, of pneumonia. Her many friends in Louisiana, her home for many years, sorrow that she will greet them no more. How often have her kind and willing hands done duty in the shaded chamber of the sick, the abodes of the needy, and ministered to the dying. We sorrow not as those without hope, for our loss is her gain.

To every home in this community are awakened tender, loving, sympathetic echoes, for in the departure of this good woman every home has lost a friend. M. L. H.

THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.
W. P. HARRISON, D. D., LL.D., Editor.

Published quarterly. Each number has 216 beautifully printed pages on the best book paper, making a volume of more than 800 pages for the year. Our QUARTERLY is not commended by the ablest of our clergy and laity only, but it is mentioned with the highest respect by the editors of the best periodical literature throughout our country and abroad. It is a needed medium for the discussion of subjects too large for adequate treatment in the columns of our weekly papers. It should be unanimously supported by our preachers, and widely distributed among the thoughtful of our laity. The subscription price of the QUARTERLY is $2. Your subscription is solicited.

The Value of a Dollar.

Every boy should learn the true value of a dollar. To know what a dollar costs and what it buys is one of the stepping stones to success. It is also desirable that everyone should know that a half dollar will buy a bottle of

Ask your dealer for a bottle.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty five cents a bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Spanish caravels have arrived at Hampton Roads, and received a tremendous reception.

Dr. Keeley, of bi-chloride of gold fame, is reported to have sold out his process to a syndicate of New York capitalists for $10,000,000.

Herr Krupp, whose great 127-ton gun has been placed on exhibition at the World's Fair, has arranged to spend $1,500,000 on his exhibit.

By a fire in one of the shafts of the Butte and Boston Company in Montana, on April 21, nine miners were cut off from escape and others burned or suffocated.

According to the official report of Dr. Parham, chief sanitary inspector of the Board of Health, the death rate for this city for the past year was: For whites, per 1,000, 25 72; for colored persons, 39.59.

President Cleveland, it is said, has made more changes up to date than he did eight years ago after the same time spent in the White House. According to some authorities he has made more than at any time since Grant.

At Butte City, Mont., a sort of municipal boycott was declared against the Chinese lately, the City Council passing a resolution requesting all employers of the city to refrain from patronizing Chinamen in any manner.

The Southern National Bank, in this city, has acquired control of a large amount of the shares of the Hibernia National Bank, and the two institutions are now consolidated under the name of the Hibernia National Bank.

The lockout of the New York clothing cutters, which has lasted for nearly four weeks, is over. The fight has been one of the greatest labor struggles that New York has seen in years and has resulted in what is practically a complete victory for the cutters.

The President and Cabinet are absolutely harmonious in the determination to exercise every power conferred upon them to maintain the public credit, to keep the public faith, and to preserve the parity between gold and silver and between all financial obligations of the government.

A new move in the fight against the enforcement of the dispensary liquor law in South Carolina, which is to go into effect July 1, has been developed in Charleston. A meeting was held by a number of leading merchants and property holders to consider the situation, the counsel employed by the liquor dealers having advised that it would be useless to attempt to resist the law. Representatives of nearly every society in the city were present, and it was decided to send a circular to the freehold voters of the city, requesting them not to sign the petition of any person applying for the office of State dispenser of liquors. Under the law a majority of the freehold voters of the city must sign the application of anyone applying to be appointed a dispenser, and the applicant must be a teetotaler.

The Home Rule measure passed its second reading in the House of Commons, on April 21, by a vote of 347 to 304.

A desperate conflict ensued between the police and the Hull dock strikers, in England, on April 23. Many on both sides were wounded.

The Emperor of Germany was received by the Pope, on April 23, with much ceremony. On leaving the Vatican, the Pope seized the Emperor's hand and shook it three times.

Albert Hall, London, was crammed, April 22, with 10,000 people, the occasion being the anti-home rule demonstration planned by the Unionist alliance. Resolutions were adopted by the meeting denouncing Irish home rule.

A cable message received at the State Department says that the Emperor of Russia has signed the extradition treaty between the United States and Russia, and that the ratifications have been exchanged by the United States minister and the Russian foreign office.

The Chamber of Commerce of Vienna has adopted a vote of thanks to Julius Goldschmidt, consul general at Vienna for the United States, in recognition of the consul general having used his influence for the promotion of Austrian trade with the United States in despite of McKinley law.

A committee representing all the conspicuous Jews of Bulgaria have ordered in Budapest an album inlaid with diamonds, rubies and emeralds, which they will give to Prince Ferdinand and his bride on their wedding day. The album will cost 250,000 francs. The Pope has sent a diamond ring to the Princess Marie Louise of Parma, the intended bride of Prince Ferdinand.

The anniversary of Shakespeare's birthday was celebrated, on April 23, at Stratford-on-Avon. The grammar school in which exercises were held was decorated with flowers, flags and Shakespeare's portraits. The masters and pupils marched to Shakespeare's tomb in the afternoon and covered it with lilies. After all the ceremonies, the mayor of the town delivered a memorial address. At its close the audience remained perfectly silent for ten minutes, and then dispersed.

The drought which has prevailed throughout Chihuahua, Mexico, and in sections in the States of Durango and Coahuila for the past eighteen months, has not been broken, and the situation is even more alarming than it was at any time during the four years of drought which was broken two years ago. Thousand of heads of cattle are dying for lack of water, and there will be but little food products raised this year. The human beings and cattle in the western part of the State are living on the maguey and cacti plants.

"Picturesque Chicago and Guide to the World's Fair."

WHAT IS SAID OF IT.

The greatest selling book of recent years.

The price puts it in the reach of everyone.

It required a Baltimore firm to focus Chicago, and just give the proper prospective, and issue the most neat, beautiful and explicit guide book to our remarkable city and the World's Fair that we have ever seen.—Interior, Chicago.

R. H. Woodward & Co., of Baltimore, have taken time by the forelock in issuing this book. It is profusely and beautifully illustrated. It is valuable, being rich in statistical material, and having little of the "padding" which fills up carelessly made volumes. It is an excellent book for the out-of-town visitor to read, as he may know what is to be seen and utilize his time to best advantage.—Advance, Chicago, Ill.

This book was published a few weeks ago, and its success was instantaneous. The demand for it is unprecedented, clearly proving that the people are eager to know more about Chicago and the Exposition, and they will buy a reliable book at a reasonable price. Of course, the demand for this book will grow stronger every day until the Fair is opened. Every person coming to Chicago will want a copy as a guide to hotels and places of interest, and also to the Exposition. Those who can not come want to know all about what is to be seen. The Exposition part of the book is furnished by the Department of Publicity and Promotion, and is thoroughly reliable and authentic.

The book is issued in the very best style, with 200 magnificent engravings taken especially for the book. It contains 320 large octavo pages, is one inch thick, 9½ inches long and 6½ inches wide. The retail price is $1.50 with liberal terms to agents.

"Mud That Is More Valuable Than Gold."

There is no gold in the hills around our place, but there is "mud that is more valuable than gold," said Mr. H. L. Kramer who registered yesterday at the Auditorium of Indiana Mineral Springs, Warren county, Ind. "It is a magnetic mineral mud and it is more valuable than gold, for it cures rheumatism in every form, no matter how long the victim has been a sufferer." "O, no," laughingly replied Mr. Kramer to the reporter's question, "we do not give our patient mud to eat; it is made up of poultices and placed on the joint where the pain is most severe."

"It is only within the past few years that this wonderful Magnetic Mud deposit has been known. Large quantities of it have been carried away, and people are traveling far and near to our new hotel and bath-house, costing over $150,000, which has just been completed, in order that they may drink the Magnetic Mineral water and bathe in the mud. There are upwards of two hundred people there today, and many have recovered so rapidly as to make it a wonder to themselves and their friends. We look forward to the time when people will be journeying to the Indiana Mineral Springs from every State and Territory in the Union to be cured of chronic rheumatic and kidney diseases that baffled the best medical skill.

"The mud is found immediately at the base of the center of a horseshoe shaped bluff, where the springs are also located, and it seems that the waters of the springs pouring forth there for countless ages has thoroughly impregnated this deposit with mineral properties, and magnetized it so that when a steel blade is left in it, after a few hours it becomes thoroughly magnetized so you can take up a large darning needle."

Mr. A. L. Thomas, of the great advertising firm of Lord & Thomas, Chicago, is president of the Indiana Spring Co., who have lately developed the wonderful spring. He has issued a beautiful little pamphlet which tells all about this resort, and gives the experience of many prominent people who have been cured there within the last year. It will be sent by mail free upon request. Address A. L. Thomas, 45 Randolph street, Chicago.—Chicago Tribune.

Important Notice.

The time of holding the Meridian District Conference has been fixed and will be soon announced. Will all pastors in the district please furnish me a list and post office of all delegates and members of the Conference who will be present. Not elected simply. This is necessary, as we wish to communicate with each member separately.

Please comply with this request, brethren, and save us annoyance and confusion. B. F. LEWIS.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 10, and remain on the ground until the thirty first.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

A Plea for Expository Preaching.

The great evangelist, Chas. G. Finney, is reported to have said that the next great revival of this age would be a Bible revival, meaning that the Word of God would be used more than ever. That this has come to pass is evident to all who have noticed the trend of Christian thought as manifested in homiletical literature and in the Bible institutes of these days. The reason for this is, that the Bible is the point of attack in the most recent phases of skepticism; hence, there has arisen this purpose to let the Word of God speak for itself. In a recent number of the Old and New Testament Student President Harper made a strong appeal for more biblical preaching, in which he called attention to the fact that this age does not care to know what men think about the truth of God, but desires to know that truth itself. Many such opinions could be cited. I merely mention these in order to introduce the subject of the need and the importance of expository preaching.

There is a great deal of matter worked off on unsuspicious congregations designated as expository preaching, which has no claim to such a title. I have been present when the leader of the meeting would announce that he would expound a Psalm. The result was not exposition, but a dreary string of thoughtless, prayerless comments upon the passage, or a feeble paraphrase. This is not expository preaching—this wretched shift of an attempt used because of a low estimate of the Word of God and an unwillingness to do faithful study. Exposition and comment are two decidedly different things. Comment is good, but it is not expository preaching. Exposition is the unfolding of the meaning; comment is the dwelling upon truth in its relations. Both are good, but exposition is pre-eminent. The need of the times is a knowledge of the truth. It is amazing to see how little is known of the truth of God. There is little Bible reading and less intelligent knowledge of its meaning. The results are vague conceptions of the truth and feeble convictions of duty. The corrective of this is the constant and faithful exposition of the Word of God.

Expository preaching is the best for the minister, because it develops him as nothing else can. It requires more study and more prayer than any other style. It calls forth every resource of the mental as well as the spiritual attainments of the man. It makes him a skillful operator in spiritual enterprise. A preacher who is not expert in exposition will be feeble. He may be clear and even scriptural in his theological statements, eloquent in appeal and logical in argument, but, without the power of scriptural insight and the habit of expounding the things of God, he will be a failure. Next to the preacher's personal piety, he should be mighty in the Scriptures. And this might is not the mere power to cite proof texts, but the power to see and to set forth the hidden meanings of the Word.

Above all other styles of religious teaching, expository preaching demands intense, constant and broad study, accompanied by unremitting prayer for the light of the Holy Spirit. By it the preacher gains strength of conviction, broadness of spiritual vision, and a large treasury of things new and old. It makes the resourceful preacher.

By a careful exposition men are prevented from the wild vagaries of ingenuity on the one hand, and the emasculating influence of the wisdom of words on the other. Ingenuity in attributing meanings to the Word of God is a fruitful source of theological freaks. Nothing but legitimate exposition can cure this tendency. Again, the habit of exposition will prevent the natural tendency to present the gospel as a philosophical system. This tiresome effort to harmonize the truth of God with the scientific and philosophical teachings of men has been attended by disaster from the days of the early Gnostics down to the misleading mysticism of Drummond. We can never get the truth of God into the hearts of men by the methods of synthetic argument. The truth must and will carry itself by its own force. A man who is full of the truth itself will find no time to do anything but state it. The simple declaration of the truth is its greatest argument.

Expository preaching is always cumulative in its effects. In order to secure the greatest effects to your statement of truth, you must place truth upon truth until it accumulates into a flood of light. The truth is the light; therefore, throw on the light. Unfold, unfold and unfold the hidden things of God, and the result will be sure to come. It is this that gives you the point of appeal in the exhortation and the application. The strength of Christianity is its revelation, and the power of preaching is in the unfolding of the meaning of that revelation. It is the glory of the preacher to find out the meaning of that revelation, and should he his joy to declare it with no uncertain sound. Above all things, may we be expounders of the Word of the living God, "for all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." F. N. PARKER.

On the Wing.

Friday morning found us at Greenville. Here we met the presiding elder and many of the brethren in the midst of a delightful District Conference. We had the pleasure of speaking a few words to the brethren, but left the larger work for Dr. Murrah. Here that big-hearted poor man, D. L. Mitchel, called the agent aside, and said: "I want to give you a $100. Get me 50 subscribers, and keep the money." I have secured 8 of these 50, and will get the balance of the 50 before June 1.

From Greenville to Hernando via Memphis. The few hours I had for Memphis were enjoyed to the full. Its well-paved streets, its fine business blocks, its grand bridge, its electric cars and its magnificent public buildings charm the eye and delight the senses. Her churches, especially those recently built, are marvels of beauty; but Hernando is my objective point. Here the Sardis District Conference was in session, with Bishop Hendrix in the chair. These men of God were full of sunshine. God blessed the preaching. Three souls were added unto the church. Monday morning we talked about education, and added ten names to our Gideon's Band. Hernando's court-house is not only well situated, but well and substantially built. Its residences actually hide themselves upon the hill-tops in forests of oak and cedar. How delightfully refreshing was this city of the old South!

From Hernando a seven hours' ride lands us at Jackson. Our eager eye searched for checks, drafts and postal orders; nor was it altogether disappointed. My brother, delight the agent's heart by sending him now a payment on your note, or a free-will offering to our college.

From Jackson to Madison. Here the brethren were in the midst of strawberry picking and shipping. Their ready responses when asked about their notes would lead one to suppose that there was money in berries. The morning found us at Osyka, and the dinner hour at McComb City, and supper was with friends at Jackson. Recruits to our Gideon's Band were found at all these places.

Thursday morning, after a ride across the State, I had the pleasure of meeting the brethren of the Columbus district in Conference assembled at Mayhew. Here I found the same hearty welcome which had been extended me elsewhere. This must be about the best district in the North Mississippi Conference. How do I know? Well, there are more ex-presiding elders in it than there is in the Brookhaven district. The brethren suffered me to speak frequently. On Friday morning I preached, exhorted and lifted a collection. Sorry was I that I could not tarry with these brethren until the close of Conference. I could not mention the tender consideration of each brother for this man; but, as I close this article, I doff my hat to North Mississippi, and thank them all for words of cheer and dollars of comfort.

Brethren, would you have me love you more, roll in the subscribers to the ADVOCATE, and let us add that $1,000 by June 1.

We have, up to this date, found 50 who join our Gideon's Band. Roll in your names and dollars. Two hundred and fifty more recruits sees us through.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, Holly Springs, Miss.: "Please allow me to join Bro. Mellen in protesting against the introduction of Easter observance in our church. Our people are imitating Rome. Think of it! Will our dear sisters please select some other day to take a collection for Scarritt Bible and Training-school?"

Rev. T. S. Randle, Opelousas, La., April 21: "Our prospects are encouraging in this charge. We are having some success. Our congregations are increasing; all seem to be interested. We have had two accessions to the church this quarter, and others promise to join. We have organized a Sunday-school at Belleview, which is doing a good work; much interest manifested by all who have united with it. Pray for us, that God may pour the baptism of fire upon us."

Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, P. C., Carrollton, Miss., April 24: "God heard and answered our prayers for this place. For two weeks we were made to rejoice in the consciousness of his presence and power in the conviction and conversion of sinners. We have received on profession of faith, ten. Several go to the other churches. Bro. L. M. Lipscomb was with us the first week, but was taken sick and compelled to leave. He is a good preacher. Pray for the young converts."

D. Harmon, Eupora, Miss., April 24: "We have just passed through a ten-days' meeting conducted by Rev. Jno Jones. There were thirty-seven accessions to the Methodist Church, and about thirty to other churches. The spiritual condition of the church has been greatly improved, and the entire community raised to a higher plane of Christian work. Before Bro. Jones came here there was a great deal of prejudice against him. Many thought he would be rough and abusive; but, while he denounced sin in plain, bold terms, he spake only the truth, and said nothing that would offend the right-thinking. He preached three times a day to large, attentive congregations. His preaching was a delight, and the meeting a benediction to the community."

Rev. H. Mellard, Silver Creek circuit, April 24: "Times are very hard with us on Silver Creek circuit, and, of course, the preacher must economize. This we have done every year since we joined the Conference, and expect to all the balance of our life; but there are two things indispensable—something to eat, and some place to sleep. Now, if any man can tell us how to economize in these two particulars, we will consider it a special favor, and, furthermore, bless him with our latest breath. We have been faithful to duty, filling all our appointments, and missing only one, and this could not have been filled by any other under like circumstances. Many things trouble us, but we are patient, and try to be as wise as serpents and harmless as doves. We have members that dance, swear, gamble, and stay away from service all the time; but, brethren, we are hoping, trusting and praying for better things."

Rev. J. A. Whitehurst, Gunnison station, Greenville district, North Mississippi Conference: "We rejoice to report to our brethren through the ADVOCATE a glorious revival in our church at this place. We began the work on March 30. On April 4 Rev. J. A. Randolph, presiding elder of this district, and Rev. H. P. Crowe, of Shaw, Miss., came to our aid. Bro. Randolph preached some telling sermons; but, owing to the pressure of work upon him, he soon left Bro. Crowe to do all the preaching until his time was out to return to his charge. Bro. Crowe did excellent work. His preaching was very fine, and produced much fruit. Our church enjoyed the long-felt need of a revival, and added to her roll of forty-five members sixty more. About forty of that number were men and women. The others were the precious children from seven to fifteen years of age. Brethren, we prayed, praised, sang and shouted—yes, shouted—in the Mississippi Valley. I have heard that the Delta people are not spiritual. The people at Gunnison have acted like and looked like they were. We are trying to do away with so-called 'cheap religion.' I did not receive a member with the understanding that they could dance and remain in church. The preachers taught a renunciation of the causes of sin as well as sin itself. We have fifteen family altars now, and hope to add to this number. We are grateful to Bro. Crowe for his efficient labors in our midst, and praise God for working so wonderfully through him. Some people not yet saved in our community. Pray for us."

Rev. Heslep R. Tucker, Houston, Miss., April 26: "On the second Sunday in this month we began a meeting here, which continued two weeks, during which time we held about fifty-five services, resulting in a great revival of religion. The work done was principally in the church, as there were but few people here, either among the citizens or among the students of the Mississippi Normal College, out of the church, and yet a revival was greatly needed in the churches. Many church members had drifted until we needed a great stirring up, and, while this meeting did not accomplish all that was desired, and all that ought to have been done, yet it was far-reaching in its results, and it is said to have been the deepest work of grace in Houston for some years, and now, at this writing, we see signs of the work abiding. This meeting was a growth, and was not at all spasmodic, but grew more and more in power from the beginning to the close. Many beautiful and touching incidents occurred during the meeting, and all denominations, and students and people, worked together in perfect harmony, and all were participants of the blessings of the Holy Spirit. Never was a pastor supported better than we were by Rev. J. G. Park and Rev. J. R. Countiss, young men in the ministry, but faithful and uncompromising. We feel indebted to Rev. W. W. Mitchell, of the Buena Vista circuit, for two or three very effective sermons, and Rev. J. D. Newsom, who preached and worked throughout the meeting, doing great good. Rev. J. A. Bowen did the preaching during the second week of the meeting, and we feel that we can never repay him for the good he has done among us. Nine persons joined the different churches, and I am sure Christianity is on a higher plane in Houston. All glory to God."

R. W. F., Robeline, La., April 23: "An item or two from this town may not be out of place. First, education is receiving a greater impetus than ever before. The Robeline high school building, which was rapidly being pushed to completion, was blown to pieces from its foundation early on the morning of the fourteenth instant. Six or eight workmen made a narrow escape, as a few minutes later they would have been at work in the building. The rubbish was cleared away on the following day preparatory for rebuilding, and, when completed, will be an attractive two-story structure. ...'Now, there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them.' As in the days of Job, so it is with us to-day. The Baptist and Methodist Churches here each have monthly appointments, and, while a few worshipers assemble on the Sabbath at these houses dedicated to God, the six saloons are bold to obey the behest of Satan in dealing out sin in various forms, especially the damning fluid and gambling. No such desecration of the Sabbath and the State law was tolerated under the administration of our former worthy judge and district attorney. It appears to be different, however, under the present administration of our two judges and district attorney, for they do not appear to make out a violation of the Sunday law a crime.... 'Fret not thyself because of evil-doers.' Can you tell us, Mr. Editor, how we are to carry out this injunction while these evils are at our very doors, casting a dark shadow over the path of our children and that of our neighbors? The following interrogatory may suggest itself:

> 'Watchman, tell us of the night,
> What its signs of promise are.'

We answer: Here and there a brother is standing firm on the bulwark of faith, who are true to the very core—men that hate the saloons and all forms of sin and insincerity before God and man with a perfect hatred. Then we have a few more sweet-spirited, God-fearing women, whose pure Christian lives shine as the stars in the midst of darkness. They are as bows of promise bending over a perverse people, bright with the tears of pity and beautiful with all the hues of a Christian life. They have charge of the W. C. T. U. and L. T. L. in connection with the Ladies' Aid Society. The weekly prayer meetings would be a failure without them, and to them is due with whatever success the Sunday-school may be blessed... Our minister, Bro. S. H. Whatley, is beloved by his people, for in his preaching he gives them much solid comfort. He is careful to visit all of his members, and he has brought about a revolution in our Church Conferences. He carefully examines into every department of church work, and lends his sympathy and prayers when and wherever needed. May the King of kings in heaven crown him when his journey is complete!...Our prayer meetings are conducted by laymen, and it is encouraging that some have expressed themselves as having received much comfort at these meetings....The Sunday-school work, we believe, is a factor for good. During the present year it has paid $10 for Sunday-school literature, $10 to foreign missions, and have $15 on hand toward paying for a $40 Sunday-school library. The finances of the church are also progressing favorably....While we have much to discourage, we have some encouraging signs of promise, and will look forward trustingly to greater blessings, praying that we may no longer be filled with disappointment and misery, just because we are afraid to believe that God will be as good as his Word when he says that no good thing shall he withholden from them that walk uprightly. We remember that it was in a lonely defile beside the river Jabbok that the patriarch Jacob wrestled all night with the angel, and established an argument for perseverance in prayer. When our souls grow weak, may we go back to the dark night of Peniel, and gather courage from the voice of that mountain-stream to say to the angel of the covenant, 'I will not let thee go except thou bless me.'"

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenville District Conference met in the Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., April 21; Rev. J. A. Randolph, P. E., in the chair. Rev. L. M. Broyles was elected secretary. Eleven of the fifteen preachers of the district were present, with a fair attendance of laymen. Quite a number of brethren of other districts and Conferences honored us with their presence. We mention Drs. W. B. Murrah, Howard W. Key, W. R. Sims; Revs. J. W. Chambers, J. W. McLaurin, R. M. Studefer, J. M. Wyatt, and O. L. Savage. The publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and Bro. J. R. Pepper, of the General Sunday-school Committee, were present, and added greatly to the interest and success of the Conference. The preaching was of a high order. Drs. Murrah, Sims, Key, Julien C. Brown, and Revs. Fly, Mitchell, Casey and Crowe filled the pulpits of the various churches.

The love-feast, on Sunday afternoon, led by the youthful, but efficient, presiding elder of the district, was a season of grace; pronounced by many the best they had ever attended.

Delegates to the Annual Conference: W. R. Trigg, Dr. C. H. Jones, J. D. Davenport, S. Nurse (L. P.). Reserves: R. E. Gray, G. L. Wren.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference, held at Hernando, Miss., April 21-24, was highly profitable and enjoyable. The attendance was the largest we have had in years. The brethren reported the work as progressing well throughout the district. Bro. Morehead has his district well-manned and well in hand. Of course, Bishop Hendrix won all hearts. His sermons on Saturday and Sunday were replete with rare thought, suggestion, and spiritual power. His sermons, counsel and words of cheer will abide and bear fruit. We shall not soon forget his godly admonition and timely suggestions given at the last session, at the conclusion of the pastors' reports.

Besides sermons by T. W. Dye and T. B. Hargrove, of the Conference, Dr. J. W. Boswell, editor Memphis Christian Advocate, was with us one day, and gave us an excellent sermon. Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent Millsaps College, was present part of the time, and added much to the occasion. Besides collecting notes due, he secured $79 to swell the endowment.

The Sardis District Auxiliary of the North Mississippi Conference Educational Loan Fund Association was organized with twenty-four members, pledging $395 for this highly commendable and important work.

G. D. Shands, P. T. Callicott, P. B. Jones and Dr. A. S. Yarbrough were elected delegates to the next session of the Annual Conference.

Courtland was selected as the next place of meeting.

The oldest members of the church at Hernando say that there has not been such a time in their old church, which used to be so prosperous, since the war. Everybody seemed to enjoy the Conference sessions, the preaching, and especially the love-feast Sunday afternoon.

A fitting conclusion was the conversion and reception into the church of two men and one young lady, with, perhaps, more to be received.

THE FELICITY STREET CHURCH REVIVAL.

The great meeting at Felicity Street Church closed on last night, near the end of the sixth week, and with a record of nearly three hundred conversions and sanctifications. So powerful a work of grace, and such uniform manifestations of the divine blessing through a period so protracted, the writer never witnessed. All the Methodist Churches of the city were beneficiaries, while the blessing to Felicity Street Church can never be computed. The people converted represent all ages, sexes and conditions, and in every case the work was preceded by an altar service, and followed by a public confession. Men of all ages and rank were delivered as in an instant from both the whisky and tobacco habits; fallen women, not a few, kneeled at the foot of the cross, and found pardon, and walk from the slums entered into the glorious light and liberty of the people of God. After the meeting had been in progress for about two weeks, and already with glorious results, under the leadership of the pastor, Bro. Carradine came from St. Louis, and the brethren of the Holiness Association joined their efforts with ours, and later those efficient workers, Drs. Walker and Rinehart, were summoned, so that for a period of about three weeks the meeting was greatly aided by help from abroad.

One of the results of this revival has been the establishment of a "Rescue Mission" devoted to the work of saving both the bodies and souls of the class known as the "fallen," and represented by both sexes. It is in charge of two ladies of Felicity Church, Sisters Henry and Harmon, the former of whom has had considerable experience in such work, having been prominently connected with the McAuley Mission of New York City. The mission is roomily and even elegantly installed in the house formerly kept as a bagnio on the corner of Basin and Common streets, near the heart of the city, and not far from the centre of "darkest New Orleans." It will be conducted undenominationally, and supported by public contributions; but to give moral aid and to furnish all possible assurances to the public will be under the advisory management of the pastor and stewards of Felicity Street Church.

It was the pleasure of the writer, assisted by Dr. Rinehart and Bro. Van Valkenburgh, to conduct the opening service and preach the first sermon within its walls, on last Saturday night, and to a congregation composed of all classes of people, and entirely filling the large double room. The Lord graciously put his seal upon the undertaking by descending in great power upon the congregation, and in witnessing to the conversion of three persons—a fallen woman, and two men in middle life.

The mission will be kept open every night until twelve o'clock, and at each opening some pastor will conduct religious services. The lady managers will reside on the premises, and will themselves have immediate charge both of the household and its finances. Can not the Christian public of New Orleans be trusted to give it generous support? Let everybody help.

THE COMING CENTURY.

BY A. DRYDEN PHELPS, D. D.

God is writing out the pages
Of the century's work and worth,
Grandest volume of the ages
Since th' apostles left the earth.
It records the matchless story
Of the gospel's later glory.

Lo, a brighter day is breaking
In the century at hand.
Jesus mightier conquests making,
Ev'n to earth's remotest land;
All th' abodes of men possessing,
Brings he love and peace and blessing.

Vet'rans, weary burdens bearing,
Heralds of the winning cross,
Reapers, gracious harvests sharing,
Oft in suff'ring, shame and loss,
Now, their fields to others leaving,
Palms of vict'ry are receiving.

Ho, ye youthful servants, rally
To the century's bugle call,
Ne'er with self-born motives daily,
To the Christ surrender all,
Come in throngs at his requiring,
For his sake your spirits firing!

Glorious now is acting, being,
At the twentieth century's dawn;
Blessed eyes, such wonders seeing,
God's great armies moving on!
Take with them your loyal station,
Earnest for the world's salvation!

Our Theological Seminary.

Strange as it may sound in the ear of many of the readers of the ADVOCATE, the "our" in the caption refers to us Southern Methodists. It may be quite a bit of information for many a one to know that there is such a thing as an institution founded for the express purpose of training the young ministers of our church in all the branches of theological study. The need for the impartation of this information does not mean that our seminary has been slow to realize its opportunity and has hence not been a power in the church. Such a charge can, in no wise, be laid at its door. The cause of the widespread inattention to the advantages it holds out to every Southern Methodist preacher must be sought elsewhere.

This is a case where ignorance is due to ignor-ance—if an accent may be shifted to convey the true idea. Thoroughly infatuated with the great advances and successes achieved, under God, through the instrumentality of "unlearned and ignorant" men in the early history of our church, we have, in many places, swung to an extreme which virtually lays the praise of the former prosperity of Methodism to the poor grammar and bad rhetoric of her untrained worthies; forgetting that mere accidental accompaniment does not always mean efficient cause. The times of this ignorance we may truly say God winked at, but now it behooves us as a church to give our preachers every advantage that possibly can be wheeled into line.

The idea of a theological seminary is a very simple one. Here, if anywhere, we may look for singleness of aim. There can be no indefiniteness in the establishment of such an institution. The one and only purpose we can see for their founding is to enable the church, whose doctrines they are designed to teach, to supply her ministry with the mental and spiritual preparation that will best fit them for their work in life. It is scarcely necessary to dwell upon the need of such training at this late day. We need no greater argument than our lack in this respect to show us our duty. It were almost a truism to declare that a man's whole life-work is going to be sensibly affected by the stage of preparation he has reached at the time he enters upon it. A few years of close study and application frequently not only influences, but very materially changes, the whole tenor of a man's career from what, in all human probability, it would have been had no such period intervened.

This being the case, what a boon it would be if all of our young ministers would avail themselves of the opportunities that a seminary training affords? To be sure, where it is an utter impossibility for a young preacher to take such a course, he is excused. This article is no exhortation to him. Unfortunately for themselves, all who thus hold aloof from our seminary do not belong to this class. There are many of our young preachers who, by judicious planning, could make their seminary course with comparative ease. At all events it could be done with a little sacrifice. Failure to take advantage of opportunity, except under pressure of unavoidable circumstances, we preachers say, is a most grievous sin. Let us fear lest our well-informed pew-holders do not turn upon us our own guns.

Possibly there was a time when a carefully trained and educated ministry was not a necessity, but, with the present policy of our church, it is now an absolute one. Not only the policy of our church in seeking to capture and maintain strategic points demands a most thorough training for our preachers, but the increase of special and general information among our lay membership likewise calls for it. The preacher is nothing if he be not a leader of men. Let him once get behind, and he himself not only loses, but his sacred office is brought into disrepute. Far be it from us to make such a charge; we merely point out a tendency with its inevitable result.

Let me nr two advantages to be gained by attendance on a theological course he now mentioned:

To begin with, it saves time. The belief in the opposite opinion is what deters many from attending. We hear on every side the question: "Why waste three years in a seminary when there's so much work to do?" We answer, There's no reason of wasting so much valuable time, either at a seminary or elsewhere; but if the question be, "Why spend three years at such a place?" we reply, There's every reason in the world. Three years spent in conscientious study, under competent instructors, will give the student a leverage that no amount of study put in at intervals snatched from his regular work can furnish, perhaps, in a lifetime. He will learn more theology, get a broader view of the development of the church, gain a deeper insight into the Bible in this time than ordinarily he could get in a decade.

The study that a preacher does in the seminary radiates from and finds its centre in the Bible. This is the greatest incentive that could possibly be held out to a young man entering the ministry in the present day. The need of the age is strong Bible preaching. The people have been gorged on worldly wisdom and human philosophy long enough; they feel that their souls are starving for the lack of proper nourishment; they crave the truth of the Bible. The well-directed seminary affords a man an opportunity to get habits of study in regard to God's Word that he can get nowhere else. This is the Possible that a seminary course holds out. Unfortunately it can not be claimed that this is realized by many; but in so far as it is approximated unto, just so far is the student made a better workman and the church guaranteed nobler service.

But the seminary—that is, the true one—is not a mere school for the mind; it is far more: it is a temple for the heart. It is a place for the broadening and deepening of the spirituality of its attendants. There can be found in all the range of men's associations no fitter place for the development of spiritual life than that afforded by the coming together in daily and hourly contact of seventy-five to one hundred godly young men all living with one purpose and working with one end in view—that of preparing themselves for the great work of preaching the gospel. Unity of aim begets helpfulness; helpfulness evolves into sympathy; sympathy grows into love, and where love is the Spirit of Christ reigns supreme.

Often the objection is made that student life in a theological seminary dries one up, causes him to lose his freshness and hands back to the church instead of the live man a bundle of musty bones. It may be so in some instances; but it need not be in any. Men may always be just as spiritual as they wish to be. If a man, under the instruction of godly teachers, thrown with earnest and consecrated fellow-students every day, and amid constant intercourse with the saints of all ages becomes lifeless, why, then, the fault's in him, not in his surroundings, and well would it be for those who cry down all the efforts a few of our leading men are making to better prepare our preachers for their work, to be honest enough to lay the blame where it properly belongs. No, a course in theology does not per se destroy a man's spirituality. It may be perverted; what good thing has not been? By means of a lens we may capture a few rays and, deflecting them from their proper course, we may kindle a flame that will destroy thousands of property; but is this any argument against letting our vegetable and plant life enjoy the genial light and warmth of the sun? The student that comes to the seminary with only a head, and tries to concentrate all the mighty truths with which he comes in contact into that small receptacle, will, in nearly every case, come to disaster; but let him bring his heart as well, and he will find that, as the great truths of God and eternal things come rushing in upon him, the vessel in which he designs to contain them is continually enlarging. With every new truth there is a corresponding expansion of his ability to receive and incorporate it, and soon he will be enabled to see the truth expressed in Neander's beautiful saying, "The heart makes the theologian."

The Theological Department of Vanderbilt University holds out to every young preacher golden opportunities. They can be acquired with but little cost. How long shall Wisdom utter her voice and go unheard?

Church Suppers.

Are they right or wrong? This is a question of vital importance to the church and to the cause of Christ. It deeply concerns every individual church and community. If it is right to get up money for the church by getting up church suppers, then we ought to encourage them. But if it is wrong, then we ought to denounce them as evil and only evil.

To say that there is not evil connected with church suppers is to say we never saw or heard of one. When we, as Christians, become such, by faith in Christ, we are not our own. We are bought with a price, and that price is the precious blood of the Son of God. Now if we are Christ's, then our gold and silver are his. If we are his, and our gold and silver are his, why should we go about giving the Lord his own in such a way as that? Instead of giving cheerfully a free-will offering to the Lord, they have to be hired to give, and that by Satan's devices, the lust of the flesh. The Apostle John says, "The lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world." (I. John ii, 16.) It is wrong for the following reasons:

1. They encourage worldly conformity. "Be not conformed to the world." (Rom. xii, 2.)

2. They encourage gluttony. "He that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." (I. Cor. ix, 25.)

3. They encourage that which wars against the soul and subverts it. "Abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul." (I. Peter ii, 11)

4. They are a disgrace to the church of God because an unholy means is used for a most holy cause, and, therefore, not acceptable in the sight of God.

Effectual Discipline—An Example.

In the gospel written by (John xiii, 21-30), we have Christ's method of executing discipline and purifying his visible church. It is an example that should stand as a model, effectual and worthy of imitation.

Judas was a member of that small visible body Christ had called together; the inner circle, or, if you please, the head center of the visible church. In this Judas was no thief, no robber. He came in by the door; he was a member under the sanction of the calling and choosing of Christ.

In this calling and choosing there was no extra proceeding on the part of Christ. There was no prevision, no pre-arranging for the betrayal and crucifixion. Christ called and chose Judas, not because he wanted a traitor, and needed one for the consummation of his grand purpose to redeem man. He called and chose Judas to be a member of the church, and an apostle faithful and true. He admitted him to all the privileges, and bestowed on him all the blessings of such membership, so far as he was capable of appreciating and enjoying them. Judas responded, accepted, it may be, in good faith. But he proved utterly unworthy. He was a bad element, hurtful and pernicious, and Christ expelled him. The process of discipline that resulted in this expulsion had been going on, perhaps, continuously, for some time, but here it culminated, and we have in this account the distinct, decisive act of expulsion. In this process of trial and expulsion there are several things conspicuous for their absence; one thing conspicuous for its presence and effectiveness. There is no accuser, or prosecutor; there is no indictment in the form of charges and specifications; no formal arraignment before a committee of trial; no pleading and counter-pleading; no finding a verdict; no sentence of expulsion.

The trial is so conducted that the conscience of Judas becomes his own accuser; it becomes the only witness that testifies against him; the only jury that renders a verdict of guilty; the only judge that pronounces sentence.

It was a trial, not for the violation of rules, but for sin that lay deep in the heart, in germ; only once or twice disclosing itself so as to excite even suspicion, and that in the mind of, perhaps, only one. It was a process not of knife or caustic engaged in removing pimples from the surface; but a process that went to the core and reached the hidden mass of corruption.

The trial proceeds so quietly and naturally that none but Judas himself knew he was on trial. Not even the suspicion of a trial was in the minds of his fellow-disciples who were present. And when, as a result, "he goes out," they thought he had gone on some errand of Christian duty or mercy.

It was a trial so righteous, so effectual that Judas "goes out immediately." Goes out, not because driven by law, but "goes out" by the force of self-condemnation; "goes out because he is not of them;" "goes out" just as a decayed branch, by a simple touch, falls, by its own weight of rottenness, from a living tree.

The one thing conspicuously present here, and that gave such success, was a spiritual power, discerning, accusing, convicting, condemning and expelling. A spiritual power that proceeded from Christ; but from Christ, not as the divine Son of God, but from Christ as a pure, holy, spiritual man. Therefore, a spiritual power that belongs to all who are like Christ—a spiritual power that resides and works in the church as the church lives in communion and fellowship with Christ, its Great Head.

This is the element of effectual power the church must have, and this is the power and process of discipline it must exercise in order to its purification as a body of Christian men and women. We see how deeply and effectually it wrought on this occasion; so it will work, so it has always worked, when prevailing in the church.

It seems that duty is thus plain, and there is large room for exhortation.

R. J. JONES.

Easter Sunday and Songs in the Night.

Easter Sunday, the second day of April, dawned bright and beautiful upon the little town of Wolcottville, Ind., reminding us that He who was delivered for our transgressions rose again for justification. The bright morning was in harmony with the blessed fact upon which the hopes of a world are suspended. But over me there was the shadow of a night-season. Does not the Psalmist's idea extend beyond the merely nocturnal darkness into seasons of sorrow and distress?

While the Sabbath bells chimed their welcome to glad worshipers, I watched by the bedside of Frank, my second son, prostrated by painful and serious injury, a locomotive having passed over his lower limbs, resulting in the loss of both below the knee. His mother, brothers and sister were far away, in different States, and, like myself, heartsore and anxious for our dear Frank.

But why tell our troubles to others? Is it as a child cries, for the love and help of its mother? Will others stop to listen? or, if they hear, can they help us? or is it that thus we may get relief from pent-up sorrow? Somehow, from promptings along the line of these questions, or other, we would tell of our sorrows; and the more, if by telling ours we may give surcease to others' sorrows, or lighten somewhat others' burdens. If by so doing we can bring any balm or comfort to other wounded hearts, if any glory to God, or cause others to hear songs in the night-season, then we may tell of our own bleeding hearts and of the distress that brings us low.

The telegram, with its crushing message and imperative "Come at once," handed me while in Quarterly Conference with the Columbus brethren; the prayerful sympathy of the Columbus friends, and a hurried departure on the first train, stopping off at Starkville only to say "Good-by" and a few words to the tearful mother and others who waited at the depot as I passed. I may tell of these things, and of the long railway travel—its two weary nights and its delays; of the telegram that met me at a station far up in Illinois, and how, fearing, yet eager to know its import, I opened it and read, "Frank is resting easily this morning," and then hastened, with grateful heart, to send the words of relief back to those who waited in painful suspense at home.

On the morning after the second night I reached Wolcottville, in Northeastern Indiana. To my anxious inquiry of my son's condition, the station agent said, "The doctor reports him doing well." With suppressed, yet mingled, emotions I was conducted into the room where our suffering boy lay, to find him self-possessed, uncomplaining, and quiet. Kind friends were there to minister to him, and to tell me of the fearful accident; how strong and brave he was, the fortitude he had shown in his sufferings, and how, contrary to almost every expectation, he had survived it all, and that now there was hope of recovery.

That our Frank, so unselfish, so bright, so full of life and cheer, always bringing sunshine into the home, should be called to suffer such sore affliction in the midst of his hopeful young manhood, was, indeed, a grievous and heavy trial. And yet I could not think of the wonderful providence and mercy of God in his almost miraculous preservation. Was it not in answer to many prayers? Even in our deep distress there was cause for thanksgiving and gladness.

For some months past he had been in office work for a company of railroad builders who were pushing every energy to complete a new line of road in Chicago in time for the opening of the World's Fair. Capable, energetic and faithful, he was much esteemed by the company.

It will be gratifying to his friends to know that he bears his great sufferings and privation with unmurmuring submission and with a hopeful and cheerful spirit, saying, "It is for the best." Has no idea of giving up the battle of life; only wishes now to get well, and into some employment, and to be more useful.

It was near the close of the first week after his injury when that bright Easter morning came, to find me watching over him with trembling hope and deep solicitude, and under the deep shadows of a night-season. I could not respond to the call of the church bells; and while I thought of the "songs in the night," it seemed difficult to catch their melody. In the evening, however, I attended special Easter services at an Evangelical Methodist Church. When the earnest pastor prayed for "the heartsore and the sorrowing," that, I felt, was for me. The services were appropriate, and, altogether, seemed as a song in the night, even to me. And then afterwards, calling to mind the merciful providence of God to the sufferer, and to us who held him most dear; that his life had been spared, the fortitude and patience with which he had borne up through the trying ordeal, the many expressions of heartfelt sympathy from friends far away, and of the tender ministries of new-found friends at hand—calling to mind all these things, my heart warmed with gratitude to our heavenly Father, who giveth songs in the night, and I have been compassed about with songs of gladness even in the night-season.

How kind the people of the community have been! I was a stranger among them, with no familiar face to look upon save that of our suffering Frank; his mother, brothers and sister, who longed to minister to him, hundreds of miles away, and yet these good people, by their kindly regards in word and deed, have greatly endeared themselves to us.

When we are brought low, and are called to go along the paths of sorrow, then it is that we come in contact with the warmest, best sympathies of our common humanity, and are brought to feel that "touch of nature that makes the whole world akin."

Wanted—An Explanation.

MR. EDITOR: On page 86, paragraph 135, of the Discipline, under the duties of "preachers in charge," I find the following to be one of the many duties of a Methodist itinerant preacher, viz.: "To furnish everyone removing from his charge with a certificate in the following form," etc.

Now, I understand that a member is still a member of the church where his membership is until his pastor furnishes him with a certificate, according to Book of Discipline, unless they withdraw or lose membership some other way.

Now, on my charge, at one of the preaching-places, in a recent Church Conference, while calling the roll, one member was said to have joined another Methodist society, and had received a "certificate of membership" from the pastor of that church; but I never gave him a certificate from my charge, and the church register does not show that any disposition of his membership had been made of—in fact, all the information I can secure in regard to the matter was that he had joined a Methodist Church at some other point, and has since received a certificate from the pastor of that church.

Now, he certainly can't be a member of two churches; yet the book and reports make that impression. I wish to know how to record it on the church register, so I can inform the secretary of the Church Conference. It would not be proper to say he was dismissed or expelled, for the register does not show either. Neither is he dead, nor the Church Conference didn't order his name to be dropped, and I do not think it would be proper to say he had withdrawn.

This is a problem I can not solve, and I ask the kind editor, or some of his many readers, to explain to me how the matter should be recorded. Some of our people are very careless about their church membership. Even some don't know where theirs is, even if they have any. F. B. ORMOND.

What Next?

During the Winter season we have been treated with various and sundry advertisements for "sweet charity's" sake. Twice have the ADVOCATE columns been used in condemning the practice of dancing for the church or charity. I think the brethren did right in condemning the practice. I said in my heart, Amen! to every word. There are some things, however, as dear to me as the "sweet charity" written of, and that is, the fair name of our Christianity—our church which has always been on the side of right in every moral question. I do not want to be harsh, but I think I have a right, as a member of the Methodist Church, to demand either to know if this clipping is a true statement, or whether it is a slander on the Methodist Church in the neighborhood of Belzoni.

The following is clipped from the Yazoo City Herald. It is signed "Spectator."

CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT.

Editor Herald: A few words in regard to the entertainment at Belzoni on Friday night, of last week, I hope will be sufficient to express to what magnitude our people can turn out and combine pleasure with church benefits. It was a night long to be remembered along the Yazoo river. This entertainment was gotten up for the benefit of the Methodist Church of Belzoni, and was given in the new and spacious store building of S. Castleman, who was master of ceremonies. The Yazoo City Orchestra had been engaged for the occasion, and promptly at ten o'clock began such sweet strains of music that no one thought it amiss to indulge in a dance, which was kept up until one o'clock, when the crowd was invited to partake of one of the most elegant suppers that was ever spread on any table. Supper over, dancing was resumed and kept up until four o'clock, when the crowd dispersed, each one declaring it a memorable occasion in Washington county and the little city of Belzoni. During the evening a large cake was voted to the most popular young lady present, and after a spirited contest between one of Washington county's belles and one of Yazoo county's fairest flowers, the cake was declared won by Miss Ada Bain, of Silver City. This church netted on the benefit about $125, the cake alone bringing $69.60. The church desires to return thanks to officers of the fleet steamer, Birdie Bailey, for numerous courtesies extended, and to the many ladies and gentlemen of Belzoni who assisted so much in making the entertainment a success. SPECTATOR.

Belzoni, Miss., April 5, 1893.

If this is a true report, then where was the preacher in charge? What went with the $69.60 gotten for voting the cake to the young lady? I wonder what is the difference between taking a chance at a race horse on account of his speed and taking a chance at a girl on account of her beauty!

It is either time to take dancing and gambling out of the Discipline as sins to condemn, or bring the force of the law on our members who are gifted in getting up these things, but never have time to attend prayer meeting. I don't know the pastor of Belzoni; but I would be glad for him to clear the matter up for the benefit of us all.

Preachers as Book Agents.

Everyone who has read Bishop Haygood's indignant protest against being utilized by the hypocritical office seeker can enjoy the Bishop's pen puncture of the motives of this important individual.

There is another candidate for favors at the hands of the clergy who needs to be taught a similar lesson. I refer to the subscription book publisher. No one knows, but preachers themselves, how persistently they are appealed to to lend themselves as tools for the purpose of imposing upon a long suffering public the wares of these publishers. Every art is employed to inveigle them into the business. First, a little flattery. The preacher is intelligent and appreciative of the needs of the public, and readily understands the great merit of the book under consideration. Then his philanthropy is appealed to. Here is a great opportunity of doing good. And, finally, the mercenary motive is set before him. Immense profits are to be reaped on a very small outlay of time and labor. If the preacher can give only his "spare time" (as if a preacher ever has any spare time), even then he may easily supplement a small salary with a hundred or so dollars. And if the preacher can not act as agent himself (possibly he has some little self-respect left), then he is asked to be utilized in procuring an agent, with the promise of a book gratis after so many copies are sold!

Now, let us look at this matter straight in the face. It is purely business. The book is made to sell, and "for revenue only." There is no missionary spirit behind it. The publisher is not pining to do good. If he were, he would not get up such a flashy and taking a book on the outside. He would put something better on the inside, publish it in cheap form, and sell it at a small profit. Look at the very impudence of the proposition: A preacher to quit his work to sell a high-priced book (made so by publishers' devices alone) at an immense profit, and all to do good!

The preacher who lends himself to this scheme can not salve over his conscience with the plea of doing good. If this were his real motive, he could find a much less expensive way to. those he would benefit. He could find much cheaper and better books. He could become a Bible colporter and supply the very needy gratis.

I have no sympathy with the subscription book business. Such books are by far the dearest in price, and generally the trashiest on the market. They are generally filled with a weakly moral sentiment and scrapped-up platitudes, put into highly ornamented bindings and given a fancy title, like patent medicines—their twin brothers. If I were compelled to take an agency to supplement my salary, I would sell bacon and flour, or something else useful, and not have people feel that they bought the book just to help me, or to get rid of me.

Whenever preachers become underwriters for candidates, subscription book agents, and endorsers of patent medicines, they have sacrificed a degree of manliness and self-respect which they can ill afford to lose.

Saturday—Wisdom the Gift of God. (James I, 1-8.)

INTRODUCTORY.

These verses, like those of the last lesson, are taken from the introductory section of the book, which was written, probably at Jerusalem, about 900 B. C. This chapter is one of the most beautiful in the book of Proverbs, or in the inspired volume, and the literature of the world does not present a passage of greater beauty. The closeness of the connection between this chapter and the preceding chapters is seen in the expression, "My son." Wisdom is still giving instruction to men. In the first ten verses we have exhortations (1) to obedience, with the promise of "favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man;" (2) to trust, with the promise to divine guidance; (3) to humility, with the promise of temporal blessing; (4) to consecration, with the promise of abundant prosperity.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE CHASTENING OF THE LORD.

These words (vs. XI, XII) at first glance seem out of harmony with the rest of the chapter, and especially with the preceding verses, that promise so many blessings to those who heed wisdom's call. But, in truth, they contain the very instruction that is needed. The inference might have been drawn from the promises of divine favor that the child of God would be exempt from affliction, and there was need of the assurance that these very afflictions are the strongest evidences of our Father's love.

Ver. 11. "My son, despise not the chastenings of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction." "My son." The words indicate tenderness and fatherly solicitude. Do not think lightly of, or be offended at, the discipline or correction of the Lord, nor rebel nor become impatient because of affliction. Affliction is not always calamitous; it may be disciplinary and educative, or it may be corrective. In either case it indicates the interest and favor of God. "God will either end thee or mend thee. Wilt thou then kick on?" (Clarke.)

Ver. 12. "For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, even as a father the son in whom he delighteth." Know that this which frets and offends you is the evidence of your Father's love and the means by which he would guide and instruct you. God treats his children not only as a father who would wisely and carefully promote the interests of his son, but also as a father would act toward the son whose welfare was his delight, his joy. Surely the father will not mistreat such a son.

II.—THE VALUE OF WISDOM.

Ver. 13. "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding." Oh, the manifold happiness of the man who, though chastened and afflicted, has become possessed of wisdom's ways, who lays hold upon understanding as a precious treasure drawn out of its hiding-place.

Ver. 14. "For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver and the gain thereof than fine gold." The profit to him who finds it is greater than if he had found silver, and the return to him who possesses it is greater than the return from the possession of a nugget of fine gold.

Ver. 15. "She is more precious than rubies; and all the things that thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her." She is more valuable than the most costly of precious stones, and superior beyond comparison to anything that can be mentioned as an object of desire.

Ver. 16. "Length of days in her right hand, and in her left are riches and honor." The reason of the superior value of wisdom is now given. She stands like a princess, holding in her right hand the greatest boon—long life, and in her left riches and honor. These she offers to her children. Jewels can not give these. Riches she can give, but not honor, much less long life.

Ver. 17. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Silver, fine gold and rubies can not give long life and honor, as we have seen. How important are they to give ways of pleasantness and paths of peace! "I feel like a galley-slave, and worn out with care,' wrote one of the most successful of modern millionaires." (Farrar.)

Ver. 18. "She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy every one that retaineth her." Length of days is in her right hand; but she herself is the tree of life. A glorious immortality is the reward of him who eagerly seeks and strongly takes hold upon wisdom; therefore blessed is the man who holdeth her fast.

III.—THE WISDOM OF THE LORD.

Ver. 19. "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens." The excellency of wisdom is further seen in that it was by wisdom that God created and established the heavens and the earth. For not in nature, but in degree and in the character of its operations, does wisdom in man differ from wisdom in God.

Ver. 20. "By his knowledge the depths are broken up and the clouds drop down the dew." Not the creation only, but mysterious workings of nature are the results of divine wisdom. The breaking up of the depths and the dropping of the dew (or mist or rain) probably mean the fountains springing from the earth and the gentle showers falling from the heavens, with possibly a reference to the original separation of the waters above and below the firmament. (Gen. I, 6.) The wonderful circuit of the waters in evaporation, distillation and precipitation is one of the most wise and beneficient provisions of divine goodness.

IV.—THE SAFETY OF WISDOM'S WAYS

Ver. 21. "My son, let them not depart from thine eyes; keep sound wisdom and discretion." The direct address is here resumed. My son, never lose sight of that which is so glorious as an attribute of God, so excellent as a possession to man; take firm hold upon sound wisdom and discretion.

Ver. 22. "So shall they be life unto thy soul and grace to thy neck." In verse 3 of this chapter we are exhorted to make mercy and truth at once the ornament of the life and the vital principle of the soul. In this verse we have the corresponding promise: They shall be true life to thy soul and like a necklace of jewels around thy neck. "They are both vital and ornamental." (Hunter.)

Ver. 23. "Then shalt thou walk in thy way safely, and thy foot shall not stumble." "Then the journey of life shall be safe and smooth." (Stuart.) It is sin that leads men into paths of danger. The path of righteousness is the path of safety.

Ver. 24. "When thou liest down thou shalt not be afraid; yea, thou shalt lie down and thy sleep shall be sweet." "The preceding verse describes the safety and prosperity of more active life; this one, the security and pleasantness of repose. The truly wise man—the virtuously wise—knows that the Lord is his guardian, that he that keepeth him shall never slumber nor sleep." (Hunter.)

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. There are some lessons that can be taught only by affliction. (Verse 11.) An aged minister, whose life had been one of great activity, during the lingering illness that ended with his death said: "God has by this long sickness taught me the lesson of patience; I have learned to wait."

2. God corrects because he loves. If he did not love, he might destroy; but why correct? (Verse 12.)

3. Wisdom is a treasure that must be found. The possession of knowledge presupposes a conscious effort to acquire. (Verse 13.)

4. Godliness declares a better dividend than a silver mine. (Verse 14.)

5. Wisdom is an ornament to the man; rubies only adorn his body. (Verse 15.)

6. Wisdom is conducive to longevity. So says the Word of God, and so say the insurance companies. (Verse 16.)

7. Not only the end toward which the wise man journeys is blessed; the way itself is pleasant. (Verse 17.) Not so the pursuit of wealth or fame.

8. The wisdom that created and governs the heavens and the earth guarantees the security of the righteous. (Verses 19-24.)

Woman's Missionary Meeting of the Greenville District.

Our fourth district woman's missionary meeting met at Greenville, Miss., April 20; Mrs. T. B. Clifford, district secretary, presiding. Mrs. Mount was elected secretary for the occasion. Reported seven live auxiliary societies and six juveniles. One juvenile has died and one new one organized.

Reports from auxiliaries were encouraging. Three auxiliaries were represented by delegates: Lula, Mrs. Young; Arcola, Mrs. J. B. Williams; Greenville, Mrs. J. N. Dunn.

Juveniles—Gunnison; written report by Scott Seaton; Mrs. G. L. Wrenn, lady manager. Cleveland—"Addie Gordon Jewels"—a good report by Maggie Pierman. Arcola; Mrs. J. B. Williams. Greenville "Swamp Lilies;" Devereaux Wyche.

Mrs. Clifford urged societies to report promptly to her, as she has to send her report to Mrs. Stone, and unless received in time will be left out; also spoke of benefit of mite boxes; recommended women to subscribe for the Advocate. Mrs. Somerville spoke briefly, urging parliamentary rules and business forms as beneficial. Mrs. A. B. Finley, president of Greenville Auxiliary, spoke earnestly of consecration. The district secretary impressed us that every auxiliary send delegate to annual meeting, in June, at Water Valley. The Parsonage and Home Mission Society met in the afternoon.

At eight P. M., after singing and prayer by Bro. Mimms, of Arcola, Little Pet Jackson came forward and delivered the address of welcome to the juveniles in a sweet, child-like manner. Then the welcome address to the auxiliaries was delivered in well-chosen words by Miss Susie P. Trigg, of Greenville. Response by Mrs. Dr. Sparkman, of Cleveland. Recitations followed. "Famine Cry," by Maggie Pierman, of Cleveland. "Who Will Go For Us?" by Edna Thomas, of Arcola. "Opportunities and Responsibilities of the Woman's Missionary Society," by Mrs. A. S. Olin, of Greenville. "Freckled-face Girl," by Lula Derrick, of Shelby. Recitation, by Margaret Dunn, of Greenville. Recitation, "Other Sheep Have I," by Mrs. R. B. Sims. The annual report of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was read. Then came the address of our district secretary. To say it was good would but dimly convey the idea of what it was.

The perfume of this meeting will linger with us for time to come. We not only had a delightful, social time, but our meetings were a spiritual blessing to each of us.

Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Greenville District.

In accordance with the notice published in the ADVOCATE, the district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was held in Greenville, Thursday, April 20.

The business meeting for the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was held in the afternoon, and was conducted by Mrs. Somerville, president of the Conference society. Our esteemed presiding elder, Bro. Randolph, opened the meeting with appropriate services. The district secretary was present, and gave her report. The following auxiliaries were represented: Shelby Juveniles; "The Little Home Builder," by Lula Derrick. Shelby auxiliary, Cleveland, Lula, Greenville; written reports from Bolivar and Jonestown. An account of the Greenville Aid Society was given by Mrs. Finley. The aged and beloved president of our local Parsonage and Home Mission Society, Mrs. P. Hunt, was introduced, and gave us her blessing and affectionate greeting. An interesting account of our recent annual meeting was given by Mrs. Wilczinski. The president then made an address which was appreciated by her co-workers. Mrs. Mount, president of the State W. C. T. U., extended an invitation to all present to attend the convention, May 5. The meeting closed with doxology and benediction by Bro. Randolph.

No work has grown more rapidly than ours, and we feel, with hearts full of gratitude, that our Father's blessing is with us.

BRIEFS.

Many people speak of duty as a load and look upon religious exercise as a sort of necessary penance. Such people are poor starvelings and do not partake of Christ. It is as natural to pray, to sing, to rejoice, to praise, as it is to breathe, when the spirit feeds daily of Christ. Many people serve God by resolution annually renewed and daily departed from, but persons who feed on Christ serve God, like lambs skip and play, because they can't help it.—J. W. Lee, D. D.

For several issues we have had so many church notices that part of our paper looked like a bulletin board. Ah! but those notices mean a great deal. They mean that our people are "hustling around mightily" in the work of the Lord and they want the world to know it. Those notices, read aright, say, "See how these Mississippi and Louisiana Methodists are working together for the progress of Zion." We are expecting to hear great things pretty soon.

The Catholics celebrated the Centenary of the New Orleans Diocese last week. There were present and participating in the celebration archbishops and bishops and clergy from all parts of the country. Cardinal Gibbons was also present. The celebration was carried out with all the magnificence and pomp which the Catholic Church is wont to display on such occasions. What one hundred years ago was "one diocese with sixty thousand members, now contains twenty bishoprics with nearly three millions of Catholics." The diocese of New Orleans is the next oldest in the United States.

An abstract of receipts and work done by our Church Extension Board during the past year shows that up to March 31 there had been collected on General Account $65,925, and on Loan Fund Account $11,318, making a total of $77,243, which is $1,472 more than the year before. During the past year 431 churches have been assisted to the amount of $85,276, which is four churches more than the preceding year. The Board has paid all its expenses up to date "and is literally free of debt." Dr. Morton and his co-workers have made a good showing, and we trust feel encouraged to go forward with renewed zeal.

Never, until I became a presiding elder, did I have any just conception of how useful the office might be. It has wonderful opportunities; and the presiding elder ought to be a tremendous intellectual and spiritual power toning up the preachers and quickening the people. Little-minded men, narrow men, selfish men, prejudiced men, hasty men, halfway religious men and lazy men have no business in the presiding eldership, nor have proud, contentious, self-determined men. The office calls for big hearts, clear heads, warm souls; earnest spirits—men humble all through, religious all over and diligent students in the school of Common Sense—men who love the preachers and can see beyond the boundaries of their own districts. Good Lord, deliver us from "my district" men!—Josephus Anderson, D. D.

A Danger Threatened!

It looks as if our church is fast evolving into a vast machine for the collection of money. There are quite a number of organizations in the church, and the number is constantly growing larger; and the ultimate object of nearly everyone of these organizations is to raise money. The workers in these organizations are busy all the time inventing schemes and putting forth earnest efforts to secure cash. An outsider, looking at these schemes and efforts carried on so persistently by so many different bodies, must be impressed with the idea that the Methodist Church is fast becoming a great money collector. The spectacle is also having a bad influence on the church. We are fast coming to think that the successful organization is the one which succeeds most on this line. And this thought has come to judge ministerial work.

There are many people now, in the church and out of it, who have come to regard him as the successful preacher who can so manipulate these money-collecting organizations as to report to his Annual Conference the largest collections. This is an evil that is growing among us.

Of course, the church must have money to carry on her operations, and the more money she has the better and more efficiently she can do her work; but when we turn everything into an instrument to raise money, we are getting into a region of danger. Are we not in danger of cultivating a spirit of church covetousness in this matter? This is the sin of the age and may easily become the sin of the church. It seems to us we are emphasizing at the wrong point. If we would concentrate our efforts at some other points we would not suffer in a financial way, and would make progress on other important lines. More and more strenuous efforts to get the people converted and consecrated to God would result in not only adding to the number of the saved, but would add largely to number of dollars poured into the church coffers. Hence we think if these various organizations of the church would turn some of their energies in the direction of working for the salvation of souls, the collection of the money needed would be much more easily accomplished and they would get more of it.

Fruit Already.

The mass meeting held in Artillery Hall, last week, to voice public opinion in the matter of the enforcement of the law against gambling, has already brought forth good results. The sentiment expressed by such a large concourse of our people was too specific and too plain to be ignored. So the Police Board, at its next meeting, thought; for that Board unanimously passed this resolution:

Resolved, That the Superintendent of Police be and is hereby instructed to issue forthwith clear and stringent orders to all precinct commanders to enforce by all means at their command the laws of the State and the city ordinances of this city against gambling. Strict obedience to these orders will be required of all officers on the force.

Once more the voice of the people has shown its power, but that voice must be continuously heard in aid of the faithful officers of the law. Vice is not only strong, but aggressive, and only waits an opportunity to take advantage of the least show of weakness on the part of its opposers. Watchfulness is needed more than ever. The Sunday Rest League must not go to sleep now, because of this first victory. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Dear brother, put all your strength in your preaching, and put it all in every time.

Millsaps College.

The first session of Millsaps College will soon close. The friends of the institution have every reason to be gratified and encouraged by the results accomplished thus far. Students have come from nearly every section of Mississippi and from other States, to the number of one hundred and fifty. They have had good health; not a serious case of sickness has occurred. A very satisfactory organization of classes was effected early in the session, and the work done has been gratifying in a high degree. A very wholesome religious influence has prevailed among the students. Thirteen of them are preparing for the ministry in our church. Two have been licensed since leaving here. One of them had hesitated for a long time, but said the influences here were such he could not but yield to the call of the Holy Spirit. This means a great deal. A father wrote me that he did not know that his son ever thought of preaching, but he preferred to have him where if the call should come he would hear it. The zeal displayed by our young preachers during the session is worthy of all praise.

Of course, we do not claim to have a perfect state of things, but I am sure I never knew such a large proportion of pupils to do well. The teachers have been faithful in their work and have devoted themselves to the interests of the students with untiring zeal.

I recite these facts in connection with the history of our first session that we may be impressed with our responsibility as a church. There is nothing in the way of the very largest success of this great college enterprise if we do our duty and improve our opportunity. But we must not make the mistake of supposing that the work is accomplished. We have just begun. It is of the utmost importance that the appeals of our financial agent shall receive a prompt and generous response. To falter now would retard our work and result in injury that we could not repair for years. Our facilities must be enlarged to meet the demands upon us for a new session. As Methodists in Mississippi, let us have the resolution thus expressed by Bishop Haygood for the Methodists in Georgia: "We will not make meagre results absolutely certain by deliberately preparing for them." If with humble, but earnest faith we prepare for larger and better things, the Good Providence will in due time help us to attain them. W. B. MURRAH.

A Revival in Worldliness.

The devil is having a great and widespread revival of irreligion all over the country. It is spreading like a tidal wave over the whole land. They tell me it is in the cities and towns, and I know it is in the country places, for I am in the country. It is, mainly, a revival of dancing and card playing. The devil has invented some new names for each of these diversions, neither of which can be used in the name of the Lord Jesus. Somehow the young people, and some older persons, have gone wild over these games. They are all the go—really, they are the rage. Awhile back it was "progressive euchre," and now it is "cinch" in cards. So they tell me. I do not know anything about cards—never played a game and never saw a game played; do not know one card from another. You see I grew up in the backwoods where we had no society, popularly so called, and my mother had some pronounced views on this subject and on the matter of dancing, too. In addition to this, I professed religion and joined the church when the General Rules were law. If I stayed in the church, I had to keep the rules. I preferred the church to the world. And so it happened that I did not play cards, nor attend theaters, nor go to horse races, and I have never seen a company of people dancing. I have seen a few monkeys, some negroes and a cinnamon bear or two do what they told me was dancing. I rather liked it. It was ridiculous, and so funny to me. When I was growing up if a Methodist danced, or went to the theater, or attended a horse race, or played cards, why he was had up, and if he didn't quit, he was "whopped" out of the church in a jiffy. It is not so now. The rules are run over oftener than they are observed.

Stewards in our church, deacons in the Baptist Church and elders in the Presbyterian Church have dances and card parties in their houses. Some preachers and pastors oppose these things and cry aloud against them; but such preachers are not popular, are not in demand. They are not popular with the young people, and so for one reason or another, mainly, rather ostensibly, because they do not attract and draw the young people, they are moved, or get a call elsewhere; really they are not called where they are.

In our church the real reason for removal is rarely ever presented to the Bishop. As presented, it looks as if those who presented it loved the church and had pure motives in what they ask. Really they want to get rid of a man who attacks popular sins. In some instances, a rich layman who allows the rules of the church to be trampled underfoot in his house constantly has more weight and influence with the appointing power than a whole cabinet of legal advisers. So that standing up for the rules of the church and the administration of discipline has come to be, or is coming to be, equivalent to removal—cutting off one's own head. A statement of facts is not a "railing accusation." If the statement be denied, I could furnish a number of cases in proof. Two of our Bishops have intimated, if they have not plainly said, as much in public print in the past few weeks. I have no cause of complaint on the ground of removal, as the Minutes of my Conference for twenty-odd years will show. Indeed, I have not been faithful enough in administering discipline to call for removal, and yet my speech and my preaching against dancing and card-playing, and other fashionable diversions, has stirred up much mud. One lick at these forms of sin is sure to make the fire fly.

The young people of my charge tell me there is a world of fun and pleasure in dancing and card-playing, particularly in "progressive euchre" and "cinch." I haven't a doubt of it, not one. I am sure they enjoy it, or they would not indulge in it as they do. There is hardly a week that I do not have an earnest talk with from one to a dozen young people of my charge about these fashionable follies.

One thing I know as a pastor. It is this: Just as young people indulge in dancing and card-playing, in that proportion exactly do they lose interest in Bible reading, in attending preaching, Sunday-school, prayer meeting and other means of grace. In that proportion exactly do they become prayerless and godless until in the end they say, "I have no religion now and never had any." Of all the cases I have ever known, I have never known this to fail in a single case.

Card-playing and dancing, for amusement only, are as inimical and deadly to piety as profane swearing and stealing. They are more dangerous and seductive to young people, because apparently less harmful. The danger of stumping your toe and getting a severe fall is greater in the case of a small grub than of a large one. Our young people go back to the world and follow Christ no more, not from profane swearing and stealing, but from dancing and card-playing. A steady decline in piety is just as certain to lead to utter deadness to God and to all that is good as one leap into that condition.

The devil is too wise and too artful to ask young people to spring into hell at one bound; but he will go along and tole them there, step by step, so cunningly and artfully, that they will be there before they realize what they have done. The dance and the card table lead away from God, and for this reason the rules of the church and all true pastors are opposed to these things. GILDEROY.

Revival Meetings.

The revival meetings, which have been in progress for several weeks, continued through last week. At Felicity Street the meeting, in charge of the evangelists, Walker and Rinehart, resulted in much success. Dr. Walker having left about the middle of the week, the services were continued by Dr. Rinehart and Dr. Beard until Sunday night. This has been a remarkable revival in many respects.

Bro. LaPrade's meeting at Carondelet has grown in interest and influence. The impression made by the preaching of LaPrade and Parker has been most profound. The services are still going on. Last Sunday the presiding elder was with Bro. Johns, of Algiers, and began a meeting which is to be carried on the rest of the week. Bros. Sawyer and Wynn are both preparing to begin revival services. At Carrollton Bro. Henry closed his meeting after a successful week, during which six persons were converted.

All these efforts and successes are in proof of the fact that there is a general and widespread awakening in our city.

Centenary Endowment.

MR. EDITOR: At the Woodville District Conference, held at Centerville, last week, $1,405 in notes and cash were added to the endowment of Centenary College. Now, if the preachers will hasten to secure the thousand dollars Bro. Mitchel proposes to give, and those whose interest is due will forward it to us within the next thirty days, we shall close a good session's work on the seventh of June with a cheerful gratitude.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Meridian District Conference

will convene in East End Church, Meridian, Thursday, May 25, at 9 o'clock A. M. Bishop Haygood has promised to preside. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. D. G. W. Ellis. A full attendance of all members and delegates is urgently requested and expected. A cordial welcome and hospitable entertainment await them. The preachers will prepare reports according to printed form furnished, and will see that the recording stewards have the Quarterly Conference Record Books present for examination according to Book of Discipline. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

Notice.

Will the members of the Winona District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, and all who expect to attend that Conference, please notify the undersigned as soon as they see this notice, so that we may have homes assigned them. The Conference will convene in Winona, Miss., May 26-28, preceded by a meeting of the W. M. S. and P. and H. M. Society of Winona district, on the twenty-fifth. We hope to have a full attendance. Come, brethren, in the spirit of the Master.

JOHN RITCHEY, Pastor.

Mississippi State Sunday-School Convention.

All delegates to the Sunday-school Convention, to be held at Crystal Springs, on May 16, 17 and 18, are requested to notify (promptly) Mr. J. M. Newton, chairman Committee on Entertainment.

NOTES.

There is always a tendency to substitute form for spirit, rules for principles. It is so much easier to conform the conduct to a rule than to make a principle inform the whole life. Moses prescribed rules; Christ inculcated principles! Rules for children; principles for men!—Josiah Strong, D. D.

David Hume paid a high compliment to a preacher, when, being twitted about going to hear him preach, he said: "I don't believe all he says, but he does; and once a week, at least, I like to hear a man who believes what he says." Let us show the people that we really believe what we preach, and they will come again.

Even the Ten Commandments are not—as we well know—final, at least not in their letter, but are designed as a schoolmaster, says the apostle, to graduate us into that higher life in Christ, where we shall no longer need to be commanded, but where the inner condition may safely be trusted to shape the outer life, and not the outer life have to be prescribed by law to shape the inner condition.—Sunday School Times.

We are of opinion that it is not right for the pastor to invite every preacher who may come along to preach. Courtesy to brethren is a beautiful thing, but duty to a congregation is not to be put aside for courtesy to a visiting brother. We have known pastors to do this to the hurt of their congregations and to the hurt of the visiting brother.

He believes in the devil who does what the devil wants him to do; even as he believes in Jesus who obeys his word. Tried by this test, many who stoutly deny that such a being as Satan exists, are firm believers in him. And it is certain that this evil spirit is not anxious to convince men of his existence. Indeed, he would much rather they doubted it, so long as that very doubt is one of the links in the chain by which he is binding their lives to his chariot wheel. It is not the theoretical, but the practical belief that is the important thing.—Zion's Herald.

And if, dear reader, you are in "orders," and yet in youth, know that each revolving year is charged with augmenting vexations. The time will come when, tossing on the rich couch of a city parsonage, sleepless by reason of stings and strife, you will recall your days as a "second man on a circuit" as cons in the vestibule of Eden. Pity the pastors of first churches. Could you see and size up their budgets of woe and worry, like the man in the fable you would swing your own bag, light in contrast as elder-down to pig-iron, and go your way merry as the lark singing at the gate of heaven. —Richmond Advocate.

The preacher who allows himself to speculate upon what he might have achieved if he had chosen some other avocation, is treading on dangerous ground. Such musings will dampen the fire of earnestness, and preaching the gospel will become drudgery of the worst kind if they are cherished. "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looks back is not fit for the kingdom of God." The preacher who loves his work will not do it. Temptations and obstacles to him are means for developing power. Love overcomes all.

The names and signs appropriated by the liquor traffic have sometimes a ghastly, sometimes a ludicrous, appropriateness. A sign over a whisky house on Post street, in this city, is the representation of a bird with outstretched wings, being consumed in the fire. "Phœnix" is written above it; but we can think of nothing as we pass but a poor drunkard being spitted in a flame of gin or bourbon to make a repast for the saloon keeper. A horror of "the fire which is not quenched" also haunts the mind; for "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." —Pacific Methodist Advocate.

We have also seen many such signs over the gin shop. The most appropriate one we have ever seen was in large gilt letters over the bar, "PANDORA'S BOX."

The apostle uses this phrase: "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." There is one construction which may be put upon these words which may be pondered to profit; that is, God, the Father, as Christ knew him. "No man knoweth the Father save the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him." The true conception of God is the conception Jesus had of him. We are to learn the character of the Father through the revelations which the Son gives of him. And as Jesus said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," to learn the character of Christ is to learn the character of the Father. He who knows Christ knows the Father, and such knowledge is life eternal.

It has been the boast of the M. E. Church, South, that it was free from "clerical politics," which have in some cases proven such a scandal in our sister Methodism. But well-defined rumors are current that this evil is creeping into our church in some quarters, and that there are a few men who covet earnestly the best gifts, and in seeking to attain their objects are resorting to the methods of the ward politician. The Advocate protests most vigorously against this innovation, and hopes that if any man aspires to General Conference election or to official position and resorts to electioneering either for himself or through his friends, that fact will be sufficient to keep him at home and in the rank and file. We must have nothing that savors of simony in our church, and let us maintain our pure record in this regard.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

A Pleasant Anniversary.

From a Baton Rouge paper we clip the following:

There was a pleasant birthday anniversary of the Methodist Ladies' Aid Society given by Mrs. Dr. W. H. N. Magruder, on Thursday, April 20. There was more than a score of the elect ladies gathered to hear the successes, trials and toils recounted in beautiful diction by Mrs. Hatch. From its inception the society has proven its great usefulness, winning its meed of honor by faithfully, persistently toiling for the liquidation of a debt on the church; and as soon as that object was accomplished, finding other work ready at hand, they turned their generosity to a new field in meeting the incidental expenses of the church. But these expenses became too insignificant an object to toil for, and they began to talk and work for a home for their pastor. Towards this steadfastly, immovably they worked like a majestic ship plows through the waves toward a haven two thousand miles off; they heard not a doubting Thomas; they heeded not all the prognostications of failure, but held their money and lost no hopes, till soon there was a goodly sum in the bank. Then friends increased and doubters grew reticent and finally disappeared from the field of action.

Nothing succeeds like success, and soon the sum grew by the hundred instead of the dollar till the present cottage on Laurel street was purchased and presented to the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Church. Quite a feat of toil and good financiering. The society has just reached the age of twenty-one years, and for her dowry has laid up where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt the handsome sum of five thousand three hundred and thirteen dollars. But the recounting of successes is only to incite to redoubled energies, and the society looks forward to many more years of usefulness and generosity.

After a very enjoyable afternoon the company dispersed filled with enthusiasm, and like Alexander, after he had finished the last of many conquests, began to look around for another kingdom worthy of his steel, so they are looking for a noble deed to be done for their church.

In the words of the Western hard, "Long may she wave and never waver." May this society flourish like a green tree planted by the river of waters, never knowing when drouth cometh. KAY.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Chunkey, L. P. Meador, P. C.....$3 10

A little girl during a week of prayer and self-denial said she did not know of what to deny herself unless it was milk, and she "would not get any of that anyway!" The old folks did not say that, but many of them practiced self-denial in that way.

The D. D.'s differ as well as the M. D.'s. A prominent preacher writes: "Your persistence and courage in pressing collections for that debt are admirable. May success be the result, as it is certainly deserved. We are ahead on our work in that matter at least." Another distinguished divine dips his pen into a different ink and prescribes thus: "If you think such treatment as you have and are still measuring out to your brethren becomes a Christian minister, and adds to either your usefulness or your comfort, you are more than welcome to keep it up." That brother, however, unlike the other, had not led his people in the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial, as requested by the Board of Missions and ordered by the Annual Conference! "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." (Prov. xxvii, 6.) Fire away, brethren, but don't fail to pray or to take up the collection! Don't let Morton and Forest, Eucutta, Hazlehurst, Brookhaven, Canton and Fayette fall behind Chunkey!

A "wise-hearted woman" devotes a golden cross to the work of bringing her heathen sisters to the cross of Christ, the ornament being valued at $——.

There are diamonds as well as dollars in that district—at Natchez, Port Gibson and elsewhere—not yet consecrated to God.

"Can you not come and by a sermon or lecture prepare our people for a week of prayer and self-denial?" writes an experienced preacher, who is well qualified for that sort of work, even if his predecessors were not. Begin, brother, and set your neighbors a good example!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

HOW IT CAN BE DONE BEFORE THE FIRST OF JUNE.

Rev. D. L. Mitchel, publisher of the ADVOCATE, agreed with the agent that if the preachers and people of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conference would get 1,000 new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, he would turn over $1,000 to the endowment fund. Brother, how easy is this! You wanted to do something, but had not seen what you could do. Let every preacher send to the agent, J. W. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., five new subscribers. You will have blessed five homes. You will have strengthened our paper. You will have added $1,000 to our endowment. Now, brother, will you help? Let every preacher from the fifth Sunday in April to the fourth Sunday in May, both publicly and privately, urge upon our people the necessity of taking our church paper. If we do not reach the 1,000, Bro. Mitchel will still divide. Now altogether. Let me hear from you early and often. How many laymen will join us in this work? How many preachers and laymen will join our Gideon Band? Be sure and send your names and money to J. W. Chambers, agent, Jackson, Miss. This will prevent mistakes.

Christian Endeavor.

Arrangements have been made with the following railroads for reduced rates to the first Annual Convention of the Louisiana Christian Endeavor Union, to be held in this city at Rayne Memorial Church, May 19-21. The East Louisiana will sell a cheap round-trip ticket. Delegates coming over the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific will take certificates from the agents when purchasing the tickets. These certificates, countersigned by the secretary of the convention, will entitle to one-third rate returning. The Northern and Southern Methodists, the Presbyterian, the Seventh-Day Baptist, the Baptist, the Congregational and the Christian Churches are all represented on the program.

Veteran's Day.

W. M. Thornton, Treas. Joint Board Finance, Lake, Miss.—

DEAR BRO: I have just read your report in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. I am surprised, ashamed, grieved, at the humiliating fact. Seventy-nine candidates for superannuation refused, failed or neglected to observe "Veteran's Day."

Yours truly, J. A. B. JONES.

Sister P. M. Goodwyn has a well-located cottage on the Tabernacle Square at the Seashore Camp Grounds for rent for the entire season. Those desiring to use such a place should write to her at No. 486 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

We call attention to the advertisement of Mr. E. J. Mack, who is engaged in the gentlemen's furnishing business at No. 5 Commercial Place, New Orleans. Mr. Mack is a reliable, experienced merchant whose word can be trusted.

To Whom It May Concern

Macon, Ga., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

REDUCED RATES TO CHICAGO AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Tickets now on sale from New Orleans to Chicago and return at $36 75 for the round trip; sale to continue daily until Oct. 15, 1893, inclusive; good to return until Nov. 15, 1893. Remember that the Central Route is the only railroad from the South whose trains enter Chicago without transfer or detour in full view of the Exposition Buildings, and make regular stops at the World's Fair gates. (World's Fair Station—Midway Plaisance.)

For further particulars, tickets, etc., call on or address your local or nearest I. C. R. R. ticket agent.

A. H. HANSON, G. P. A., Chicago.

Notice.

Dear Miss Werlein: Please notify anyone in your Conference you know wishes to go to St. Louis to the convention, that we have secured reduced rates (one and a third fare) on certificate plan, on the following roads: Cotton Belt, in Arkansas and Missouri; Kansas and Texas, in Missouri; St. Louis and San Francisco, in Missouri and Arkansas; St. Louis and Iron Mountain, in Missouri and Arkansas; and are hoping for extension of same on roads connecting with them. We have secured the same rates on the entire system of Mobile and Ohio, Cairo Short Line, and Louisville and Nashville. The ladies in St. Louis should be notified at once of those coming. Yours,

LUCINDA B. HELM.

Seashore District.

Surely my notice to attending members of our approaching District Conference was not seen, as but two responses have been received. Again I ask all preachers and delegates intending to come to District Conference to notify me at once, if they want me to provide a Conference home.

Respectfully, R. B. DOWNER.

Pearlington, Miss., April 27, 1893.

Members who expect to come via Nicholson (if not too many at one time) can secure passage in hacks, $3 the round trip, by giving timely notice to me. About fourteen persons can be accommodated by teams of livery at Pearlington at one time. If any should come to Nicholson, who fail to secure passage for Tuesday morning, hacks will go back to Nicholson, Wednesday, on application.

Grenada, Miss.

We have just closed one of the most wonderful meetings in this place that I ever saw anywhere. Do not think there can have been less than two hundred conversions, in and out of the church. Largely over one hundred accessions to the churches. I received fifty-eight into our church last Sunday, and more to follow. Twenty-four joined the Presbyterians. The whole town, regardless of denominations, came under its influence, and was benefited. In the class received last Sunday was the six-year-old child and the seventy-five-year old man. The conversions were not of the "crook-of-the-elbow" brand, but it was old-fashioned altar work. Bro. Newell is happy. Every pupil boarding in the college and every teacher is converted. Everything about the institution now in the church (the baby was baptized during the meeting). Bro. McIntosh, who did the preaching in the meeting, is a man who prevails with God in prayer. He preaches a gospel that he has faith in and an experience with. He prevails with men as a consequence. His only power is faith in God. His postoffice address is Cherokee, Ala. But he says he can not make any more appointments in Mississippi this Summer. I thank God for enabling me to get him in Grenada. All Grenada joins me in giving thanks. T. B. MALONE.

The cross is the concord of Scriptures, and, as it were, the boundary and border-land of old and new things. The cross conciliates heaven and earth; the cross re-joins men and angels in the unanimity of their ancient concord. The cross is the death of vice, and the fountain and life of all virtue. The cross is the courage of those that are fighting bravely; the recovery of those that are fallen; the crown of those that are victorious. The cross subjects us to a momentary death, and recompenses us with eternal life.—Peter Damiani.

ON PRAYER.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON.

More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day,
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

The Distributing Power.

BY MARY R. DALRWIN.

What a gift it is, the power to distribute! It is the Master's own, for he had it himself in the largest measure; he could multiply the loaves and fishes, and offer to the multitude food for the body, but, better than all, he possessed the desire and the ability to distribute the best gifts that would satisfy the cravings of the inner man, give him an outlook and help him to take hold upon life eternal. It is this ability received from him that gives men and women the right to a place among the helpers and inspirers of mankind and lifts their purpose to worthiness.

We truly live only when having received we are able to give out what has blessed us and enlarged heart and mind. When we get beyond the distributing point our lives are worthless.

But whispers some dear old person with quivering lip, "I am no longer of any use in the world. I surely have passed the point of which you speak."

But wait a minute before you breathe another word; and keep the tears back just a second from the dimmed eyes, and don't, I beg, come to a final conclusion until you have heard me out. I have a question or two to ask the aged man or woman who sits day after day in one chair, and looks out, it may be, upon scenes that are associated with the bright and beautiful past gone from them forever, at least as they sometimes think, though in their better moments I believe that they agree with the dear old Quaker poet, who held on to the very last to the certainty, "that love can never lose its own."

But about this distributing point and power, I know before I ask my question what you will plead, almost without an audible tone, and this dumb pleading is of the strongest sort. The hands lying folded, the work-worn hands have a pathetic way of saying we have finished our task; there is no more strength in us; once we flew nimbly as we labored early and late, never tiring in trying to accomplish what was given us to do for the loved ones under our care. At the forge, the carpenter's bench, in the office with the pen or pencil, it was love's labor always. Or it was the little dress to finish—what were weary hands or aching eyes to the joy or comfort of the child when the garment was finished!

But now the work is all laid aside, and the little ones are grown and the nest is empty and the winds and cold rains beat about the old home place and all is dreary, dreary. Yes, I know, but to the question. What is distributing power? It surely isn't alone or chiefly in being able to offer or even to multiply the loaves and the fishes; this miracle was only an incident in the high service of the Master. As he had received from the Father so he gave out. It was spiritual benefit that he came to confer. So the fact is apparent that the truest and most far-reaching service is that offered to the souls of people, and so long as one has this to offer he is never useless in the world, has not outlived his influence, and is kept in life for the purpose of filling some need.

When you toiled all day for the dear ones was it not love that sent its stroke with sure and telling force to the mark? Did not each stitch taken in the little garment place itself in harmony with the sweet song swelling up from your heart? Is love dead? Has the spirit of sacrifice and of glad giving gone out of you because the hands are powerless to perform the old tasks, or the feet too feeble to fly on love's errands? Has not the eye its message, and have not the hands their story yet?

No, the distributing point is not passed until one ceases to receive into the soul. So let every aged one take heart, and let none sit down to mourn the loss of usefulness, but rather rejoice that like the prudent householder the treasure-house contains things new, as well as old. Always receiving, this is the blessedness of living if at the same time there is the desire to give. We know this sort of—(we were about to say old people) but we leave out the old because there is such an elasticity to their natures that we think them youthful. We have heard them as they sat by the open window, when the first breath of Spring touched their withered cheeks, talk with delight of the new season and its developments, not forgetting other years that robbed them one by one of something held dear, but back of sorrow and joy past and present was that sure and precious hope in the immortality of the treasures of the soul; and when the Spring and Summer and the Autumn were past, and the Winter came and shrouded the garden and buried the old flowerbeds, they still saw warmth and light and peace, and the inner heart of love and hope sang to the harmony of the great fact of resurrection, and so they became prophets and comforters and the real light of the home. And what a light the old people who are never too old to receive can be! It is this ability when one is bringing forth the old, to be able to touch in spirit the life of the younger generation to whom they are offering them, that will make an aged person welcome everywhere, and give him that peculiar and indescribable charm that wins everywhere.—Christian at Work.

I would ever awake with God: my first thoughts are for him who hath made the night for rest, and the day for travail; and hath blessed both. If my heart be early seasoned with his presence, it will savor of him all the day.—Bishop Hall.

The Contribution Box.

In the following, Prof. Swing pays a glowing tribute to this "worthy rival" of the "ballot-box." He says: "There are some institutions among men which are confessedly great. Time has selected them from a large company, and has symbolized them in some word or phrase. Pronounce the names of some of these blessed potentates. The school-house is one; there in childhood we pass from darkness into light. The church is one; there the heart communes with God, there it is washed white by penitence and prayer. The fireside is one; there the hollest friendship holds sway, and makes man feel that only heaven can atone for the fading of the fire on the earthly hearth. The national flag is one; for it waves in the name of a powerful patriotism and in the name of all the glory of a country. The ballot-box is another emblem, and oh, how sacred! for to it the aggregate reason of an age comes and speaks in a voice which throws down the walls and thrones of despots. And now let us add one more symbol, long despised, but really noble in the midst of a noble host. It is the contribution box. Into the ballot-box goes the intelligence of the community; but into that worthy rival, the contribution box, goes the love of the benevolent. Indeed, this glorified institution has, for the most part, preceded the ballot; for the ship of the missionary and the teacher sails first to make man fit to enjoy the blessings of freedom. Charity precedes liberty. Beautiful indeed is the picture when a humble man goes with a mind full of intelligence and deposits his vote; but a picture so striking finds its equal in that scene where the poor widow advances, and, all aglow with the light of benevolence, puts into the contribution box her two mites."

It is said that John Wesley advocated the dividing of the church into two general divisions, financially: First, "those who need help;" second, "those who can help." If any could not pay toward the current expenses of the church and the various benevolences, it was an indication that they should at once receive something from the poor fund of the church. A Scotch deacon, passing the contribution box, came to a man who shook his head. The deacon said, "Put in something." The man said, "I am too poor." Then said the deacon, "Take out something, for we are taking this collection for the poor." Pay your respect to the Contribution Box in one way or the other. —Mid-Continent.

Why Consecrate Ourselves to God?

Because it is our reasonable service. We are creatures of divine love and constant recipients of divine grace. As matter of fact, we belong to God. Surely it is reasonable to acknowledge a relation which must be real, whether we acknowledge it or not. To seek to accomplish that for which we were created is the most rational course of life; and what way can there be to do this, except to submit to the Creator in all things?

But the fact that we are redeemed—bought with a price—is another and even higher ground of obligation to consecration. Without trying to go into the philosophy of the great redemption, we may at least acknowledge the supreme fact; and the fact calls for gratitude, and gratitude impels to self-devotement to him who has purchased us with his blood. The love of Christ constrains us. We love him because he first loved us; we give ourselves to him, because he gave himself for us. But even at best we can not requite so great salvation, and are, after doing all we can, only unprofitable servants. As we study the life of Jesus more and more, shall we be led by the example of his bestowal of himself upon us to give ourselves unreservedly to him.

There is another reason for consecration; common honesty. We profess to be his; we can not in honesty be our own. We profess to serve him; we can not in honesty serve ourselves or seek to please ourselves first. A simple spirit of fairness will compel us to honor the love of Christ by giving ourselves to him, and will oblige us to faithful service, once the surrender is made.—Standard.

In the Discouraged Days.

We all have our discouraged days, when things do not go well.

The young people fail in their lessons at school, although they have studied hard and really done their best. The mothers are tried in their household work. The children are hard to control. It has seemed impossible to keep good temper, to maintain that sweetness and that lovingness which are so essential to a happy day. Try as they will to be gentle, kindly, patient, their minds are ruffled. They come to the close of the long unhappy hours disturbed, defeated, discouraged. They have done their best, but they feel that they have really failed. They fall upon their knees with only tears for a prayer. But if they will lift up their eyes they will see in every day's life the form of One whose presence will give them strength and confidence, and who will help them to victory. Before his sweet smile the shadows flee away; at his word new strength is given, and after that work is easy and all goes well again.—Bits of Pasture.

The Beauty of Quiet Lives.

There are great multitudes of lowly lives lived on the earth which have no name among men, whose work no pen every records, but which are well known and unspeakably dear to God. They make no noise in the world, but it needs no noise to make a life beautiful and noble. Many of God's most potent ministers are noiseless. How silently the sunbeams fall all day long upon the fields and gardens, and yet what joy, cheer and life they diffuse! How silently the flowers bloom, and yet what sweet fragrance they emit! How silently the stars move on in their majestic marches around God's throne, and yet they are suns or worlds! So Christ has many earthly servants, who work so quietly that they are never known among men as workers, whom he writes down among his noblest ministers. They do no great things; but they are blessings, oftentimes, perhaps, unconsciously wherever they go.—Exchange.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

HER NAME.

In search from "A" to "Z" they passed,
And "Margherita" chose at last;
But thought it sounded far more sweet
To call the baby "Marguerite."
When grandma saw the little pet
She called her "darling Margaret."
Next Uncle Jack and Cousin Aggie
Sent cup and spoon to "little Maggie."
And grandpapa the right must beg
To call the lassie "bonnie Meg,"
(From "Margherita" down to "Meg")
And now she's simply "little Peg."

FEASTS—A STREET ON SUNDAY.

The following is a letter to my sister which I copied and remodeled, thinking that it might do for the young readers of the ADVOCATE:

While the cold wind whistles about my house and causes audible waves in the small bamboo grove near by, I seat myself to write to you something in detail, as you request. I have moved from my table and occupy a chair exactly in front of a stove in which the coal is burning well. The chair is an old rattan one bought from Mrs. J. W. Lambuth. Judging from its appearance, Father Lambuth used it for much of his studying and writing.

Saturday night I attended a feast in honor of one of the former emperors. The day was a national holiday (Ki-gensetsu) in memory of his ascent to the throne. This feast was held by the teachers of the middle and normal schools and the doctors of the hospital. It is the second one of the kind attended by me. In December I went to a great one. Instead of taking their wives, it is the custom for the men to go alone, and have employed for entertainment about a score of singing and dancing women. These are very curious and interesting. But the custom is not a good one, and I refused to attend a feast in January on this account. They have promised to employ the singers no more; so I want last night and enjoyed it. You ought to see an Eastern feast!

I returned at eight o'clock and gave myself up for two hours to talking and reading with a few pleasant and bright students who awaited my coming. They left while it was gently snowing.

Yesterday (Sunday) morning the snow was about an inch deep. It seems to snow out of the moon here sometimes. At least, it does not take such a cloud as at home. Ishinchisan, the highest peak of this island, twenty miles away, and other mountains nearer have been snow-crowned for two or three months.

Suppose yourself walking with me to breakfast at eight o'clock; and let me explain to you that my street is a residence one connecting two business streets. It is about wide enough for two American carriages to pass each other, though I have never seen it tested. Human-drawn vehicles are on it all day and much of the night. Now and then a pack-horse is led along, and occasionally an ox or an ox and a man together draw a rude narrow wagon. Excepting a troop of cavalry, equestrians are not seen hereabouts. A jinrikisha stands now at the door of my opposite neighbor, who is a provincial officer. Passing ten homes above the average in wealth, we turn to the left. Though it is Sunday, the masses have regarded it not. That poor woman faces the street with a great tub on her head, piercing the air at every stride with a piteous cry of, "Fish for sale." On the right carpenters are at work on a new building, and the barber is cutting and shaving and washing. That old woman who scrubs the front of the house is the barber's mother, ever ready to prepare hot water or to run after change. If you wish, you may step into the neat jewelry store at the left and buy a clock or a watch; or, if you prefer something to eat, a little further down are confections. They are working with some machine in that hardware establishment. The polite woman who keeps the toy-shop is at her post. At another stand a customer buys a pair of rain shoes, and the maker sits as usual upon the floor chiseling and planing a piece of wood which, though held between his toes, is rapidly being shaped into a pair of common dry weather shoes. Turning to the right at the end of the block, there are at the four corners behind us a book-store, tailor-shop, wine-house, and hotel. A few steps more, and we are at Moseley sensei no toguchi ni, at the entrance to the home of Teacher Moseley.

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

What a Boy Did in a Year.

He begged the office of sexton in the little Western church, and earned seventy-five cents a week.

He picked one hundred quarts of fruit for a neighbor.

He bought and sold eleven dozen chickens and cleared five dollars on them.

When he could get no other work a neighbor's wood pile was always ready, at a dollar a cord for sawing and splitting. He earned thirteen dollars and seventy-five cents on his wood pile.

For doing chores, cleaning yards, doing errands, etc., he received ten dollars.

For milking cows, taking care of horses, etc., for neighbors, twenty dollars.

At the end of the year this fourteen-year old boy had earned a little more than one hundred dollars, and never missed a day at school. It was a busy year, yet play hours were scattered all along; swimming, fishing, hunting, skating and coasting each found its place. The old adage proved true in his case—"Where there's a will there's a way." He never missed a job; when other boys were idle he was busy; and, the best of all that I can tell you about him is this—he was a "King's son."—Kind Words.

The Use of Words.

The construction of the English language must appear most formidable to a foreigner. One of them looking at a picture of a number of vessels said: "See that flock of ships!" He was told that a flock of ships were called fleet and that a fleet of sheep were called flock.

And it was added for his guidance in mastering the intricacies of our language that a "flock of girls is called bevy, that a bevy of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd, and a herd of children is called a troop, and a troop of partridges is called a covey, and a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of whales is called a school, and a school of worshipers is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of locusts is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd."

A Boy's Talk with a Railroad Manager.

"What is the danger signal?" asked Hal, who was beginning to consider these railroad signals almost as important and well worth knowing as those in which he drilled his foot-ball team.

"Red for danger, green for caution, and white for safety: flags by day and lanterns at night," replied the railroad uncle, adding, "I am sure you must have noticed men at road crossings waving white flags to show that the track was clear as your train rushed by?"

"Of course I have," answered Hal.

"Or the watchman on the sharp curves and bridges, waving green flags as much as to say: 'You may go ahead, but you must do so with caution?'"

"I don't remember seeing them," responded Hal; "but I'll look out for the green flags the next time I go in the cars."

"A red flag or a red light is imperative," continued Mr Holden, "and means, 'Sound the call for brakes and stop at once.' There are other danger and cautionary signals I think you will be especially interested in," added his uncle, "torpedoes and fusees, for instance. A torpedo upon the rail is one of the most used and most reliable of all the danger signals."

"But I shouldn't think it would be loud enough," objected Hal. "Why don't you use something louder—say, cannon-crackers."

"Oh, you are thinking of the little paper-wrapped torpedoes such as children play with; but they are not the kind I mean. A railroad torpedo is a round tin box, just about the size of a silver dollar, filled with percussion-powder. Attached to it are two little leaden strips that can be bent under the edges of the rail, so as to hold the torpedo firmly in position on top of it. In this position, when a locomotive wheel strikes it with the force of a sledge-hammar, it explodes with a report, fully as loud as a cannon-cracker, that can be plainly heard above all other sounds of the train. It is a warning sufficient to arouse the engineman, and to render him keenly alert.

"If a train meets with any accident or obstruction that bids fair to cause a delay of more than a few seconds, the engineman sounds five short whistle-blasts (— — — — —). On hearing this signal the rear brakeman must immediately run back a quarter of a mile or so, and place a torpedo on one of the rails that his train has just passed over. Then, going back about 200 yards farther, he places two torpedoes, a rail's length apart. He then returns to his first torpedo, and, with his red flag in hand, stands there until the recall signal is sounded from his own train. On hearing this he picks up and takes with him the single torpedo, but leaves the other two where they are.

"These two torpedoes thus form a cautionary signal; and, translated by the next following engineman, mean, 'The train ahead of you has met with a delay; move cautiously, and keep a sharp lookout.' The single torpedo is an imperative warning to apply the air-brakes, 'Shut off,' and 'Reverse'—in other words, 'Stop at once, for there is danger immediately ahead.'

"If a train is delayed at night, the rear brakeman sometimes leaves another pit of fireworks behind him when called in. It is a 'fusee,' which is a paper case containing enough red fire, inextinguishable by wind or rain, to burn exactly five minutes, which is the shortest length of time allowed between two running trains. The engineman of a following train must stop when it comes to a fusee, and not move ahead again until it is burned out; though he can calculate from its condition just about how far ahead the next train is."—Kirk Monroe, in St. Nicholas.

A Wise Bird.

Joaquin Miller, in the Independent, relates the following instance of a bird's sagacity, which is truly marvellous:

"We have a little woodpecker here (in California) which shows even more than human foresight and knowledge in preparing his winter's food. This bird runs a spiral line of holes up and around a pine or oak tree—dozens and dozens of spiral lines, in fact—each hole large enough to receive the tip end of an acorn; and here the busy little fellow and his co-operative society drive in bushels and bushels of acorns, point first. And they drive them in so tight and fast that it is hard work to dig one out, even with the point of a knife.

"Nothing remarkable or superior in this to other woodpeckers, you say? But hold on a moment. The marvel is they do not eat these acorns. They simply drive them in, point first, leaving the large and soft end exposed to the sun and rain, and then sit by and wait for months for the results. Meantime the large end of the acorn so exposed sours or ferments, and then a moth lays an egg there; this egg finally becomes a worm or grub, and grows to almost fill the shell, feeding on the decaying acorn; and finally when plump and fat as a pig, the woodpecker kills and eats him, throwing down the empty acorn shell at the roots of the tree and leaving the hole empty, which has cost him many a hard knock, to be used again and again for many generations. And why does he make these lines of holes spiral? Because his hard little head is level, and he knows that if he bores in a straight line, he will weaken the bark; and he knows, too, that if he does not distribute his hoard evenly, the bark is liable to break and fall from excess of weight. But this is not quite so wonderful as is his cold blooded calculation in getting the moth to help him prepare his winter's dinner; for here he calculates not only on the moth, but the very elements to help him; and it is probable that he never calculates in vain or makes a single mistake."

A Word to Boys.

What makes a boy popular? Manliness, says Hezekiah Butterworth, in the Ladies' Home Journal. During the war how schools and colleges followed popular boys! These young leaders were the many boys whose hearts could be trusted. The boy who respects his mother has leadership in him. The boy who is careful of his sister is a knight. The boy who will never violate his word, and who will pledge his honor to his own hurt, and change not, will have the confidence of his fellows. The boy who defends the weak will one day become a hero among the strong. The boy who will never hurt the feelings of anyone will one day find himself in the atmosphere of universal sympathy. "I know not," once said the great Governor Andrew, "what record of my sin may await me in another world. But this I do know: I never yet despised a man because he was poor, because he was ignorant, or because he was black." Shall I tell you how to become a popular boy? I will. Be too manly and generous and unselfish to seek to be popular; be the soul of honor, love others better than yourself, and people will give you their hearts, and delight to make you happy. That is what makes a boy popular.

There is but one pursuit in life which it is in the power of all to follow, and of all to obtain. It is subject to no disappointments, since he that perseveres, makes every difficulty an advancement, and every contest a victory; and this is the pursuit of virtue.—Cotton.

HARRISON—JOHN WILLIAM HARRISON, son of Benjamin and Medora Harrison, of Hickory, Miss., after a brief illness of malaria fever, contracted at Orvisburg, Miss., died April 9, 1893. He was twenty-one years old the eighth day of September, last.

Willie was of a noble type of young manhood; of splendid physique, six feet and two inches tall; of fine intellect, of fair education, of industrious habits and of great ambition.

He had just settled down in business, was making money, taking care of it, liberally dividing it with his father for the support of the large number of smaller children at home. What a great blessing he was to the family, and oh! how they loved him—in fact, none of us knew that we loved him so much until he was gone. How sorely we miss him! His circle of friends was large.

He joined the church at the age of nine years, was religiously disposed, and though often under bad influence, yet, as far as we know, he retained his integrity. He prayed much and earnestly just before his death, and we trust was at peace with God.

The Lord bless the family, especially the father and mother, and help them to prepare to meet him in heaven whom they loved so on earth. B. S. RAYNER.

SMITH—Mrs. MALINDA M. SMITH died at her daughter's, Mrs. Vandevere, near Free Run, Miss., April 5, 1893, aged seventy-one years one month and twelve days. Sister Smith was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at a camp meeting near Benton, Miss., in 1844. It was my pleasure to form the acquaintance of Sister Smith in 1886.

Aunt Minnie, or Grandma, as she was generally called, was a true and faithful Christian to the last, respected and loved by all. She was confined to her room seven months. The last three months of her sickness I visited, sang and prayed with her several times, and often did she say: "My way is clear, and I will soon be at home over there. Many are watching and waiting for me."

We buried her at Tranquil Church, Yazoo county, Miss., in the presence of several friends and relatives, to await the resurrection morn. She leaves one daughter, several grand and great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. We would say, Follow her as she followed Christ, and weep not, for she is at rest

R. T. NOLEN, L. P.

NEWMAN—Died at her residence, parish of East Carroll, La., Jan. 7, 1893, Mrs. ANN E. NEWMAN, aged seventy-four years.

Sister Newman was married in 1814 to Thomas Limerick, a commission merchant of New Orleans, who died in 1818. After the death of her husband she taught school for some years, and then married George R. Newman, a planter of wealth of what was then known as Carroll parish. She was a superior woman, mentally and socially, and easily took rank among the most refined and cultivated.

She was, in early life, a member of the Christian Church; but, there being no church of that denomination in the community in which she lived, she connected herself with the M. E. Church, South, during the pastorate of Rev. H. O. White.

She was a consistent member of the church, a lover of her Bible, manifested an abiding faith in Christ, and died peacefully with an assurance of eternal life. Her only anxiety seemed to be in reference to her only surviving son and his family. May they meet her in heaven! R. S. I.

GOLD—CAROLINE A. HICKS was born in Cayuga, Miss., May 5, 1835. Early in life she moved to Yazoo City, where she was reared and educated by Colonel C. F. Hamer—she being then an orphan. At twelve years old she joined the M. E. Church, South, and remained within its fold till she was called to the church triumphant, March 23, 1893.

On Nov. 25, 1858, she was married to Mr. James J. Gold, of Hinds county, Miss. Here she lived near to and in the town of Edwards during an average lifetime. She had a full share of the vicissitudes of Southern life during this eventful period. Property swept away by thousands could not rob her of her intellectual endowments. Daughters snatched away in the prime of young motherhood could not deprive her of moral rectitude nor shake her faith in him who gave and also took again to himself. May all the dear ones left behind, and the host of friends, meet her where the "harps of angels ring, and the blest forever sing, in the palace of the King." HER PASTOR.

Deceased was eighty-odd years of age. He was the son of Abraham Whitaker, and left the United States something more than a score of years ago, having since resided in Brazil. The dear old ADVOCATE was a weekly visitor to his home.

He was buried near his home in Brazil by the side of his wife, who preceded him some years to that happy land beyond the grave, from which no one returns.

While we deeply sympathize with his sorrowing relatives in their bereavement, we can but rejoice that, after a long and useful life, he has gone to a well-merited reward.

A FRIEND.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

Camp Meetings.

The Orville-Whittington Camp Meeting will begin Friday night, Aug. 18, and continue to Aug. 27, embracing the third and fourth Sundays. The ground is in East Feliciana parish twelve miles southeast of Clinton, and four miles northwest of Grangeville. All preachers are cordially invited to attend, and will be cared for free of charge. There will be ample accommodation for all who wish to attend There will be no gate fee.

The Scottsville Holiness Camp Meeting will begin on Tuesday night, Aug. 8, A. D. 1893, and run for ten days. Our faith looks forward to a glorious meeting. Let preachers and people come. We ask the prayers of the church and of every friend of holiness.

For any information that may be desired write to the secretary, A. B. WASKOM.

Jonesville, Texas.

The Vicksburg Herald, speaking of liquor licenses in that city, says:

In 1892, when the law went into effect six country dealers at retail paid $600 apiece for these necessary articles, and one in the city came up with $1,200. City licenses generally expire in the early Spring, so latterly the documents have been in great demand and so far this year twenty saloon licenses at $1,200 each have been taken out, and only two country licenses at $600. Seven licenses to sell from one to five gallons have also been issued at $300 each, and two wholesale licenses—several others not having yet expired—at $100.

The State's share of the high license taxes so far foots up the neat little sum of $32,300. This does not cover the capital invested in licenses, however, as all liquor dealers here pay an additional tax to the city, which in the case of saloon keepers is $300 each, or $6,300 for the 21 saloons in the city. The expense of getting up and printing petitions is estimated at $65 more for each license issued, so it is not surprising that dealers are in the habit of framing these costly bits of paper very carefully.

A veteran dealer remarked a day or two ago that another year would witness a still greater reduction in the number of saloons, he believed. Many, he said, being in the business and having nothing else to do, had taken out licenses as an experiment. If they made anything they would keep on, if not they would not renew their licenses. The falling off in the number of saloons is already considerable and every month has added some to the list as the licenses expire.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The centennial anniversary of Freemasonry in Louisiana was celebrated, on April 28, by Perfect Union Lodge, the pioneer and patron of the order in the State.

A considerable exodus of negro waiters for the World's Fair is reported from North Carolina. One hundred of the best waiters in Asheville left in a body the other day to take places in the World's Fair hotels. They were offered $40 a month and board with free transportation to Chicago, and they thought it a good thing, as they were anxious to see the fair. Another lot is to follow them soon.

One of the sights at night in the streets of New York just now are the temperance lunch wagons introduced by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church Temperance Society. The object of the wagon is to counteract the influence of the cheap lunch, or free lunch, counters in the saloons. The venture is said to be a financial success, the first wagon having taken in over $50 on the first night of its operations.

The settlement of the miners' strike in the Pittsburg district has a national effect. It puts an end to the prospective strike of nearly 30,000 miners in the United States, insures the operators against a long and expensive struggle, and protects the miners against a possible reduction, for if the operators had won, it was their intention to enforce a reduction from last year's wages so as to compensate for the loss caused by the strike.

The Standard Oil Company gobbled up its only important competitor in the Northwestern Ohio oil field, the Manhattan Oil Company, on April 28. The price paid the latter for its lands, wells, leases, pipe lines and stock, is said to be about $3 000 000. The Standard took possession at noon on the twenty-eighth. The Manhattan was organized four years ago, and was backed by millions of dollars and has been a plucky opponent of the Standard throughout the Ohio field ever since its organization.

The Louisiana educational and industrial exhibit, which has been prepared under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frances P. Blake, has arrived in Chicago and been assigned to its special department in the Liberal Art Building at the fair. The exhibit has attracted a great deal of favorable comment, the educational chart of Louisiana especially proving a source of great interest to the various educational committees who are now in Chicago, supervising the arrangement of their various exhibits.

Although all the sugar bounty payments have not been completed, enough have been settled to enable the government to estimate the reasonable certainty that the total amount needed to meet the claims this year will be in the neighborhood of $9,000 000. Already $8,450,000 has been paid or allowed, and there are enough claims still unsettled to bring the total very close to the figure mentioned. Secretary Foster estimated at the beginning of the season that $10 000,000 would be required to meet all the claims.

The World's Fair was opened on May 1, when President Cleveland, by the pressing of a button, started the mighty machinery and the rushing waters and the revolving wheels in the Exposition. No exhibit of the Fair that is to attract the thousands to Chicago for the next six months can be more marvelous than the magical effect which followed the solemn opening of the Fair at 12.08. Of the multitude of visitors—some estimate the number as high as 200,000—probably not one fully realized the import of the effect that was to come from the arrangement, cleverly devised, in the opening of the Exposition.

FOREIGN.

A large portion of the town of Kreutsberg, a place of about 1 500 inhabitants, near Deutsch Brod, Bohemia, has been destroyed by fire. The conflagration swept away 169 houses. Six persons perished in the flames, many others were injured and about 500 have lost their homes.

There has been suppressed uneasiness in official circles over the health of President Diaz for the past few weeks. The President has long been a sufferer from bronchial affection, and it has become so severe that he was confined to his bed several days. He is now improving and able to attend to his official duties.

The invention of smokeless powder was supposed to mark an important era in warfare, and after many careful tests large quantities of it were manufactured and stored away by the principal nations of Europe against a possible need. It has just been discovered that all the powder that has been manufactured and stored in Russia for the past eight months is useless. The cause of its deterioration has not yet been discovered.

Cuba again is in the throes of revolution. A general uprising has taken place throughout the eastern portion of the island. The movement, which has been kept from the public by the authorities, was started near Holguin on April 24. At a meeting the Spanish Cabinet recognized the revolution, authorizing the governor of Cuba to draw upon the royal treasury for any amount required for military supplies. Warships and troops are held ready to be sent to Cuba at a moment's notice.

On the day that the Home Rule bill was passed to a second reading a man armed with a revolver lay in wait for Mr. Gladstone, intending to assassinate him as he left his residence. When Mr. Gladstone came out of his residence, and the would-be assassin saw him, his purpose weakened, for the peculiar reason that the venerable appearance of the premier reminded the man of his own father's appearance on his deathbed. The pistol slipped from the fingers of the intending assassin, and he rushed into the park and sank on a bench and burst into tears.

Important Notice.

The time of holding the Meridian District Conference has been fixed and will be soon announced. Will all pastors in the district please furnish me a list and post office of all delegates and members of the Conference who will be present. Not elected simply. This is necessary, as we wish to communicate with each member separately.

Please comply with this request, brethren, and save us annoyance and confusion. B. F. LEWIS.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitude that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. & N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty sixth. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, has a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the ground unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the regular the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

The Great Exposition.

Saturday, April 29, was a big day in Chicago. The Liberty Bell, Duke Veragua and his excellency President Grover Cleveland, each had a parade through the rain. The ceremonies were impressive, and notwithstanding the weather hundreds of thousands stood along the streets or occupied windows and balconies nearly all day to get a glimpse at the proclaimer of freedom, the descendent of the discoverer of America and the popular Grover Cleveland. The bell after the parade was duly installed in the Pennsylvania Building, the Duke was tucked away in eleven rooms in the Auditorium, and the President was located in five rooms in the Lexington. Sunday the weather of Saturday was duplicated; only the wind howled a little louder and the rain fell a trifle heavier, and the hopes of the people for a bright May 1 for the opening services seemed certain to be disappointed. But the sun peeped at the city Monday morning. It was only a sly glance, for by nine o'clock the rain clouds had gathered in force and the day seemed certain to resemble its two predecessors. Not a drop of rain fell on the forces of police, National Guards, Chicago Hussars or regular army as they assembled on Michigan avenue, and by nine o'clock the great boulevard was filled with people intent on witnessing the assemblage or on catching some of the conveyances leading to the grounds. The Henry line of steamers, the Illinois Central, the alley to Wabash Cable were soon tested to their utmost capacity, and then the surplusage of people began to hunt carriages, the Columbia coaches, express wagons, and every form of conveyance. The line of march was up Michigan boulevard to the Lexington Hotel, where President Cleveland was added to the party, and from thence the imposing array of cavalry and carriages passed on to Jackson Park. The city was decorated in an abundance of bunting, and along the entire line of march there was a continuous cheering.

At the grounds there were assembled in the neighborhood of half a million people, and they pushed and crowded for vantage about the speaker's platform until many of the foremost onlookers were crowded on to the platform. As the hour for opening exercises approached the crowd was quickly augmented, and the scene became one of wild confusion, people pushing and shoving each other about until finally the police attempted to hold back the crowd by riding in front of them. At this juncture many of the horses seemed to get beyond control of their riders and dashed into the midst of the multitude, injuring no less than one hundred people. Finally, after a short address, President Cleveland touched the button, and instantly thousands of flags were unfurled and fluttered above the buildings, and the vast machinery of the Exposition was set in motion. As soon as the multitude in front of the Administration Building heard the shrill whistles and the boom of cannon from the Michigan, they cheered so loud and lustily that all other sounds were entirely drowned. Then the strains of "America" were heard, and the immense assembly took up the hymn until fully 200,000 voices were heard. Rising from his seat, President Cleveland joined his voice to the others. The act inspired the crowd to cheers for Cleveland, and "America" terminated in the boisterous hurrahs of all present.

Seated on the stand with the President were the following prominent persons: President Cleveland, the Duke and Duchess of Veragua, the Hon. Maria del Pilar Colony Aguilera, the Hon. Christobel Colony Aguilera, Royal Spanish Commissioner Thomas J. Guilerres, the Hon. Pedro Colony Fernando, the Hon. Carlos Aguilera, Marquis Villalobar, Marquis de Barriles, Vice-President Stevenson, Director General George R. Davis, President T. W. Palmer, of the National Commission; President Higginbotham, of the Columbian Exposition; Vice-Presidents Peck and Waller, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. John A. Logan, Gen. Miles, Gov. and Mrs. John P. Altgeld, Mayor Harrison, Secretary of State Gresham, Mrs. Gresham and Miss Gresham, Secretary of Treasury John G. Carlisle and Mrs. Carlisle, Secretary of the Navy Herbert and Miss Herbert, Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith, Secretary of Agriculture Morton.

After the opening of the Exposition proper came the dedication of the Woman's Building. The opening ceremonies were held in the building erected by the women of the land. A long room, whose arches and columns were decorated delicately in white and gold, whose walls were hung with the praiseworthy products of nineteenth century woman artists, met the vision of those who entered the Woman's Building yesterday. On the temporary platform erected at the west entrance were palms and potted plants gracefully grouped, while above it, on either side, were draped the commingled colors of Spain and America. Palms filled in the spaces between the arches of the north and south ends of the gallery. Mrs. Palmer presided at the Pennsylvania table, on which were placed a block of yew taken from the Washington State Building, the golden nail, and Colorado's silver jewel box. On a small table of Mexican onyx at her left reposed the hammer in its leather case. Behind Mrs. Palmer was seated a group of distinguished women, both foreign and American, whose gay toilets lent a pleasing touch of color and brightness to the assembly. A grand march was rendered by Theodore Thomas, a prayer was offered by Miss Ida Hultin, a dramatic overture was rendered by Miss Ellicott, an ode was recited by Miss Flora Wilkinson, and Mrs. Potter Palmer delivered a long and entertaining address, which recited the progress of the women of the world and their connection with the World's Fair. Following the address Mrs. Palmer arose, and, taking the golden nail from its cabinet, proceeded to drive it home. Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Germany and Sweden dedicated their buildings. Music, speeches and handshakings constituted the features.

In the evening the California Club, situated on Michigan avenue, opened its doors to the California pioneers now in Chicago, and for several hours the "old timers" and their friends had an enjoyable time. Montana will, during the week, open its doors to the public, and the Oregon headquarters organization will, in the course of a few days, be ready to extend a welcome to their elegant home on Michigan boulevard. Chicago, May 2.

Louisiana S. P. C. C.

I was glad to be present and to have the opportunity given me, at its quarterly meeting, of speaking in behalf of so noble a philanthropy as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has proven itself to be. The field of its labors, while, doubtless, arduous, distressing, and possibly, at times, soul-harrowing, must, nevertheless, be most inviting and fruitful of great good to the workers as well as its beneficiaries, in that it embraces caring for and shielding from harm the most interesting and helpless portion of the community.

Said Charles Dickens: "I love these little people; and it is not a slight thing when they, who are so fresh from God, love us."

Said Locke: "Children are travelers newly arrived in a strange country. We should, therefore, make conscience not to mislead them."

The possibilities of children for development into useful manhood and womanhood, or into mere drags, and sometimes ugly ulcers, on the body politic; the certainty of their becoming, in greater or less degree, a future blessing or curse to their race and times—in truth, this wonderful outcome of which they are capable because they are born children, and not brutes, coupled with the fact that they are about as helpless in themselves, and powerless to defend or care for themselves, as any living creatures, makes it a prime necessity that where father, mother or other kin fail in their natural obligations to them, or where they abuse, maltreat or stand in the way of their rightful development, then others, in the best interest of the children and of good morals and healthful civil government, should lift over the suffering children the shield of a legal protection against even a parent's encroachment upon their God-given rights, punishing with a strong hand any cruelties practiced upon them from any quarter. All genuine men and women, be their nationality or religious belief what it may, feel just like Dickens and Locke, that the little people, "so fresh from God," and "newly arrived travelers in a strange country," should have their love, and not be misled, injured, or prevented from making the most possible of themselves, and getting the best they can out of the world and life into which they have come. The Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, under the leadership of Rev. Alfred E. Clay, is engaged, under the law and according to law, in the very high, noble and all-important mission of protecting the helpless children of our city and State from injustice and cruelty, and, at the same time, bettering, as far as possible, their chances in life. I am very sure that in all that this humane organization contemplates doing for the relief of the suffering little ones, and especially in the matter of the speedy purchase of a Waifs' Home, it deserves the hearty sympathy and practical, money support of all who have "the milk of human kindness" in their composition. The permanent establishment of a work of positive philanthropy, like this of Mr. Clay's, is, in its results, far-reaching beyond calculation. Put upon a proper financial basis, and in possession of sufficient revenue for all its purposes, it will take its place in the front rank of the benevolent enterprises of New Orleans, and become fruitful of untold good, affecting mightily the future of those who else might grow up to be a menace to our civilization, or, at best, a heavy load of misery to carry. At the meeting President Clay reported that he needed only $1,500 more in order to buy outright his Waifs' Home on Clio street. Having, by its efficient work, won its way to the confidence of our people, I feel sure that he will shortly have the full $4,500 required in hand, and that in good time sufficient means for the prosecution of all the society's work will be forthcoming. God bless and prosper the Louisiana S. P. C. C.!

JOHN T. SAWYER.

The District Conference.

This Conference, as it now stands connected with the polity of the M. E. Church, South, was legally established in 1866 by General Conference. The law governing this Conference is too well understood in Methodist circles to need explanation at this time; but our purpose for writing is to direct attention to the importance of making this body as useful and interesting as possible for the good of the church, and the first thing to do is to increase, in a more permanent form, the duties, or business, of the District Conference. In order to this, transfer from the Quarterly Conference to the District Conference the licensing of preachers, and recommending for deacon's and elder's orders, and admission on trial in the Annual Conference. The advantages to be derived from this transfer are many, which we do not propose to discuss now. The only objection we have ever heard to this plan is, that it takes from the Quarterly Conference too much of the business of that body. This objection, we have thought, was light, as these questions are only asked once a year in the business of a Quarterly Conference, except the license question. Let the Quarterly Conference recommend these applicants to the District Conference as suitable persons for such relations. Let the District Conference license, or recommend, as may be thought best. This being done, the Conference would feel that it had more important work to do than merely hear long, tedious and monotonous reports from stations and circuits, which, to some extent, may be interesting, but, in the main, uninteresting. Let reports be made as now, but let them be more concise and brief.

Another feature by which these Conferences would be more interesting and promote more real good to the church is, Let the membership, clerical and lay, take more interest in attending its meetings. Be on hand at the organization, and stay until the Sunday services are over. Many preachers leave the Conference on Saturday in order to reach home for Sunday to fill an appointment. Now, we do not believe that any preacher ought to have an appointment on the District Conference Sunday any more than he would have on the Annual Conference Sunday. I know some preachers say, "I am in a station, and my people will have no preaching in our church if I do not go back." It seems to me that if any preacher is at all justifiable in leaving, it would be the circuit preacher, where they have preaching only once a month; yet we think the brethren are mistaken in regard to duty in this matter. Perhaps no one is to blame so much; but a wrong notion of duty, and we don't think any congregation ought to expect their preacher on the District Conference Sunday. The lay members ought also to stay. "Oh, I must be at my Sunday-school; will not do to miss it." That is all right; be punctual under all proper circumstances. But how many times do you miss for reasons not as good as you have to stay at District Conference? Some other brother can open, and conduct Sunday-school for one day. Are you not serving the church in your place at Conference? What of the evil this running away does? Sunday is the day given wholly to the spiritual part of the Conference. Love-feast, communion service and preaching the Word make up the day. Have you no interest in these things?

Again, the multitudes do not attend so much as on Sunday. Large congregations assemble; they see a few (one or two) preachers, perhaps no delegates, at the great Sunday services. "Why, I thought this was a District Conference." "It is." "Well, I thought a District Conference was a big thing, but this is not as big as our Quarterly Conference on our circuit." So some brother has to rise and explain.

An unfavorable impression is made on the mind of the public concerning our economy and church work. What might be the spiritual power for good if this Conference would stay intact through Sunday? The people who entertain us are disappointed; their feelings fall below zero. They looked to Sunday as a great day, spiritually; but when they repair to the house of God, and the Conference quite all gone, except old Bro. Slow, who had been prevailed on to stay and preach for them Sunday (he might have gone had it not been for the chance of preaching on Sunday).

Brethren, when you go to District Conference, have no appointment anywhere else for Sunday.

K. A. JONES.

Loud Appeals.

To Whomsoever This May Come as Reminder or as Lover of Christian Education—

Dear Brethren: We have received within the past week the following touching appeals for aid:

NO. 1.

Dear Bro. Holloman: Could your association possibly give aid to another young brother this session? We have a young preacher from —— district who needs help very much now. He has been disappointed in promises made him, and, unless he can get aid from some source, will have to withdraw. W. B. MURRAH.

This young man comes from the strongest district, financially, in the Conference; so, at least, says its presiding elder. Brethren, can't you help us to help this young man?

NO. 2.

Dear Bro. Holloman: Young Bro. ——, who is at Millsaps College, needs help, and, unless it can be secured, he can not remain until commencement. I hope he will get the amount from your association as per promise. What is the matter?

(Signed.) R——.

Another touching appeal. Brother, the matter is: 1. The very few who take any interest in the cause. 2. The failure of many to meet their obligations to the association. A little from all will help us much. Pay up, brethren. Especially would we appeal to all those who, under similar circumstances, have received from us relief. We want, at least, $200 with which to complete this session and begin the next. In the name of the Master, and in behalf of the young brethren, we issue this appeal. Fraternally,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Wesson, May 1, 1893.

A Seasonable Reminder.

We most cordially commend to preachers and Sunday-school workers throughout the church the following timely editorial from the pen of Dr. J. W. Boswell, in the Memphis Christian Advocate, of April 27:

Children's Day, the third Sunday in May, will soon be here. Every pastor and Sunday-school worker ought to be getting ready for a grand celebration. It ought to be made the day of all days to the children and young people of our church, and it could be if all would take hold in good earnest. Let pastors call attention to it, and exhort, and, if need be, take the lead. Superintendents, of course, will bear it in mind and stimulate their teachers. It will be no trouble to get the attention and arouse the interest of the children.

All the schools in the country, perhaps, can not celebrate the third Sunday, but the preachers can arrange on circuits to commence that day, and continue from Sunday to Sunday until all the schools have taken a part, or two or more schools can unite. That would be good and profitable.

To all of which we most heartily say, "So mote it be," especially in its application to the North Mississippi Conference.

Brethren, let us bestir ourselves and give appropriate time for this service in every pastoral charge. It will be a stimulus to the Sunday-school cause and other church interests, and a means of grace to all, old and young, who will participate in it.

We are pleased to note the general interest that is manifest for this observance in our Conference. Nearly six thousand programs have been sent out. A few charges have not ordered yet. Let us hear from you, brethren. Remember, the programs cost you nothing but the ordering.

Yours in the work,

G. W. BACHMAN.

Kosciusko, Miss.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rosedale, Miss., May 1: "The largest and, perhaps, the blackest county in Mississippi voted for local option April 21. The saloon men fought with all their strength, but to no avail. Our majority was small—only 13; but that was sufficient. Things are on an upward grade in the Delta district. Under the present law there is no reason why every county in the State should not vote 'dry' this year."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Kennett, Mo., May 1: "Our meeting at Pennsylvania Avenue Church, Memphis, Tenn., resulted in ninety-six additions to the church, and a great stirring up of the membership. I came from there to this place. Have been here two weeks, and the Lord has given us a great victory. Seventy-one have joined our church here to date, and many others have been converted. Some are joining other churches, and others will still come to us. Glory to God!"

Rev. J. J. Kelly, Bonita, La., May 1: "I have just closed a two days' meeting at Bonita, with good results. Three accessions and good seeds sown, with favorable indications for reaping an abundant harvest at this place soon. Have four children to baptize this morning. Collected twenty-five dollars for foreign missions at the morning service. Bro. Knickerbocker, who was with me, did faithful preaching. We expect, by the help of the Lord, to see many souls saved here this year."

Rev. J. H. Foreman, Neshoba circuit, May 1: "As you know, at our last Annual Conference my name was read out for Neshoba charge. I went to work in good earnest, praying and hoping for a revival of religion all over the entire circuit. So far prospects are good. We are getting along smoothly. We have visited both saint and sinner, working up, as best we could, the cause of Christ, both spiritually and temporally. We have received two members, baptized four children. Our circuit has paid up to date $2.22 for all purposes. Our second Quarterly Conference was held April 29 and 30. Five of the churches were represented. Our much-beloved presiding elder, Rev. C. McDonald, was at his post, and full of the Spirit of Christ, as usual, and in his quiet and plain way preached two edifying sermons."

Rev. John D. Ellis, Roxie, Miss., May 3: "I was sent as supply to this circuit, a month ago, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Bro. Rutledge. I have just made my first round on my work, and was received very cordially, notwithstanding the temporary disturbance. Our second Quarterly Conference met at Beech Grove on the twenty-second and twenty-third ultimo, and was much enjoyed by many. Bro. Little (so characteristic of himself) preached us two very able sermons. So far, I have succeeded in organizing a prayer meeting and two Sabbath-schools, with encouraging prospects for the organization of two more. My people seem to be kind and sociable enough, but many of them only have a homœopathic dose of religion. We have already commenced to pray and plan for our Summer meetings, and look to the 'God of Jacob' for great results."

Rev. E. H. McNabb, Lenton circuit, North Mississippi Conference, May 1: "Glory to God for his goodness, mercy, love, and the answering of prayers! After nine months' labor we were able to dedicate a nice, neat church, costing $825, besides the furniture. The dedicatory sermon was preached by that man of God and beloved brother, Rev. W. S. Shipman. He took a collection which amounted to $117.55—cash, $30; the rest in good subscription—which paid all indebtedness, and allowing plenty to buy a Bible, chandeliers, stoves, etc.; and among the offerings to the Lord was a beautiful silver water service, given by one of our good ladies, Mrs. Barrett. The church was beautifully decorated by the good ladies. We thank God that his presence was with us, as two came forward and dedicated themselves to the Lord by taking the church vows. We are expecting and praying for souls for our hire during this year. 'Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name.' We are getting lumber on the ground to build a parsonage, and trust to have something done by District Conference."

Rev. O. L. Savage, P. C., Indianola, Miss., April 28: "We are moving on in our new charge about as usual. We are glad to report that Sunflower county went dry on the twenty-sixth instant by a handsome majority. We have tried local option in the town of Indianola for two years, and the people are so delighted with it that we poll four to one in favor of local option now. All honor to the grand citizenship of our county. We have a fine population in this county, and we are not only coming to the front in material things, but in that which is more enduring, namely: the morals of our country are steadily toning up, churches and school-houses are being built, and families are coming here to buy homes, and we think that this county has a bright future along all lines. We would not forget to say that the W. C. T. U. work in our county and town has done great good in educating the people as well as the faithful work of the different churches. The Methodist Church stands in the forefront battling for God and the right. We are reaping the labors of years of faithful work. Much has been done, but there remains much to be done. We always welcome the ADVOCATE as a co-worker invaluable to us. Pray for us."

Rev. C. McDonald, P. E., Brandon district: "The recent storms have destroyed some of our churches—Rial's Creek, on the Westville charge, and the Holder Church in Jasper. Besides, many of our people are among the sufferers along the storm track. The work in the district is progressing very well. Last Saturday and Sunday I was in Neshoba. We had large congregations both days. The Indian Mission was represented by Bro. Tubby. Bro. Cammack was visiting his sick father. At the request of the white people Bro. Tubby preached to them at three P. M. on the Sabbath. It was a good meeting. It strikes me that the great demand of this mission work now is to have a school for the Choctaws. If the money raised at the last Conference for Tubby to go to Millsaps could be applied in a school of this kind, it would help others. Besides, Tubby is not yet prepared for college. What he needs now is primary education, which could be had cheaper than at Millsaps. Each color will feel more at home with itself. I know of a sprightly Indian boy who is willing to work for his board to get an education. He is now a handy waiting-boy for a white family; can build fires, feed horses, work the garden, etc. The Choctaws are ready to be educated. They have been the recipients for years in the State public schools. Many of them read and write English very well. To have a school properly, we ought to own a few hundred acres of land conveniently located to our mission work, on which we ought to have a church and school-house, and let the Indians who patronize the school settle in a kind of school town. Our work among the Indians is opening out nicely. Bro. Cammack baptized two Choctaw babies recently—the first of this kind of work among them."

THE DEAD MARCH.

BY MARY T. LATHROP.

Tramp, tramp, tramp in the drunkard's way
March the feet of a million men;
If none shall pity and none shall save,
Where will the march they are making end?
The young, the strong, the old are there
In woeful ranks as they hurry past,
With not a moment to think or care;
What is the fate that comes at last?

Tramp, tramp, tramp to a drunkard's doom,
Out of boyhood pure and fair—
Over the thoughts of a love and home—
Past the wall of a mother's prayer;
Onward swift to a drunkard's crime,
Over the plea of a wife and child,
Over the holiest ties of time—
Reason dethroned, and soul gone wild.

Tramp, tramp, tramp till a drunkard's grave
Covers the broken life of shame—
While those whom Jesus died to save
Meet a future we dare not name.
God help us all! there's a cross to bear,
And work to do for the mighty throng!
God give us strength till the toil and prayer
Shall end one day in the victor's song!

Walter C. Harris.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

A purpose to contribute to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE sketches of the preachers—that were well defined and pronounced in their individual personality, each, as they impressed themselves upon memory ineffaceably, has been incubating through some months, not to say years, in an affectional niche of my sentimental being. It has been an effort, at times, to restrain the impulse; but from consideration that it were best to write for the public whon thought, rather than emotion, is regnant, there has been refrain. One with effusiveness of temperament—who is extemporaneous and elastic in demonstrativeness of his nature—is fortunate if there be counterpart to this, in the make-up of his mental and moral manhood, a resiliency, securative against mortifications and embarrassments. The firmament is flecked by no cloud or cloudlet this morning, and the clear, pure whiteness of the cool forenoon of this seventeenth day of April, 1893, operates a conditioning of body, mind and heart favorable to sufficient moderation in the portrayal of the peculiarities of men who, in the morning days of the years of this itinerant career which has at length put me up here on Belleview Bend, on the Ohio river, across from Indiana, in Kentucky, enfibered themselves with my experience of life and being. Yes; it is not phrased too emphatically—who enfibered their being so with my own as to become, perforce of reciprocalness in apprehension and realization of truth, life, relations and the sublimating franchise to which, consociatively, they lift us, so organic with myself, that "for me to live is" Tom Abernethy, and Wat Harris, and some others whom I may essay to portray, as I conceived their individualities, by observation and under inspiration of what they illustrated of unexceptionable brotherliness. Itinerant brotherliness, when in permutations, combinations, arrangements and adjustments, there is never an abrasion from ruh of selfishness, superciliousness, or arrogance!

What indebtedness—what gratefulness!—we feel towards the elect ones who gleam in such bright beneficence, illuminating the canopy of memory! "Pensacola, Jos. B. Cottrell; Warrington, Walter C. Harris." Such were the announcements among the appointments at the close of the Alabama Conference, in Tusoaloosa, in the Fall of 1853. As the crowd of preachers and others passed down the aisles, slowly, I managed to make my exit, and, upon stepping to the pavement, the countenance of Harris seemed, by law or force, of attraction to draw him to me! He had been waiting to meet me. "Cottrell! won't we love one another!" It was exclamatory, not interrogative. Nothing but Pensacola Bay to separate us! He over at Warrington, the town outside the navy yard, and I in the then old moss-draped city-town!

A ceremony on the evening of the twelfth of January, 1854, in the Methodist Church in Montgomery, Ala., wherein Mrs. Carolina Duncan changed her name to Cottrell, operated a qualification—a re-conditioning—favorable to Harris, having more than "Cottrell" to felicitate his visits "over to the city;" his weekly stoppings, where he could be relieved from the coil of thought evolved and wound about him from out the German theological books that grew gradually to regiments along the shelves of his library. Whilst he was as if coiled up contemplatively aronnd one of those ponderous tomes, ever and anon glancing skyward as if to see if the sun, or the moon, or the stars, were in obedience to their appointments, his more volatile, extemporaneous, audacious comrade would, in criticism and banter, provoke him to a laughter and a pitch aside of the book too big for him to hold up from the floor or the table, as the case might be, and he would seem to say by his manner: "Very well! I've read enough!—let's have it!" Then would I take a turn at imitation of Bro. Ebenezer Hearn, Greenbury, Garrett, Bishop Andrew, and several of the younger brethren of the Conference; affect curiosity for knowledge of what the German authors Harris had been reading, purposely missing their names as indicrously as I could. He would roll his little round body over, draw up his knees, and say: "Sister Cottrell, please make him hush! What did you marry such a man for?"

But fun, at length, would give place to sobrieties of communion, and if ever draughts of the fountain of the wine of wisdom yielded themselves in replenishment of the wastes of a self-worn and needlessly shackled soul, my own then found acquaintance with a species of what I apprehend to be cream of all life and being that indemnifies, in the words of Wat, and from the tones of voice and from benevolences of countenance that cheapened terms, and from such respectfulness of silence that invited comment, criticism or dispute, when he had confessed his faith, enravishingly, and all the more so because of the unpurposed tentativeness which, like Paul, is crystallized so charmingly, in declaration that he "counted not himself to have apprehended." That touch from the tip of the pen of Paul, in comparison of the burden of his evolved philosophic, ratiocinated deliverance, is as the blossom amid loaves of an ample bough of a stalwart tree, whose beauty and fragrance persuade the bees and butterflies to their feasting. It is twin-sister to that in which he commended Phebe, "a servant of the church at Cenchreæ!"—after the else and other he had said about the women.

Never mind about Paul, however, just now. We are engaged with Harris, and space for one correspondent in an Advocate or a Methodist will not allow for more than one elephant at a time. What elephantine in the expression—the impress upon mind—from one who was so bantam-like in physical dimension as was he whom I would suggest, not describe, to those that never saw or heard him? Well, as he would be seated or reclining in his little office near the church, at Warrington, to a listener to whom he felt he could talk freely, under no apprehension of monitorial or inquisitorial surveillance touching his "doxy," whenever he made allusion to, or quoted from, or made criticism of any author, his upreach of eye toward the shelf, where the book held its place, was with expression of the deliberateness and masterfulness of the movement of an elephantine snout, gathering from heights no other creature could reach, what met desire in gratifying hunger, such antithesis of demonitiveness of person and potency of expression as thought swayed sceptre triumphantly in the mount of brotherly conference, was as marvelous as it was illucidative and attestive of the gracious law of equivalents in entire range this varied unit we term creation. Whilst equalities are nowhere seen or known, there are equivalents everywhere; and the littles and the less and the least would not exchange identities, individualities or personalities with any that are great, greater, or greatest. The marvel of the being of the bird that twitters near the window as I write, is as great as that of the angel whose trumpet-voice will summon from their sleep the myriads from the cemeteries of earth. Greatness is ultimate and absolute everywhere and in all! Great and greater are relative; they are naught. Wisdom and humility in charm of simplicity are the ornament of being. Nothing more despicable than a strut!

As a hearer, when another preached, his attitude and expression seemed as if it were the first deliverance of the message of the Word of Life he had ever known; and it was in an ingenuous wonderment that anyone could so wisely declare that he expressed his estimate of what a brother had delivered. This I remarked with surprise on occasion of what, to my ear, was preaching most beggarly. Later in life, in pondering such anomaly of intellectual manifestation, the solution of the problem suggested itself in this wise (be it considered, though, by some, otherwise than wise) that men are often listening to themselves think whilst fancying they are hearing discourse of another, and they credit the speaker with their own profound intellections and powerful mental movements when seeming to be listener; just as a trifling voice will vibrate deep-toned sounds as of distant roll of thunder through depths or heights of veited channels. In his own preaching, Harris appeared more in the attitude of making inquiry of his audience than of imparting instruction, and of enlisting them on his behalf by an unaffected attitude of dependence rather than appealing to them to endeavor obtainment of somewhat he had compassed. There was never the smell of the lamp on his words, though all were manifestly fruit of the finest culture. He owed largely to books, but it was as force of muscle and vigor of nerve in an athlete are attributable to richest nurture from food that appetite has known delicionsness of enjoyment in appropriating, and which by digestion and assimilation has been transmuted into flesh and fiber of his own manhood, productive of the impulsive power of his own life. However, by any percussion of voice or fetch of language, ventured exaggeration of a thought; never by the slightest affectation in tone of voice played a seeming in sentiment of solicitude for souls. His words required no pressure from volitional push upon them by any trick of emphasis, as they slid from his tongue into the scales of attentiveness. He had the faith and the fidelity in the veritableness of the truth they signified, just to leave them to gravitate proportioned to the ounce or pound or ton-weight belonging legitimately to them. Nor was there what anyone would term oratory—declamation—in his style of discouraging; nothing that had recitative, chime or tinkle. He was not precisely conversational, but with what was so evidently an unpurposed, unstudied tuning up of his whole organic, intellectual, spiritual and physical manhood by stimulus of the theme engaging him, his language let itself off as in liquid flow of rhythmic undulations, just sufficiently to engage attention to what he uttered, and not to the person of the speaker or to his manner. He did the greatest preaching I've ever heard, and all the greater from the obliviousness of the preacher to any thought of greatness in what he said. Suspicion that I am, in enthusiasm of an undying fealty to one enjoyed and admired in the blossom season of ministerial experience, painting an ideal rather than picturing an objective personality embodied and expressed in Walter Clopton Harris, can only be met by denial on my part of any doubt of its being short of the worth, worthiness, wealth and excellence of one of the rarest that ever compassed and prophesied among men. And as hazardous as the venture of implied criticism, in discount of not a little, he was all the more powerful in attractive, persuasive ministration because his confession and prophecy was separate from any profession.

He had been comrade and college-mate with F. M. Grace, whom he deemed the model of students and of truth seekers; regarding him in every way as unexceptional. When I felt fully that his affection for me was the equivalent of his admiration and esteem of grace, it was as if experience of graduation in the line of fellowship. Not seldom now when I've heard preaching, and go out from the congregation, I look up to the stars as I walk, and they are aglow with radiance that merely symbolizes that which is a gleam in the firmament of another realm to which the light of the life of my friend leads my footsteps.

I didn't realize how beggarly any attempted description of the altogether indefinable, unique, attractive and soul-engaging creature must inevitably be, until I essayed this writing, and I have rather attempted the task by saying what he was not than by declaration of what he was. He was the apotheosis of naturalness, unpretendingness and lovableness; such disarming moderation as find their illustration in the moonlight that reaches to the depth of the sea, and heaves the mighty bosom. All his conquests over the hearts he won, abidingly, were unpurposed, coming as naturally as operates the law of attraction in the realm of nature, for perforce of which are formed the marvels of symmetry and beauty that vary so enchantingly the charm of our living.

The last I saw of Harris was after his marriage to Mrs. Herndon (nee Inge) at their home in Eutaw, Ala., and as the wife and daughters would circle him, and he would discourse of the days in Pensacola, of "Sister Cottrell and Henry and Jennings, and the baby (Joe)" his memories of mine, seemed to be in solution as a sweetening in the cup of blessedness which had at last reached his lips. Never any children born to him! Never a sire! but veritably a father! No offspring; but daughters had he; for his whole being was the make up of what is a blending of paternal and maternal. He, many years ago, "fell on sleep!" His countenance was changed, and he sent away!

Evangelists.

Dr. B. Carradine, of the St. Louis Conference, gives notice in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of March 30, to this effect:

This will be my last year in the pastorate. God's call is upon me to become an evangelist. At the next meeting of the St. Louis Conference I shall sever a relation that has been tender, delightful and heaven-blest, and enter upon a new work for which Christ has been fitting me and to which he is now calling me. With the kindest feelings to those who differ with us, and a burning zeal for the glory of God and the salvation of souls and the prosperity of our Zion, we write."

We, too, feel that Christ has been fitting and is now calling upon us to protest against severing a relation that has been tender, delightful and heaven-blest. Suffer me to speak this once.

The Word of God plainly teaches and history has demonstrated that the Methodist itinerancy is the divinely appointed system for evangelizing and saving the world. It is a fact that no intelligent mind can deny, that by this system the moral and religious standard has been lifted higher and more good been done in less time in soul saving and quickening and vitalizing and spiritualizing the religious world than anything since Pentecost. And now just as the whole world is ready to concede to us this fact, there are some among us who would have us go back to a system that has operated as a sort of fifth wheel, unmanageable, and almost unprofitable to those who tested it. It is not only severing, but disturbing, and will inevitably destroy "a relation that has been tender, delightful and heaven-blessed."

Establish this modern system of evangelists in Methodism, and in less than a half century the lamentable story of pastors without churches and churches without pastors will be heard from Dan to Beersheba. The poor will no longer have the gospel preached to them by us. They say the times demand it; that the duties of the pastors are so varied and numerous that he can not be a soul winner. But how does any man called of God to preach the gospel to the lost, allow himself so entangled with anything that he can not be a soul winner?

Here lies the difficulty with our modern Methodism. We have prostituted this sacred and divinely appointed place (the itinerancy) to serve tables until we are shorn of our strength. This is why we are not the soul winners our fathers were. A hundred years ago a Methodist itinerant preacher was like a blazing comet, inspiring hope and insuring success wherever he went. Then the standard of ministerial success was to be a soul winner. Now it is to bring up the collections and run a hundred and one societies. Then the command was: "Go, and as ye go, preach." Now it is: Go, bring up the collections, run the societies, and if you can, preach. Then the preachers went out groaning under the weight of souls. Now they groan under the weight of finances and boards and societies.

Let the church untie the hands of her pastors, and let them give themselves wholly to the ministry of the world, and if they are called of God, they will be soul winners.

No, my brethren. It is not the office of evangelists we need. But somebody called of God to take the collections and run the side shows.

We would not be understood as being opposed to the collections on boards or societies of the church. They are every one of them just and right and good; but to run these is the work of a layman and necessary to develop in them the highest type of Christian manhood and womanhood.

To impose upon the pastor these things is more than he can do or hear and be a soul winner. These secularize him and his sacred place.

You hear me? Roll these burdens where they belong, and let the pastors to their Bibles and a throne of grace, and see if the Holy Ghost does not bring through them another Pentecost.

It is said the evangelist is a new man, and he can do and say things the pastor dare not do and say. Have we come to this? As watchmen upon the walls of Zion, are we incompetent? Have we not the wisdom? Are we afraid to warn the people? If we are called and sent of God, we alone are responsible.

I have a family of children. They sometimes need reproof and correction; am I not the only competent one to administer this? I love them more and understand them better than anyone else on earth. So in the household of faith, if the pastor is what he should be, he alone is competent to administer to his children.

If we, as pastors, are like some fathers—too busy to look after the training of the children, and are kinder wet-nursing them along, it is time to leave off the business and save the children.

The Methodist itinerancy is indeed the true apostolic evangelistic system as we understand it, and it can not be improved. Only unload it and again it will be like fire in stubble.

That Sabbath Resolution.

THE "NON SEQUITURS" OF REV. R. J. JONES.

They were a surprise, and the more they were considered the greater the surprise became. I will admit No. 1, but No. 2 has serious objections. This I will quote, that he be not misrepresented: "It does not follow, because the report of a committee is adopted without a dissenting voice, that every member of the Conference is pledged to this view of the subject."

Does he mean to say that the minority of a deliberative body is not pledged to the acts of the majority? There is no other construction that I can put upon his language. I will admit that the majority of a body may pass acts that might be objectionable to the minority, that in their views the minority might not agree with the majority, yet, according to our theory of government, civil and parliamentary, and that also of the Methodist Church, that each individual of the minority is as much bound to the acts of the majority as any one or all of the majority. If this be not true, then there is no power known whereby any deliberative body, whether civil or religious, can be made binding. The brother is certainly in error. Every member of his Conference is pledged to "that Sabbath resolution," whether silent at its passage or not. It appears rather strange in a member of a Conference to remain silent at the passage of an act and long after to rise up and say he is not pledged to it, and especially upon the ground of not opposing it at its passage. Then was his time to show his opposition; it is now too late. The obligation is certainly now binding upon him to observe it. It looks a little strange in a minister of the gospel to put up a plea—it, at least, bears that construction—of opposition to a resolution of his Conference in endeavoring to enforce a faithful observance of the Sabbath. If he was opposed to it, and remained silent at the time of its passage, it would certainly now, from one of his standing, appear better to remain silent than to open the way or offer an excuse to the worldly-minded to gratify their insatiable desires. "Adopted without a dissenting voice," and not pledged to it! A strange position, indeed, for a minister of the gospel to take! Indeed, I am astonished! What is there about his Conference binding upon him? Let him show his authority for his position. I will pass to No. 4, and briefly notice that also. It is as follows: "It does not follow, because it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, that it is wrong to go anywhere else on Sunday if we use the Sabbath trains, though not in cases of necessity." Let us sum his position as expressed in the foregoing words. He admits it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday. Again admits that it is not wrong to use the Sabbath trains to go anywhere else on Sunday, though not in cases of necessity. How does he harmonize the two positions? I can not see how or where he begins to draw the line as to where the harm begins in the one case, and where it ceases or fails to be in effect in the other. It is certainly a hair-splitting arrangement. It is wrong for whom to go to Conference on Sunday, the minister or layman? If wrong for one, it is certainly wrong for the other. If it is wrong to go to a religious gathering, or a body assembled for religious purposes on Sunday, I would like for him to show another instance outside of necessity in which traveling on Sunday would be harmless. He certainly will not say that it is no harm to use the Sabbath trains for purposes of business or pleasure. He certainly has expressed his views so broad upon the subject of the observance of the Sabbath that the most worldly-minded member of the church is justified in quoting him, and saying that Bro. R. J. Jones says, "It is no harm to ride on the Sunday trains, although not in cases of necessity." A position that many of the most irreligious of the church will rejoice he has taken. The error in this instance is of a much graver character than the one formerly noticed, in that it has a direct bearing upon the vital piety of the church. It is hoped that Bro. Jones has some way of explaining himself out of this dilemma that no evils may follow what must be considered a very serious position.

Local Option Legalizes the Liquor Traffic.

There are many readers of the ADVOCATE that do not have access to prohibition literature, and from lack of the information it supplies are liable to form wrong conclusions as to the rightness of local option. I desire to contribute something that may help to a better understanding of the question at issue between prohibitionists and the advocates of local option. Local option is rendered plausible by appealing to the common, popular American sentiment of majority rule. The political, scheming opponents of prohibition get credit for great liberality by conceding to the voters of each municipality, supervisor's district, or county, the right of voting for or against the sale of whisky. To this plan we may urge the objection that it does not settle the question except for a limited time—two years in Mississippi. At the expiration of this time the contest may be renewed and verdict reversed by a resort, on the part of unscrupulous dealers and imbibers, to unfair and dishonorable, not to say dishonest, means. Experience and observation show that the saloon advocates are a conscienceless set that will not hesitate to purchase votes, or do anything else that promises success. But, besides laboring under the disadvantages of instability and uncertainty, local option may be charged with debauching the public conscience. There are some voters (in some places a great many) that have no higher moral standard than the civil law and the public sentiment that stands behind it. They class see no moral wrong in the sale of alcoholic drinks, if authorized by a majority vote of the people. Their standard is a variable one—now authorizing, and then condemning; here allowing, and then forbidding. Local option is tacit admission of the rightness of the thing allowed. That class of voters that take the civil law as authority in the domain of morals see no wrong in the sale of intoxicants except it be a violation of civil law, and only because of such violation, and not at all because it is a sin against God and an injury to his rational creatures. I charge upon local option a tendency to create this false standard, and to strengthen and confirm it in those in whom it has already gained a footing. This charge, if sustained, ought to unite all temperance reformers solidly against it. Instead of educating public sentiment in favor of prohibition, it is actually arraying the people against it by making them willing to accept local option in its stead. It will be impossible to arouse enthusiasm among the masses who have already been made to believe that local option is right, and, therefore, best. It is vain to appeal to conscience when it has already been fatally drugged by the deadly narcotic—local option.

Local option has had the effect of disbanding the noble army of temperance reformers, and turning the members loose to wage war against the rum power in guerilla fashion. If all temperance workers had concentrated their efforts to securing constitutional prohibition, persistently refusing anything less, we should have, ere this, triumphed in more than half the States of the Union. A weak compromise loses to the friends of the temperance reform the force of the moral argument, and gives to its enemies the sanctions of law. The traffic is legalized and made respectable, by which it takes on a new lease of life. Displaying the inconsistency of local option from a moral standpoint may receive attention in a future article.

Another Missionary.

Rev. Benjamin S. Rayner, for some years a member of the North Mississippi Conference, is on his way to Nashville to complete arrangements to sail to Japan as a missionary. He feels specially called to this work and is thoroughly consecrated to it. He is going at his own expense, not having asked the church or the Board of Missions to assist him. His going, however, is heartily endorsed by the Conference which he leaves and by the Board of Missions.

A part of his plan is to put as many Bibles and Testaments in the Japanese language into the hands of the Japanese as possible. He will write the name and address of the party who contributes the book in it, and under this stamp the request, In case of conversion or special benefits, write the person who gave the book. The book will be carefully and prayerfully delivered. He requests all who contribute Bibles and Testaments to pray that God may direct him to place them in proper hands, also to continue to pray earnestly for the conversion of parties to whom delivered. His record will show both the giver and receiver of each book.

His plan so readily commends itself to the people that wherever he has gone and made it known they have heartily responded. Through him you can put a Bible in the hand of a heathen, with your name and address in it and request to notify you of benefits received. What a privilege! Sixty cents will pay for a Bible and twenty cents will pay for a Testament. There will be no additional expense. If you desire to engage in this personal work, send the amount to J. B. Holt, treasurer Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., or hand it to your presiding elder, or send it to me,

B. S. RAYNER.

One Sufficient "Sequitur."

To the brother who has so industriously sought out and wrought out "non sequiturs" we submit the following both loyal and logical:

The Author of life and salvation has a right to dictate our conduct. He has said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Running trains on the Sabbath desecrates the day, and deprives thousands of rest and spiritual improvement. All who use them encourage this evil. It is the duty of all ministers to discourage evil of every kind (especially that most common) practiced) both by word and example.

Fraternally, J. P. DRAKE.

The heart of man is his worst part before he be regenerated, and the best afterwards. It is the seat of principles and the foundation of affections. The eye of God is, and the eye of the Christian ought to be, principally fixed upon it. The keeping of the heart is a work that is never done till life is ended. Heart-neglect is a leak in the bottom: no heavenly influence, however rich, abide in that soul. The mind is to the heart, as the door to the house: what comes into the heart, comes in through the understanding, and truths sometimes go no further than the entry, and never penetrate to the heart.—Flavel.

INTRODUCTORY.

Our lesson this week is taken from that part of the Book of Proverbs (chapters x-xxii, 16) which is supposed to be the most ancient portion, and to have been written and collected by Solomon. We find no longer the continuous discourse which marked the first nine chapters of the book, but instead a collection of disconnected sayings, or proverbs in the usual acceptation of that term. They are sometimes religious in character, but generally are merely prudential, and relate to ordinary business affairs. They form a valuable collection of wise maxims applicable to the affairs of every-day life, and are important in their bearing upon the formation of character and the guidance of conduct. They are worthy of their place in the inspired volume, and constitute the great store-house from which most of the wise sayings of the ages have been drawn. Many a character owes its sinewy strength, and many a life its marked success, to the homely teachings of this portion of the Bible. The proverbs are of practically uniform length, and consist, with scarcely a variation, of two lines, which usually form a contrast, though occasionally the second line repeats in varied form the truth stated in the first. Each proverb is complete and independent of those which go before or follow it, and would be unchanged in meaning if taken out of the connection in which it is found. Hence the lesson admits of no topical outline, and each verse must be considered by itself.

EXPLANATORY.

Ver. 1. A real love of knowledge is marked by a willingness to submit to the exercise of discipline, and the latter is loved as the means by which the former is attained. On the other hand, the man who resents reproof and rebels at correction is like the brute that resists the yoke and only submits to training when compelled to do so.

Ver. 2. Two men stand before God for judgment. The merit of the one is that he is good, of the other that he is shrewd. The former finds favor, and the latter is condemned. The word "wicked" does not belong in the text; the word is simply "devices." Goodness does not exclude shrewdness, nor does shrewdness exclude goodness. The lesson is, that goodness as a claim upon divine favor is always allowed, while the man whose only claim is that he is a man of devices will be condemned.

Ver. 3. There may be present and seeming prosperity in wickedness, but it can not last. It is in its very nature specious and transient; it lacks the elements of stability, for it is out of harmony with truth. Work that is ill done must be undone. There is only one way to establish anything so that it can not "be moved," and that is to establish it in accordance with the eternal principles of righteousness. Then and then only its root shall never be moved.

Ver. 4. We are not to understand what is ordinarily meant when we speak of "a chaste" woman, but rather an excellent—a worthy woman. Such a wife is a source of joy and pride to her husband, but one who lacks these qualities, "maketh ashamed," and is a source of hopeless mortification and suffering. The evil touches the very centers of life and sensibility, humiliation is complete and relief hopeless.

Ver. 5. The plans of the righteous are right, because from a sweet fountain sweet waters flow; the skill of the wicked is deceit, because from a bitter fountain flow bitter waters. The schemes of the wicked are unreliable, and one can not trust them; alas! he himself can not trust them, for they will fail him in the end.

Ver. 6. The probable meaning of this verse is that the words of the wicked are an ambush—or a snare—into which they will fall, while the prudent utterances of the upright man will save him from danger when threatened and vindicate him when accused.

Ver. 7. This verse contains a repetition of the lesson of verse 3. The storm that is coming will overthrow the works of wickedness; but the strong foundations of the righteous shall not be moved. The interesting study of the histories of families shows how strikingly the promise of God, that "the house of the righteous shall stand," has been fulfilled.

Ver. 8. A man is praised in proportion to the intelligence that he manifests, but a perverse man is despisable. "A part of the point of the proverb lies in the implication that the perverse man is not intelligent." (W. J. Beecher.)

Ver. 9. The lowly, humble man, whose modest wants are supplied and who has a servant to wait upon him, is better than the man who boasts noble ancestry and high connections and who is all the while on the verge of starvation. "Respectable mediocrity is better than boastful poverty." The man who has both pride and poverty is doubly afflicted. Such men are not infrequently seen.

Ver. 10. The righteous man is acquainted with and considerate of the wants of his beast; but in the heart of the wicked the very emotions of tenderness and mercy have become narrowed and hardened. How depraved the man whose pity is cruel!

Ver. 11. Industry offers a surer reward than the vain efforts to win bread without work. Better stay on the farm and work than loaf about town trying to find something easy to do. To follow vain persons and vain things shows a lack of sense.

Ver. 12. This verse is obscure; but the lesson meant to be taught is probably that while the wicked man is longing for the uncertain booty, which is the reward of evil designs, the prosperity of the righteous man is sure.

Ver. 13. The imprudent and ill-advised words of the wicked are a source of danger to him; but the man who is just in word and deed finds in his character safety and honor.

Ver. 14. For his words and works a good man shall be amply rewarded, an evil man justly punished. God will render to every man according to his works. (Romans ii, 6.)

Ver. 15. The fool imagines that he knows it all and forgets that he may be mistaken. "He that takes the advice of himself only always takes the advice of a fool." (Peloubet.) If he would only hearken unto counsel he would see his mistake and correct his error. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." (Prov. xi, 14.) A wise man will look through the eyes of others as well as his own.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Many a man, who would like to be wise, is unwilling to pay the price of wisdom. (Verse 1.)

2. Goodness is more valuable in God's sight than shrewdness. (Verse 2.)

3. Nothing is finally settled that is not righteously settled. (Verse 3.)

4. The only way to make a man's plans right is to make his heart right. (Verse 5.)

5. Perverseness is no sign of intelligence; a fool can be obstinate. (Verse 8.)

6. A modest competency is better than a proud heart and an empty pocketbook. (Verse 9.)

7. Righteousness exerts its influence in every direction. It changes the man's heart, and everything that he touches feels the change in the touch. (Verse 10.)

8. Short cuts to fortune generally end in failure and declare the folly of their victim. (Verse 11.)

9. One lie needs ten more lies to take care of it; the truth takes care of itself. (Verse 13.)

10. "The first step in knowledge is to know that we are ignorant." (Cecil.) (Verse 15.)

Christian Education in Louisiana.

NO. 1.—CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Louisiana bears the stigma of being behind many of her sister States in the vital matter of education. Her public school system is not good; her university is not as well equipped as it might be, and private enterprises in this direction have not generally flourished. Yet if all these had attained perfection, there would still be a responsibility on the church to supply the Christian training impracticable for the State. In fact, Louisiana needs to-day, more than anything else, Christian education from the standpoint of enlightened Protestantism.

Louisiana Methodism will, in all probability, soon have full possession of Centenary College—her only hope for training her own boys. Even now, with meagre patronage and inadequate endowment, Centenary is doing fine work. The plant is one of the best in the South; the surrounding scenery is poetry, inspiring in its beauty; the society of the place is elevating; the curriculum is as high and as thorough as any in the State, and the professors are of a high type of Christian manhood. The newly equipped gymnasium affords opportunity for physical culture, the mind is thoroughly trained in the class-room, and the moral and spiritual man cultivated through the agency of the Y. M. C. A. and the direct Christian influence of the faculty. The moral and religious tone of the present body of students is striking. No doubt, many of the boys of Louisiana would be under safer influences there than even at home under parental oversight. But whatever Centenary may be now, its future depends on the will of Louisiana Methodism. If through a desire to seek a more eligible site, we become half-hearted friends or even foes of the institution, we will do the cause of Christian education a lasting hurt. For it would be impossible, at least for some years, to raise up the equal of Centenary anywhere else in the State—equal, I mean, in prestige, atmosphere and social sympathy, which make up such a large part of college success. And we may well hesitate on the brink of a new college enterprise, with our eyes upon the four years' struggle of Mississippi Methodism for $50,000, and that under the most stimulating conditions, with a Bishop and an energetic agent in the lead, and with four times our constituency.

After all, Centenary is not so badly located. It is soon to be in full railroad connection by a tap, and will be as accessible, practically, as Baton Rouge, whither the sons of the State easily find their way. The fact is, our boys go elsewhere because our preachers are not enthusiastic about their own—their only such institution. They are not enthusiastic because they know so little about it. W. W. DRAKE.

To Whom It May Concern

Macon, Ga., March 13, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

FIRST RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR AID TO BUY LANDS.

Rev. W. W. Cammack, Philadelphia, Miss.—

Dear Brother: I enclose you a post-office order for three dollars. In the March number of the Missionary Reporter I read your appeal, and it went direct to my heart, as all such appeals do, and I said after I had read it, "Lord, send me the work to earn three dollars for Bro. Cammack." In a very few days a lady brought me a dress to make for three dollars. When she had gone I thanked the Lord for his goodness to me in answering my prayer so soon. It goes with an earnest prayer that it will bring forth fruit for the Master. I would send more if I had it. The condition of the Indians lies very near my heart, and I would be glad to do all I could for them.....

God bless you in your work, and make you the instrument of eternal good to many, many poor Indians.

YOUR SISTER IN THE WORK.

The writer of the foregoing letter never thought of its being made public, and hence her name is withheld; the letter is given because of its inspiring suggestiveness.

The $3 will pay for one acre of land just where it is needed for our Talla-Chuiak work. Will not others contribute the price of one, two, three, ten or twenty acres, and thus give permanency to our work among the Choctaws in Mississippi? Bro. Cammack can get 160 acres just where it is desirable to own it and to locate the mission colony. It can be bought for $400 cash, or $480 on three years' credit. Bro. Cammack purposes to give $10. Remittances should be made to Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss., into whose hands not only the Annual Conference, but also God the Father (it seems), have committed the supervision of our work among the Choctaws.

Faithful in Office.

All officers of State, entrusted with the execution of law, can find a bravo and brilliant example of faithfulness in the conduct of Judge Chrisman in presence of a moh of White Caps in Brookhaven, Miss., last week. Several parties had been indicted for white-cappism and committed to jail without benefit of hail. Friends and sympathizers of the parties to the number of seventy-five, armed to the teeth, came into the town and surrounded the court-house and demanded the release of the jailed parties on bail. When terror reigned in almost every heart the brave Judge walked out and confronted the mob and told them plainly that their request would not be granted, and this while several pistols and Winchesters were leveled at him. During the parley, the citizens recovered their surprise and armed themselves to protect the court and jail, and Judge Chrisman boldly put himself at their head and drove the moh from the town. The towns along the railroad soon got news of the affair and began to send in reinforcements to the Judge and his brave band. Gov. Stone came down on the first train with forty stands of arms and ammunition. But there was no need. Judge Chrisman and his Brookhavenites had cleared the field. It was expected that the moh would return in larger force during the night, and good preparations were made to give them a hot reception, but they did not reappear.

On Monday those in jail were arraigned before the court, and to the surprise of everyhody six of them pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. The others were nolle prosequied.

The conduct of Judge Chrisman on this occasion is worthy of all praise. It shows what one determined spirit can do to defeat lawlessness. One such man in public office is worth a thousand vacillating officials. Here is a shining example of faithfulness in office; and may the number increase all over the land!

The Revival Services.

At Carondelet Street Church the services continued during the whole of last week. The preaching by Bros. Sawyer, Walker, Board and LaPrade was earnest and much good resulted. The congregations have been good.

At Algiers Bro. John was assisted by Bro. Wynn, of Parker Chapel, and he reports the meeting as a successful one.

Last Sunday Bro. Sawyer began protracted services at Louisiana Avenue, and Bro. Wynn at Parker Chapel. Both these brethren report good meetings, and the prospects fair for success.

Bro. Frank Parker is spending this week with Bro. Drake at Crowley, La., helping in a protracted meeting there. So the good work is spreading, and the gospel, as of old, is proving itself "the power of God unto salvation."

Spiritual Power.

The mission of the church is a spiritual mission. Whatever work she does on temporal lines is simply done as an aid to the accomplishment of her work in the spiritual realm. The salvation of men from sin is the main reason for the existence of the church, and her proper work is in saving men from sin. This work lying along the plane of spiritual things can only be accomplished by the employment of spiritual forces. Spiritual power is the only effective force on this plane. Men are spiritual beings, and they have been affected disastrously in their spirits by the presence and power of sin. The only remedy for that disaster is the spirit of Christ operating upon them through his divine and all-powerful truth.

The world had tried other things for this disaster until its heart had grown sick and tired of the wearisome failure. Poets sang their sweetest songs, orators gave their sublimest eloquence, philosophers published their grandest systems, law makers proclaimed their wisest laws, and in spite of all the world grew worse and worse. Greece was resplendent with art which has never been excelled, Rome dealt out laws to the world; but the power to elevate man into the region of a pure spiritual life was found in neither. The cultivation of the intellectual powers and the training of the physical powers in each of these nations were carried to an extent which has never been surpassed; hut that cultivation and training served only to turn a stronger light upon the degradation and abject slavery in which the spiritual natures of Greeks and Romans were imprisoned. There is and can be no power in these things for the spiritual uplift of men.

The gospel system alone shows where this power may be obtained. It was explicitly pointed out when the Lord said to his disciples: "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall he witnesses unto me to the uttermost part of the earth." This is but the New Testament emphasis upon an Old Testament truth: "Not hy might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." This is the only power that can do anything in the spiritual realm. Eloquence is nothing; poetry is powerless; philosophy is mere emptiness; art is a splendid failure in hringing salvation to lost souls. The gospel only "is the power of God unto salvation."

The Social Club Evil.

We once heard a Sunday-school teacher take up a good part of his hour for teaching in telling his class of hoys ahout club life and the evils which grow out of it. He was a man well informed, and knew what he was talking ahout and knew how to talk, and we thought he did a wise thing to spend much of his time that morning in warning the hoys on this subject. That the club is doing immense harm to our young men is the testimony that comes from all sides. We present our readers an article on this subject from the Epworth Herald, and ask them to read it carefully, and if they have any friends who are members of social cluhs to hand it to them, and ask them to read it, and pray that God's blessing may attend their reading of it.

Much has heon written ahout the evil influences of the social club. The deliverances of the religious press have been backed up by the hrave utterances of the pulpit. That the modern social cluh is a menace to the perpetuity of things pure and good in the community no one who has made investigation will deny. It is refreshing to read the frank statement of a prominent Chicago clubman about the destructive influenco of this institution. This gentleman, in a recent interview with a reporter of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, said, among other things:

"The fact is, I don't see where any club does much to improve the condition of humanity. I was thinking to-day whon I was coming home, that the four clubs that I holong to were doing mighty little good in the world. I am a member of the Chicago, Calumet, Union League and Washington Park Clubs. Now take the Chicago Club, for instanco. The first thing a man strikes when he goes in there is a bar. I've drunk whisky there, so you see I am not making any claim that I am a saint, hut I know a lot of men who are not nearly so good to their families nor so reliable in business now as they were bofore they joined the Chicago Club. Same way with the Calumet Cluh—burned down while I was away, and I suppose they will be rebuilding it soon, so that a lot of bachelors, who ought to be married and have a home, can have a pleasant place to live and spend their evenings drinking whisky."

This statement is remarkahle. It is a hearty and unsolicited ratification of the criticisms of the church, and a severe condemnation of the utter selfishness of the cluh in that it does nothing to lift up humanity.

The club is under condemnation hocause it is the foe of the church. The mission of the church is to save men from the very things into which the club seeks to engulf them. The church endeavors to encourage men to higher living, purer thinking, nohler doing, while the social club, on the other hand, does not stand as tho champion of any great cause, nor as the exponent of any ennohling idea. It caters to man's human side entirely and inovitahly; whether he wills or not, it pulls him down. Being so saturated with worldliness, it speedily benumhs the conscience against the things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report. To that extent it makes ineffeetive the work of the church.

Then the cluh is the sapper and miner of character. No baser sort of robbery can be perpetrated. There is not much left to a man when his character is gone. What does the average cluh care ahout the beautifying of individual character or the improvement of the condition of humanity? It does not appeal to men on that side. The estimate it places upon the best things is readily seen by the above testimony. Temptations are thrown open to men without apology. Even where there is no flagrant violation of the decalogue there is a belittling and ridiculing of things sacred. There is a disregard for moral principles that compels the habitue of the cluh to compromise with his self-respect and part company with his purest aspirations.

But it is in the home that the cluh causes greatest devastation. Thousands of desecrated firesides and neglected families are a grim, but mighty protest against the haneful institntion. The home is the holiest spot on earth. It is the mark of a higher civilization. It is the measure of our progress. Upon its preservation in all its purity the hope of the race depends. If it is worth anything, it is worth everything. Whatever directly or indirectly menaces its sanctity merits the swift condemnation of all in whom the thought of home awakens sweetest memories. There is something radically wrong with the young man who finds the club room more attractive than the sweetness and serenity of his own home and the companionship of his mother and sisters. Never can the insincere and artificial life of the club become a proper substitute for the home life with its holy memories, its wholesome atmosphere, and its sanctifying influences.

The social club is rapidly becoming an unmitigated evil. It is counting its victims hy the thousands. The duty of Christian young men is plain. If they were to cut loose utterly from this institution, it would speedily he classified in its proper category.

The frequency of heavy winds and cyclones is becoming alarming. Hardly a day passes hut some place is visited by a destructive storm. Last week the following-named places in Mississippi were struck: Sherman, Hickory Flats, Meridian, Na'ohez; and several points in Texas. The scientific folk have not yet been able to explain the whys and wherefores of these atmospheric disturhances. "There shall be signs in the earth."

Letter from Georgia.

The year 1893 is convention year in Macon. I can not now give the oxact figures, but I judge that not less than fifteen or twenty conventions of various sorts will be held here this year. One of these convocations I montioned in my last epistle—the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This will begin its session on the eighteenth. Another notable convention was held here last week—the State Convention of the W. C. T. U. There wore ahout eighty delegates in attendance. The reports from the local unions, as is usual, showed that in some localities vigorous and effective work is heing done hy the white ribhon army, while in other localities the word "stagnation" just describes the situation. I was very much impressed with the report from one union, the name of which has escaped me. It is located in the country, ten miles or more from any railroad, and in a poor, sparsely region. This union has held its meetings regularly once a month for nine years, weather or no weather. Through its instrumentality three hundred persons, male and female, have heen induced to sign the total abstinence pledge. Good work that! Would that all the unions in all the States would do as much! The remarkable success of this union is due to the efforts and the influence of one woman—Mrs. Crawford, a local preachor of the Mothodist persuasion. Of course, I do not use the term in its technical sense. She has no license to expound the gospel any more than had Wesley's helpers, Sarah Crosby, Mary Fletcher, Hester Ann Rogers, etc. But, license or no license, she is regarded as a very efficient dispenser of the Bread of Life. She is especially efficient in protracted meetings, many of which she attends in the regions roundahout her country home. Her education is quite limited, but she has native gifts of a very high order. Mrs. M. L. Wells was present and contrihuted much to the interest of the convention. I was invited to deliver an address at one of the night sessions. Of course I accepted. My theme was not prohihition, hut total ahstinence. I verily believe that at the present time the saloon is hardly a more fruitful source of evil than are the convivial customs of bon ton society. The saloon only carries on to completion the destructive work hegun in the home. The punch howl and the wine cup are in some localities among the most formidahle harriers to the progress of the gospel.

Macon has just completed a new belt line of electric railway. We have now very nearly twenty miles of electric railway, besides a short line in which horseflesh is the propelling power. I judge that no city of its size in the South can excel Macon in its street-car service. We are also to have in the near future the advantages that accrue from water transportation. Years ago there was a line of boats on the Ocmulgee that did a good business as far up as Macon. But for many years navigation has been suspended. By means of an appropriation from the United States government, the river has recently heen cleaned out, and now the good old times are to come hack again. A fine line of steamers will soon be in operation from here to Brunswick and Savannah.

The town of Dawson, in this State, and the region roundahout was visited last week with about the most destructive hail storm I ever heard of. Tho hail is said to have heen in places three feet deep. It lay on the ground for several days. The storm covered an area of many miles in extent. The farmers in that region are grappling with the prohlom of procuring a supply of cotton seed.

Nearly all the Methodist Churches of this city have hold meetings. More than a hundred and sixty accessions to the church have resulted from these meetings. W. C. BLACK.

Macon, Ga., May 4.

On the Wing.

Ellisville is the commercial center of South Mississippi. Situated on the main thoroughfares loading out into Simpson, Smith and Covington counties, surrounded hy miles of yellow pine, it looks into a joyful future and counts that passed successes are only an earnest of its future greatness. Handsome public buildings, large and well-equipped hotels, magnificent private residences and a continuous enlarging of its business blocks, tells at once of the energy, pluck and success of its people.

Nor are its people indifferent to their spiritual and mental needs. A large brick schoolhouse, with all the modern conveniences, graces the center of the city, while the churches are in easy reach of the entire population. The Baptists and Methodists are each of them preparing to huild hoth large and handsomer churches than those they now occupy.

Here we preached on Sunday, and here "the people came up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." One hundred dollars was added to our endowment fund.

Now, while I rest, let me exhort the brethren. Look at this statement: 304 owe $5 each, $1,520; 163 owe $10 each, $1,630; 67 owe $12.50 each, $837.50; 95 owe $25 each, $2,375; 42 owe $50 each, $2,100; 10 owe $100 and over each, $1,200; 3 owe $2,000; a great company owe $1, more or less, $2,000. A total amount due of nearly $14,000.

If the 684 enumerated were to send in the amounts due hy them, we would have $12,000 nearly. Remember we need this day $2,500. Two young men said to me: "It is a shame; I won't put you off any longer, Wait a few minutes, I will horrow the money and pay my note." One of our Bishops, who is to give $5,000 to one of our colleges on June 1, said, "I will borrow the money, and pay np." A hrother wrote a few days ago, "I will try to borrow." Since then he has forwarded $20.

Brethren, pay up. If you can't do it without horrowing, then horrow and pay up. Two thousand five hundred dollars paid at this time secures $25,000 from Major Millsaps and completes our $100,000 endowment. We must not fail. We have thirty days now in which to do the work. Men and hrethren, help us just now. Keep the agent busy answering letters for the next ten days, and then come up to our commencement and enjoy the feast of good things which Dr. Murrah has prepared. Jackson Methodism throws wide her doors and says to every preacher, "Come." The railroads will give us reduced rates. The Jackson people will esteem it a privilege to entertain you. Then come to our commencement. Send your names to Dr. West or Rev. A. F. Watkins. They will seeure you homes.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS,
Agent.

Last Saturday we received the following dispatch from the Cincinnati Evening Post:

Cincinnati Post wires religious newspapers throughout United States, asking whether readers of those papers will be advised to stay away from Chicago, if Columhian Fair is opened Sunday. What will your paper do in this matter?

We regard the opening of the Fair on Sunday not only as a violation of God's law, hut as a breach of faith with the government, and we think Christian people can not consistently patronize a law-breaking association. If the Fair is opened on the Sabbath, we advise our people to stay away!

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Quitman, D. P Bradford, P. C. $19 25

Poco a poco is a saying current among Spanish-speaking people; and it is translated, "little by little;" but a more liberal translation is "just poking along!" And that is the way we seem to be doing in our efforts to pay off the missionary debt.

This is not to be applied to the Quitman brethren, however; for they had just paid up their quarterage in full, giving more than $200 to the "cyclone sufferers," although losing thousands of dollars' worth of property by the storms, and then determined to build a new house of worship to cost $1,500. It is their second payment on the debt.

SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Columbia circuit, M. H. Moore, P. C. $3 50

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Wesson, T. B. Holloman, P. C. ... $15 50
(This church has over 650 members who deny themselves less than three cents each!)

VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Washington circuit, Locust Grove Sunday-school, per Mrs. W. C. Yeager $2 50

Sister Yeager writes: "The Locust Grove Sunday-school has raised this amount for the payment of the missionary debt, and send it with their prayers that the efforts being made towards liquidating the debt may be successful. This Sunday-school is training its young members to an interest in missionary work, the collection on the second Sunday in each month being devoted to missions." God bless that Sunday-school, the officers, the teachers, the scholars, all! May every Sunday-school in our Conference follow their good example!

The Vanderbilt Alumni University Fund Association.

An association known as the "Vanderbilt Alumni University Fund Association" has been organized at Nashville, Tenn., for the purpose of securing an endowment fund through subscriptions by alumni and former students of the University. The association was organized in 1892. It has already established a scholarship. Anyone who has been a student at the University can become a member by contributing to the fund.

A pamphlet setting forth the plans and purposes of the organization has been published, a copy of which will be sent to any alumnus or former student of the University on application to the secretary, Dr. C. L. Thornburg, Vanderbilt University.

The Alumni of Vanderbilt University.

SPECIAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE YEAR 1892-3.

Under the above title the Executive Committee of the Vanderbilt University Alumni Association have published a neat pamphlet of forty pages, which contains a resume of the most important proceedings of the association up to the present time. It includes also a list of the officers and members of the association and of alumni who have held positions in the University.

Any gradnate of the University can obtain a copy of the report by application to Dr. C. L. Thornburg, secretary of the Alumni Association, Vanderbilt University.

Help Needed.

One of our church-buildings on this circuit was completely destroyed by the terrible storm that passed through this county on April 19. We had just built a new house, and it soon would have been ready for us to worship in. Our members there, many of them, are in a helpless condition, and it looks like now that it will be impossible for them to rebuild this year. Any person who is in sympathy with them will do them a great kindness in assisting them to build a house to worship in.

Send your contributions to Mr. Thomas Hinton, Acona, Jasper county, Miss. Send by registered letter.

Notice.

It is our purpose to organize a Mississippi Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and all auxiliaries are earnestly requested to send delegates to Meridian during the District Conference, which will convene in East End Church, May 25. Bro. Mellen has kindly consented to give us Friday, the twenty-sixth, 9 A. M., to organize. Will each pastor please see that his charge is represented? District secretaries are expected to be present. Delegates and secretaries will please notify Mrs. I. N. Chatfield, or Rev. B. F. Lewis, Meridian.

Sisters, look to this. Our society depends upon our exertions, and we must organize now the opportunity is presented.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

We received the Bishop's appointments too late for insertion in this issue. We have room to state that Bishop Hargrove will hold North Mississippi Conference, in Columbus, Nov. 29, and that Bishop Key will hold Mississippi Conference, in Hazlehurst, Dec. and the Louisiana Conference, at Homer, Dec. 14. Why these two were appointed to begin on Thursday, instead of Wednesday, we do not know. We copy from slip sent us by Bishop Galloway.

On April 30 there were 1,041 convicts in the Louisiana Penitentiary.

There was a tidal wave, four feet higher than usual, which washed the beach at Mississippi City last week.

Rev. D. Lawrence, of Boston, has been chosen successor to Bishop Brooks over the Massachusetts diocese.

Rev. Ellison Capers, a son of Bishop Capers, has been elected Assistant Bishop of the diocese of South Carolina.

Prohibition clubs have been organized at Morgan City and Berwick, La. Capt. J. N. Pharr is in the lead, of course.

Rev. C. M. Lyons, our popular pastor at Morgan City and Patterson, gave us an interesting half-hour's chat one day last week.

Rev. Dr. J. H. Alexander, for thirty-eight years pastor of the Presbyterian church in Kosciusko, Miss., has resigned that pastorate.

The Christian Observer (Louisville, Ky.), of April 26, had an extended and appreciative sketch of Rev. J. W. Lambuth, D. D., by Dr. H. C. Duhose.

The increase of members to the Wesleyan Methodist Church last year is reported as follows: Full members, 4,780; on trial, 4,476; in junior classes, 1,512.

Dartmouth College has received within the last year legacies amounting to $600,000. What amount by legacy did Southern college receive in the same time? Echo answers, "Time."

The rising waters in the great Mississippi are beginning to pester the minds of a good many. High water at the late a time is enough to create great anxiety and gloomy forebodings.

We are sorry to decline a cordial invitation to attend the anniversary exercises of E. A. Seminary at Arcadia, La. President Smith has our best wishes for a successful close of the year.

We understand that our church at Pleasant Grove, on the Heidelburg circuit, was blown to pieces during the late cyclone. We hope our brethren there will be able to reconstruct it as soon as possible.

The Methodist Bible Institute and Summer School will hold its first session at the Seashore Camp Grounds, beginning July 26. A good program will be provided. We trust our people and preachers will attend.

Alas! the good old customs are fast passing away. To the infinite disappointment of the children, and of a number of old people too, the time-honored custom of "lagniappe" has passed out in the Crescent City.

Bro. J. W. Malone confesses his delinquency in the fact, that in his report of the Sardis District Conference, he failed to note that Dr. J. D. Cameron preached "a strong, able, gospel sermon." "Honor to whom honor."

Dr. Lafferty, the stenographer to the Virginia Senate, has given the Congressional system of shorthand in a series of simple, witty, chatty talks; each illustrated. You learn it while you laugh. 65 pages. Price, 50 cents. Address him, Richmond, Va.

The introduction of politics into the British Woman's Temperance Association has caused quite a flutter. Lady Somerset, at the recent meeting, was re-elected president by a majority of seven votes out of 345, whereupon those opposed to her withdrew from the meeting. The opposition delegates numbered 138.

Judge Chrisman, of Mississippi, is becoming a real terror to evil doers. His charges to the grand juries where he holds court have the ring of a spirit determined to execute all the law with impartiality. If he could be multiplied and go over Mississippi and Louisiana, what a boon such multiplication would be to the country!

Meridian District Conference

will convene in East End Church, Meridian, Thursday, May 25, at 9 o'clock A. M. Bishop Haygood has promised to preside. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. D. G. W. Ellis. A full attendance of all members and delegates is urgently requested and expected. A cordial welcome and hospitable entertainment await them. The preachers will prepare reports according to printed form furnished, and will see that the recording stewards have the Quarterly Conference Record Books present for examination according to Book of Discipline. I desire to engage in revival work during the Summer season. Will go wherever my services are desired.

Those who may wish my aid will please address me at Walnut Grove, Miss. E. L. RAWLS.

Algiers, La.

Our meeting, begun last Sabbath by Dr. Carter, our presiding elder, and continued through the week, was productive of much good. The attendance was fine, and the large congregation heard the Word with interest. Most all who attended were revived and benefited. My thanks are due Drs. Carter and Walker and Bro. R. H. Wynn for efficient aid. Bro. Wynn was with me all the week, and the people took greatly to him. He did us good. Praise God.

Warning.

To the Ministers of All Denominations in Mississippi and Louisiana:

I wish to give notice that a young man, giving his name as R. N. Mosely, is going from town to town, telling the preachers that his mother is dying at some given place, and he needs from one to two dollars to carry him to her dying bed. He got $1.50 from me, and went immediately to Canton and robbed our pastor, Rev. L. S. Jones, and the Presbyterian pastor also in same way.

An exchange has this:

The monster Krupp cannon brought as part of the German exhibit is now in place in the Fair grounds. The gun proper weighs 135 tons, is fifty-seven feet long, has a muzzle diameter of over sixteen inches, cost $250,000, and can throw 2,300 pounds of metal sixteen miles. It is, indeed, a wonderful weapon whose every discharge costs $1,100.

Shorthand.

There is wide demand for stenographers. Dr. Lafferty, of Richmond, Va. (for years the official stenographer to the Virginia Senate), has made the learning of the Congressional system of shorthand an amusement, by a series of witty, lucid, complete lectures, profusely illustrated. We have his volume ("A Vest Pocket Primer") easily slipped into the memory, and a hip pocket.

Mail him fifty cents, Richmond, Va.

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

A $19.00 Library for $12.00.

NINETEEN VOLUMES OF SERMONS

PREACHED BY

CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON

(THE GREAT LONDON PREACHER)

FROM 1856 TO 1889.

By special arrangements made with the Funk & Wagnalls Company, publishers, we are enabled to offer our readers complete sets of nineteen volumes, each, substantially bound in good cloth, and printed in large, clear type, on good paper, at $12.00. The regular price, per volume, for these is $1.00; total, $19.00 a set, so that by taking advantage of the opportunity we now offer, purchasers will save $7.00 on each set. The binding, paper, etc., of these volumes, are exactly the same as of those selling for $19.00 the set, or $1.00 per volume.

The size of each of the volumes is 12mo., 7½ x 5½. About eight thousand pages are contained in the series (19 volumes), and copious indices to texts, titles, and topics, are found in the books.

Spurgeon's sermons are of great value to all denominations. They are read wherever the English language is spoken. They have been translated into many languages and are popular throughout the world. In this country alone, we are told by Mr. Spurgeon, in the preface to one of his volumes of sermons, in 1859, over thirty years ago, more than one hundred and fifty thousand volumes of his sermons had been sold. It has been well written: "It is hardly an exaggeration to say that Spurgeon's parish has been the whole English-speaking world. Besides the myriads who have heard him in his own great Tabernacle in London, and the millions in many lands who have read his sermons, his name almost from the very beginning of his ministry has been a household word everywhere familiar and everywhere standing for one who gloried in this, that it was given him to proclaim the good news of the salvation through Christ. Kingdoms might wax and wane, revolutions might come and go, speculative theories might succeed each other in brilliant succession, yet the constant factors—human nature and the redeeming grace through Jesus Christ—remained the same."

No family library, no church worker, or Christian layman should be without a set of these remarkable and invaluable sermons.

James McCosh, D.D., ex-President of Princeton College, says: "Sound in faith and at the same time eminently practical and searching . . . clear and picturesque . . . full of lively illustrations, and faithful throughout."

J. W. Bashford, D.D., President of the Ohio Wesleyan University: "The great preacher of the common people among English-speaking nations."

Golden Rule, Boston: "Above our praise and beyond even our criticism."

Church Advocate, Harrisburg, Pa.: "A mighty spiritual power."

The Standard, Chicago: "As sermons they stand alone, unequaled by any other published sermons, by men now in the pulpit or by those of other generations."

The Congregationalist: "Full of the true spirit of Christ. No man since Paul could say with more emphasis than could Mr. Spurgeon, 'I believed, therefore did I speak.'"

President Andrews, of Brown University: "No preacher since the Apostle John has maintained himself in genuine pulpit power so long."

New York Observer: "Out of the fulness of the heart, his mouth poured forth treasures of wisdom, even the wisdom of God."

The Religious Telescope, Dayton, Ohio: "A wonderful spiritual insight of the truth of God's word and its special adaptation to the needs of the race."

The Christian Advocate (Meth. Epis.), New York: "He spoke as one having authority, not original, but derived from God. Every tone implied a consciousness that he was an apostle of Jesus Christ, placed there by Him, and speaking in His name."

The Churchman (Prot. Epis.), New York: "This century has not heard a voice raised for Christ with so complete a mastery of language, thought, and language as was exhibited by Spurgeon."

The Christian Intelligencer, New York: "The Gospel preached by Mr. Spurgeon was the power of God unto salvation."

Wayland Hoyt, D.D., (Baptist): "What loyalty to Christ; what exquisite analysis of the Scriptures; what vision into the spiritual life; what simple and searching application; what grip on truth; what luminous English!"

Rev. John N. Freeman (Presbyterian), Denver, Colorado: "No sermons or commentaries have more greatly stimulated and nourished my mind and heart."

The Watchman, Boston: "Charles H. Spurgeon has left a success of a pure, noble living man can be."

Church Review, Harrisburg, Pa.: "It is this deep-toned spirituality running through Mr. Spurgeon's sermons and writings which gives their remarkable power with the people."

Geo. A. Gordon, D.D., Boston: "No mind can compute the good that these sermons have done to humble souls the world over."

H. Valentine, D.D., Lutheran Seminary, Gettysburg: "An unsurpassed illustration of the power of the pulpit."

The Interior, Chicago: "His wealth of illustration made his thought drive home like an arrow. His intimacy with Scripture enriched every sermon, while his personal conviction of the horrors of evil and belief in the verities of life now and hereafter gave his speech an overwhelming impetus that brought hearts and minds into obedience with the truth."

IT FOLLOWS AFTER

—a disordered liver- that you're subject to attacks of cold or chills on slight exposure. You get "tired" easily. The feeling is accompanied by a "tired" digestion, which fails to assimilate the food. This often results in what we call Indigestion or Biliousness.

Dr Pierce's Pleasant Pellets rouse the liver to vigorous action, and this in turn starts the machinery of the body into activity. Liver, stomach and bowels feel the tonic effect, and in consequence the entire system is invigorated. The processes become self-regulating, and a reserve force is stored up against exposure to disease.

If you're too thin, too weak or nervous, it must be that food assimilation is wrong. This is the time to take Pleasant Pellets. They permanently cure Constipation, Sour Stomach, Dyspepsia, Sick or Bilious Headache, Dizziness and Jaundice.

Catarrh cured by using Dr. Sage's Remedy.

MISS FLORENCE E. BEHLER,

No. 37 Alma St., Allegheny, Penna writes: Derma-Royala works like a charm. My face was covered with freckles and in less than two weeks' time they are all gone. My complexion is now clear and white as a child's. Everyone can see what Derma-Royale did for me.

Mrs. Ella M. Murray, Newton, N. C writes: I have used one bottle and have found a great change. I had what the doctors here called Skin Leprosy—large brown spots, causing no pain or trouble, except the looks. Now they have entirely gone and I can recommend Derma-Royala highly. Please send me your terms to agents.

May Von Hoene, No. 87 Davton Street, Newport, Ky. writes: For nearly five years I was afflicted with eczema. My face was a mass of sores and scabs and the itching was terrible, I found nothing that could help me until I tried your Derma-Royale. I have not used quite a bottle and my skin is smooth and clear. I call myself cured, and consider Derma-Royala the greatest remedy in the world.

Miss Lillie Hanna, No. 28 Brainard Block, Cleveland, Ohio, writes: Your Derma-Royale cured my blackheads in two nights.

6183 SUCH TESTIMONIALS RECEIVED DURING 1892.

DERMA-ROYALE

The new discovery for curing cutaneous affections, removing discolorations and bleaching and brightening the complexion. In experimenting in the laundry with a new bleach for fine fabrics it was discovered that all spots, freckles, tan, and other discolorations were quickly removed from the hands and arms without the slightest injury to the skin. The discovery was submitted to experienced Dermatologists and Physicians who incorporated it with well known curatives and prepared for us the marvelous Derma-Royale. THERE NEVER WAS ANYTHING LIKE IT. It is perfectly harmless and so simple a child can use it. Apply at night—the improvement apparent after a single application will surprise and delight you. One bottle completely removes and cures the most aggravated case and thoroughly clears, whitens and beautifies the complexion. It has never failed—IT CAN NOT FAIL. It is highly recommended by Physicians and its sure results warrant us in offering $500 REWARD.—To assure the public of its merits we agree to forfeit Five Hundred Dollars CASH, for any case of eczema, pimples, blotches, moth-patches, brown spots, blackheads, ugly or muddy skin, unnatural redness, freckles, tan or any other cutaneous discolorations or blemishes, (excepting birth-marks, scars and those of a scrofulous or kindred nature) that Derma-Royale will not quickly remove and cure. We also agree to forfeit Five Hundred Dollars to any person whose skin can be injured in the slightest possible manner, or to anyone whose complexion (no matter in how bad condition it may be) will not be cleared, whitened, improved and beautified by the use of Derma-Royale.

Put up in elegant style in large eight-ounce bottles.

Price, $1.00. EVERY BOTTLE GUARANTEED.

Derma-Royale sent to any address, safely packed and securely sealed from observation, safe delivery guaranteed, on receipt of price, $1. per bottle. Send money by registered letter or money order, with your full post-office address written plainly; be sure to give your County, and mention this paper. FLOWERS.

Your voiceless lips, oh, flowers, are living preachers,
Each cup a pulpit, and each leaf a book,
Supplying to my fancy numerous teachers
From loneliest nook.

Floral apostles that, in dewy splendor,
Weep without woe, and blush without crime,"
Oh, may I deeply learn, and ne'er surrender,
Your lore sublime.

"Thou wert not, Solomon, in all thy glory,
Arrayed," the lilies cry, "in robes like ours;
How vain your grandeur! Ah, how transitory
Are human flowers."

In the sweet-scented pictures, heavenly artist!
With which thou paintest nature's wide-spread hall,
What a delightful lesson thou impartest
Of love to all.

Episcopal Methodism at the Forks of the Road.

Episcopal Methodism in America is at the forks of the road. The one leads to Congregationalism, the other back into the old path trod by our fathers. Or, it might be better to change the figure, and say that we are drifting into Congregationalism unless with fixed purpose and steady hand the ship is steered back into the old channel. As yet, the infringement of the letter and spirit of the compact by which the ministry and membership of Episcopal Methodism, for the glory of God and the good of the church, delegated to constituted authority, the distribution of ministerial labor, is confined to a comparatively few wealthy city churches. But, the number steadily increases. Precedent opens the way for repetition. The precious begets a spirit of restlessness that grows on the congregations thus humored, and it becomes harder and still harder to satisfy them. They seem to know very well what they do not want, but they are not agreed as to what they do want. Thus they incur all the disadvantages of out-and-out Congregationalism without its safeguards and compensations. It is a hybrid growth, sickly, misshapen. It is the contact, but not the cohesion, of opposing elements.

All must see that this is a state of things that can not last. Episcopal Methodism can not move on two distinct and opposing lines at the same time. It can not have one system for strong and rich churches, and another for the poorer and weaker ones. Already are heard the muttered thunders of a coming storm.

The license allowed to a few rich and exacting churches in the choice of pastors has developed a tendency toward the creation of an exceptional class of preachers who are their logical and inevitable correlatives. And it is an anomalous feature of the situation that in some of our Conferences it is assumed that men under whose ministry the leading churches have been brought to their present positions of prominence and power are incompetent to exercise the functions of the pastorate in behalf of the very persons they have brought into the fellowship of the church. Complaints with the demands of these unreasonable churches wheis and makes insatiable the appetite it is sought thus to appease. Faithful and capable men are put under the critical microscope, subjected to the cruel knife of the vivisectionist. The search is for the ideal pastor who has no existence save in the loose imaginations and impossible demands of official boards who seem to think that a "transfer" can somehow transform respectable mediocrity into the most brilliant genius, and change a commonplace preacher into a pulpit star of the first magnitude.

Do any ask for proofs of these statements? Are they not written in the chronicles of the "cabinets" of the Bishops and presiding elders, North, South, East and West? The perplexities of the episkopoi, the negotiations between the high contracting parties attending Conference sessions and ignoring the regular channels of information and suggestion, the heart-burnings of over-slaughed brethren, the disappointments and disasters that have resulted from these anti-Episcopal Methodist doings—what observer of current events, what participant in the administration of our ecclesiastical affairs, needs to be told of these things?

The church press has not been altogether silent, now and then uttering a warning growl, or perpetrating satires half-earnest and half-humorous concerning the so-called "girraffes" who feed in the high stalls of the favored charges, and from time to time dealing heavy blows direct against this growing evil. Most worthy men in our ministry, not ambitious or unduly sensitive, wincing under implied disparagement, have had to resist a conscious tendency to dissatisfaction and discouragement.

A concession and a confession may be admitted at this point. Preachers who had expressed much virtuous indignation because "transfers" were called to take the chief places for which they considered themselves eligible and to which they were looking in their own Conferences, have been known to exhibit the utmost alacrity in accepting the chief places in other Conferences over the heads of brother ministers not inferior to themselves in their qualifications and claims. But such inconsistencies do not invalidate the principles involved. Decency would dictate that these men should remain modestly silent, or at least keep within reasonable limits in the expression of their displeasure when preachers are transferred from other Conferences to take positions similar to those they themselves would be ready to accept in others. The weakness of our poor human nature is seen in the fact that a discontented grumbler in his own Conference has become a smiling incumbent of a chief appointment in another. Yet, making all proper concessions as to the bearing of such a fact as this, and allowing due discount for the weaknesses of human nature that will manifest themselves under this or any other system of ministerial supply, our problem is before us.

The choice must be made between the present drift in the direction of Congregationalism or a speedy return to the spirit and practice of our fathers. If we do not of purpose soon settle the question as it should be settled, it will settle itself by a process that will first distract and then destroy the most efficient ecclesiastical polity that has been known in the history of the Christian Church. But can the evil now be checked? Is it not now too late to turn the tide? Let four millions of living Episcopal Methodists answer.

It is not too late. We have had just enough experience of the wrong to make us wish to return to the right way of our fathers. We are warned, but not ruined. We have only to will it, and the evil ceases. That is to say, let both parties to the compact, the ministry and the laity, maintain good faith. Let the transfer power be so exercised as to conserve a genuine connectionalism; let the Bishops, backed by their constitutional advisers, the presiding elders, and supported by the membership of the church, refuse to ratify extra-constitutional contracts, thus discouraging the growth of place-hunting preachers on the one hand and pragmatic pastoral charges on the other; let there be one law for all alike.

Possibly there might be some loss to the church in effecting this reform. A few pastoral charges, puffed up with the conceit of their own importance, might be tempted to split off into independentism, or to seek congenial association among our kind neighbors who are always ready to open their doors for the admission of dissatisfied Methodists. But in the end such losses would prove to be gains. The members thus lossed would go out from us because they are not of us. The preachers who would leave the church on this account would be such as could well be spared. With the return of the church to the letter and spirit of the law with regard to the distribution of ministerial labor would come a nobler heroism, a truer spirit of self-sacrifice, a deeper spirituality, and such increase of aggressive power as would start the church on a fresh career of conquest. The Lord's poor, the Lord's middle class, and the Lord's rich who are also rich in faith, would stay with us in happy fellowship in the church of their choice and their love. From the ranks of our ministry we would lose no man who is a worthy successor of the men who laid the foundations of Episcopal Methodism in prayer and toil and self-sacrifice and labors abundant.

Of what is borne in upon me in relation to this question this is the sum:

1. Episcopal Methodism in America is at a pivotal point in its history, and must now choose this way or that.

2. The evil that threatens its integrity and its ruin has gone far enough to disclose the peril, but not too far for recovery.

3. As it is purely a question of ecclesiastical administration, the remedy is within easy reach, and may be applied at once. With sufficient courage in the administrators there will be found sufficient loyalty in the membership to arrest the evil and to make the reform both thorough and abiding.

4. As God hath so wondrously blessed this form of Methodism, the reform demanded is worth all it will cost to all concerned, and should be inaugurated now with purpose of heart. Then let the word go forth, and let all good Episcopal Methodists say, Amen!—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, in Zion's Herald.

Wasted Lives.

Traveling over the vast plains of the south and west, one is profoundly impressed with the enormous quantity of valuable land of the most fertile and productive kind, and able to sustain tens of millions of human beings, and yet utterly barren and waste—simply from the want of water. The rain rarely falls on these desert wastes, and no springs flow through the arid plains; but here and there we come to a little oasis in the desert, where the fields are green, and the fruit trees of every kind hang heavily laden with the rich clusters of the orchard and the vine.

What is it causes the difference? The soil is just the same. Experts tell us that this desert land is the richest in the world. The secret is simply this: The oasis is watered, the desert is dry; and yet there are streams within immediate reach of all these wastes. The only thing that is necessary is to bring the water from the neighboring mountains and irrigate the plains, and then the desert will blossom as the rose.

How like all this are many human lives! They have all the possibilities of highest usefulness and blessing, and yet they are empty and vain, bearing only the thorns and weeds, and sometimes the wild flowers and the fruits of the wilderness.

All that they need to develop the hidden possibilities is the water of life, the floods and fountains of the Holy Ghost to pour into their emptiness and quicken into life all the capacities of their being, and they, too, will become gardens of spiritual freshness and fruitfulness. And for them also the fountains are near at hand. The hills of God lie hard by, and they are full of living fountains, which the hand of faith may bring in irrigating streams through every part of their lives.

Every human being is simply a great possibility, worthless without God and incomplete without the Holy Spirit; but filled with him, the commonest, the meanest, and most wrecked and wasted existence may be reclaimed, like the oasis from the burning desert, and like it may be transformed into a paradise of beauty and blessing.—The Christian Alliance.

Life was given for noble purposes, and, therefore, we must not part with it foolishly. It must not be thrown up in a pet, nor sacrificed to a quarrel, nor whined away in love.—Collier.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

HEAVEN.

A TRUE INCIDENT.

BY WILLIS BOYD ALLEN.

The lesson hour was nearly past
When I asked of my scholars seven,
"Now tell me, each one, please, in turn,
What sort of a place is heaven?"

"Oh, meadows, flowers and lovely trees!"
Cried poor little North-street Kitty;
While Dorothy, fresh from country lanes,
Was sure 'twas "a great big city."

Bessy, it seemed, had never thought
Of the home beyond the river;
She simply took each perfect gift,
And trusted the loving Giver.

Then up spoke Edith, tall and fair—
Her voice was clear and ringing,
And led the Easter anthem choir—
"In heaven they're always singing."

To Esther, clad in richest furs,
'Twas a place for "out-door playing;"
But Bridget drew her thin shawl close,
For "warmth and food" she was praying.

The desk-bell rang. But one child left—
My sober, thoughtful Florry;
"Why, heaven just seems to me a place—
A place where you're never sorry."

In Japan

ATTENDING SERVICE.

In the preceding letter you walked with me to Sunday morning breakfast. Now, if you wish, you may imagine yourself attending service with the little congregation of believers. It is a dwelling-house rented until a church can be built. You might not distinguish it from the other houses of the street save for the perpendicular sign-board, with MATSUYAMA METHODIST CHURCH written on it in Japanese. From the street you may catch hold of the little door, slide it back, and enter. The few square feet of earth inside are almost covered with shoes, and your own must be doffed. Sliding back another doorway, and stepping up, it is in order for you to make salutations to all present. If the service has already begun, you may reserve the bowing until the close. At some places the services are more generally attended, but here none are apt to be found except believers and earnest seekers. These will bow their heads in prayer both just after taking seats and just before leaving them. Any of the believers will pray in public if called upon. They expect nothing else. One young man's tongue was very stammering last Fall when he became a probationer, but eloquence shows itself in his prayer now sometimes.

In all Japanese audiences some heads are apt to be bowed as in deep meditation. Some say that this shows respect to the speaker, as if the words move the heart and cause deep thought; others say it is because the speaker's words do not interest, and again it is said that, since the Japanese have been accustomed to sit on their feet, this bowing position is natural to them at all times, whether on the mat or a bench.

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, March 4, 1893.

MR. EDITOR: With your kind permission, I will say a few words to the young readers of the ADVOCATE. I am a reader of your dear, good paper, and wish to express my appreciation by introducing myself to the "Young Folk's column." Well now, cousins, I am a farmer boy and enjoy the occupation very much. I live in the country and fancy country life. But we should and can make bright the home whether we live a country or city life. How important is home? and how many neglect it? How many of the cousins can say they have bright, cheerful homes? Think of the many gloomy, disagreeable homes in the country. Look at the many families that are divided against their respective homes, each member being for his or her own good pleasure. Cousins, let's put in and improve our home circle, for I think that is so important and sacred. Sunshine is what we want. Kind words and acts are what we must have. We must deny ourselves. Cousins, what is life, if we live not for others, rather than our own good pleasure? Now, boys, I make a move that we make a shining mark along this line. Who will second it? I would be very glad to hear from my friend, Mrs. L. C. Sadler. I have two brothers she named, and I think so much of her. Cousine, do you enjoy writing? I fancy writing best in the world. Now, I will express my every good wish, and solicit your prayers.

Your sincere friend, J. A. GLOVER.

Black Hawk, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As this is the second time that I ever attempted to write to the dear old ADVOCATE, I hope that these few lines will not find their way to the waste basket, and that I may see them again in print. We have reorganized our Sunday-school at old Brooklyn Church again this Spring, but it is moving off very slow at the present time; but we hope and trust to God that we may have a better school in the future. Bro. T. M. Bennett is our superintendant this year. We have preaching at Brooklyn twice a month. Bro. P. Burkett is our pastor this year, and I love him very much, and he is not only loved by the writer; he is loved by all. Our next quarterly meeting will convene at Brooklyn, which will embrace the first Sunday in June. Elder White is to be with us then, and we hope that we will have a glorious time. I will bring my letter to a close by asking the little cousins, Where is the word "grieved" found in the New Testament?

Your little friend, J. L. ANDERS.

Brooklyn, La.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the ADVOCATE. My uncle takes your dear paper, and I like to read it very much. I am going to school now, but it will be out April 27. My teacher's name is Miss Blanche Brooks. I like her very much; she is so kind. Our pastor's name is Bro. J. L. Buling; he is a splendid preacher. I have neither brother, sister nor father, but a kind mother. I will answer the question: Where was "Tis" found in the Bible? It is found in Leviticus XXV, 5. I hope this will not reach the waste-basket.

Your unknown friend, B. PEARL DIX.

Waterford, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Here comes a little Pelican boy, asking for admittance into the nice circle of young folks of the dear ADVOCATE. I enjoy reading the letters and try to answer the questions. I will answer that of "G:" Noah was six hundred years old at the time of the flood. How nice it is to give each other something to search and study for! I study the Sunday-school lesson with mama, and was pleased with the book of Job. Where originated the saying, "There's death in the pot?" Will some of the cousins tell? With best wishes, Your friend,

VAUGHAN WATKINS.

Newellton, La.

MR. EDITOR: I write to answer the questions that have been asked in the latest ADVOCATE. Methuselah was the oldest men that ever lived and died before his father. D. W. McLean is M. F. McLean's Sunday-school superintendent. "Jesus wept" is found in St. John xi, 35. I will ask the little cousins a question: How many times is "spectacle" found in the Bible, and where? Prof. Curtis is our Sunday-school superintendent and also our school teacher. Mrs. Wooten is my Sunday-school teacher. I have not been absent from Sunday-school a Sunday this year. Mrs. Curtis is my school teacher. I like her so much. Bro. B. S. Rayney is our pastor. We all like him so much. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Dr. Carter, I remember meeting you at the commencement at Jackson, La., also your visit to our house. Papa would be glad to see you at the District Conference at Pelehatchie, Miss., July 7. I remain,

Your friend, EFFIE J. MCDONALD.

Forest, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to the dear old ADVOCATE, I thought I would write, hoping it will not find its way to the waste-basket. I am a little girl nine years old. My father died when I was seven. I had but one pet, my little baby sister, and she died last July. We live with grandpa on the farm. I like living on the farm very much. Grandma takes the ADVOCATE. I love to read the children's corner. Grandma has been taking the dear old ADVOCATE twenty-three years. Our pastor's name is Bro. Singletary. We like him very much. I would love to attend Sunday-school, but live too far in the country. I will close by asking a question: Who was the meekest men spoken of in the Bible? I remain,

Your unknown friend, ANNIE THOMAS.

Delhi, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old, but this is my first letter to the dear old ADVOCATE. I have two sisters and three brothers, but they are all older than I am, so I am the baby and pet. I wish to answer Noalica Wells' question. "Jesus wept" is found in St. John xi, 35. I will ask the children a question: How many times did Jesus weep? and where it is found in the Bible. Bro. W. T. Curtis is our pastor this year, and we all love him very much. We are going to build a parsonage at Pouchatoula soon. I hope the Lord will bless the work and help us. With God's blessings on your paper and your readers, trusting that God be with us till we meet again, I remain,

Your friend, CHRISTENE STOCTZNER.

Maxwell, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl fourteen years old. I live near Mechanicsburg, Miss. We do not take your paper; but a friend of ours who lives in sight does, and sends it to us to read every week. I love to read the little cousin's page. Our pastor's name is J. W. Ellison. We all like him very much. He carried my little baby sister up to see my married sister, who lives six miles above us, Friday. We have a nice Sabbath-school at Mt. Olivet. As this is my first letter, I will close, hoping it will not reach the waste-basket. I want to ask the cousins a question: Why was Daniel cast in the lion's den? Your little friend,

BELLE COOK.

Mechanicsburg, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind to publish my last letter, I will write again, and answer Myrta Anders' question. "Kite" is found in Leviticus xi, 14 "Industrious" in 1, Kings xi, 28. As I have answered Myrtha Anders' question, I think she ought to answer mine. I am going to read the Bible through end I will find "its" (if it's in there). H. OTIS WHITE.

Mt. Carmel, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy ten years old. I have three brothers. Our preacher is Bro. M. L. White. We like him very much. I am not going to school now. My father is a farmer and lives in Covington county, Miss Well, I must close, hoping to see my letter in print. I remain as ever, Your friend,

CARLEY HUDSON.

Santee, Miss.

A Small Swarm of B's.

Be earnest! Half heartedness will not accomplish one-half so much as whole-heartedness will, rightly handled. Be earnest!

Be honest! "Honesty is the best policy," and the best policy will often be found along the way which honest men travel. Be honest!

Be straight! Not only "straight as a string," but the rather "straight as an arrow," if you would be sure to "hit the mark." Be straight!

Be watchful! "Watch out," and "watch in," as well. Also "watch and wait," if you would not let opportunity slip by unnoticed. Be watchful!

Be considerate! "Consider your ways, and be wise," and having found the ways of wisdom, walk therein "all the days of your life." Be considerate!

Be amiable! A "cross-patch" may pass by on the other side without being asked to "come back our way," while all the world likes to go hand in hand with amiability. Be amiable!—Good Housekeeping.

"Hobson's Choice."

Did you know that the familiar phrase, "Hobson's choice," preserves the memory of a very good and useful man?

Thomas Hobson was born in 1544; he was for sixty years a carrier between London and Cambridge, conveying to and from the university letters and packages, also passengers. In addition to his express business, he had a livery stable and let horses to the university students. He made it a rule that all the horses should have, according to their ability, a proper division of work and rest. They were taken out in regular order, as they stood beginning with the one nearest the door. No choice was allowed, and if any man refused to take the animal assigned him he might go without any. That or none. Hence the phrase "Hobson's choice."

Mary and Her Dog.

Such a pretty story I read the other day about a little girl named Mary, who lives in Pennsylvania. In some way she fell and broke her arm, and had to stay in bed for a long while. Her playmate came to see her, and often brought her beautiful flowers, of which she was very fond. There was something else, too, which Mary loved dearly, and that was her dog, whose name was Bob. He seemed to feel very sorry for his little mistress, and he noticed how happy the flowers always made her. So he thought he would give her a bouquet, too. Away he went into the yard, and plucked a mouth full of plantain leaves. Then he hurried back to Mary, put his forepaws on her bed, dropped the leaves, and wagged his tail, saying as plainly as any dog could, "Don't you think my flowers are pretty, too?"—Selected.

PHILLIPS—WILLIAMS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. E. Williams, April 20, by Rev. B. F. Phillips, Dr. Ed. L. Phillips to Miss Kete Williams, all of Booneville, Prentiss county, Miss.

LOVETT—Johnnie Everett Lovett was one of the victims of the fearful cyclone that visited Pachuta, Miss., on the N. O. and N. E. R. R., on the third of March. He lost his life in the ruins of his home. The storm struck the house about seven o'clock at night, and mother and children were all caught in the wreck and lay there in terror until they were extricated. The mother, Mrs. Lovott, was lying imprisoned in the debris of the falling building, and was near enough to see her dear dead boy, but could not extend her loving hand to touch him. It was an awful night of suffering for them all, and they have not yet recovered from the shock they then received.

Johnnie was a good boy. He was kind, obedient and affectionate to his mother and father. He was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, and attended church and Sunday-school regularly. He was a member of the Children's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Pachuta, and contributed liberally for a boy who had to earn his own money. At his death he had saved up some money for the missionary cause, and now that he is gone to God in heaven, his heart-broken mother requests us to send this, his last contribution for the cause of missions, to the editor of the ADVOCATE, wishing that it will be used to the most useful way for the glory of God. One thing that makes this a pathetic offering is the entire family has been left in a destitute condition. What the terrific storm left to them was consumed by the fire fiend, so that nothing of that once happy home now remains. All that was not swept away by the cyclone was burned up, and the family is left homeless, and most of them are sick from the fright, injury and exposure of that awful night of excitement and suffering. It was with a loving heart and tearful eyes that Johnnie's mother made this small contribution in dutiful memory of her darling child. It is a mute, but eloquent tribute of affection, and speaks the wish of her boy's heart, whose lips are now exclaiming the praises of him whom it was his joy to serve in his childish way with such unwavering fidelity.

We learn he was born on Nov. 28, 1880, and was buried on Sunday, March 5 1893, and now, doubtless, dwells in the city which hath foundations whose maker and builder is God. It is exceedingly sad to have so young a life surrendered; and under such afflicting circumstances, when that life had promise of such a bright and hopeful career; but such is the will of our Father in heaven, to whom we bow in resignation, only saying in our sad hearts:

Our precious friend from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
God, in his wisdom, has recalled
The boon his love had given.
Sad though the body moulders here,
The soul is safe in heaven.

HARRISON—Susan A. Harrison, wife of Joseph Harrison, sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, April 5, 1893. She was born in Greenville County, Va. She was the daughter of Braxton Newsome. She was married to Bro. Joseph Harrison on Feb. 4, 1836, which was her birthday; married in the county and State where she was born. She professed faith in the Savior before her marriage, and joined the Baptist Church; but on account of her peculiar views in reference to close communion she, with her husband (who also first joined the Baptist Church), joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived a consistent member till the day of her death.

The closing scene of her life was one of great peace and faith; her last words were, "Jesus, lover of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly." In the dreadful cyclone which passed through our village the house in which they were living was blown to pieces, her wrist was broken; but that had gotten about well. She died of that dread disease, consumption. She was in her eightieth year. She had no children, but left an aged husband to mourn her departure, who expects to meet her again in the rest that remaineth to the people of God. Her pastor,

THORNTON—Died in Smith county, Miss., sister Martha P. Thornton, March 29, 1893, wife of J. G Thornton. Sister Thornton was born in Jasper county, Miss., Feb. 28, 1850; was the daughter of Emanuel and Mary Rogers; was married to J. G. Thornton, Jan. 29, 1867. She was the mother of ten children; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, 1875; lived consistent up to her death. Said she was willing to depart, willing to die.

The bereft husband and orphans have our sympathies and our prayers. Live at the cross, then you will rejoin her in your heaven.

JOHNSON—Memorial service on the death of Bro. James R. Johnson, trustee:

Whereas, Bro. J. R. Johnson, an official member of the Quarterly Conference, Coushatta charge, Shreveport District, Louisiana Annual Conference, departed his life at his home in Red River parish, La., on Jan. 1, 1893, leaving a beloved wife and four orphan children to mourn his loss; And, whereas, Bro. Johnson was a kind and affectionate husband and father, a good citizen, and a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, one of its strong supporters, and had served same faithfully as a steward and trustee; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the bereaved family, and commend them to him who alone can afford consolation in this said bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of deceased, also to the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that they be copied in our Quarterly Conference record.

ROSS—I write to tell our friends that our sweet mother, Mrs. E. K. W. Ross, went to heaven last Sabbath eve. She was in Farmerville with her sister. She seemed well Saturday morning but was found insensible in a short while. She remained unconscious until the next evening at six. She sweetly fell "asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,

From which none ever wakes to weep."

Her dear remains were carried by loving hands to Bastrop, where she rests beside our sainted father.

I was looking for her to come to us on a long-promised visit. I have not seen ma for twenty-one long months. (We were never separated so long before.) I had so much to ask her about little things, that only our mothers want to hear, and they only know how to advise. I still catch myself planning for that visit. I went to the depot, or sent one she loved, for more than a week, and one day she seemed so near I prepared something she loved for her. At last I received a letter from her postmarked Farmerville, and I said, "Grandma has gone to see our dear auntie first, as in her sadness she needed her most; then she will come to us." But now there is no visit promised. She went to her Savior, and reunited with those whom she had so long mourned. She was a Christian. Thank God for Christian parents! Their influence can never die. Let us trust in our father's and mother's God. He is too good to do wrong. We bow in submission.

Now I want to thank all those who so kindly paid the last sad tribute of respect to our dear mother. Pastor and dear friends, every word, song and flower is appreciated by her absent loved ones (and those who were there). I was denied this sad, sweet tribute, and I here place a flower and say, "Good-by, my own sweet mother."

God gives us only one mother. Reader, pray for us, her sorrowing children; and if your dear mother lives, love her and tell her so. It will do her good. I regret that I did not do it oftener, and wish I could put my arms around her once more, and say, "I do love you, my mother."—She knows it; but tell her before she slips away, as mine did. Then it will be "too late." Just six of us left—six in heaven. Oh! may we be an unbroken family when He comes to make up his jewels! is the prayer of

SALLIE ROSS RANDLE.

HERRINGTON—Miss Maria Brown was born in Bayou Sara, La., Aug. 17, 1812; was married to James Higgens. After his death to Canty Herrington, who preceded her to the grave several years. After this event she lived with her daughter in Lake Charles, La. She came to this parish on a visit to her son, James M. Higgens, where she was taken sick, and after several weeks of suffering she quietly passed out of this into the life beyond. She joined the Methodist Church in 1837, and lived a consistent member until her death, which occurred April 5, 1893.

She loved the church, and worked faithfully for its upbuilding. During the war she was of great value to the church in Lake Charles, while our ministers were absent, in Sunday-school work. I visited her several times during her last sickness, and always found her patient and submissive. She enjoyed the reading of God's Word, the sweet songs of Zion, and the prayers. She was ready for the summons, and has joined the host of God's Israel on the other side, leaving several children and grandchildren, with a host of friends, to mourn her death. May God's grace sustain the bereaved, and may they all meet in the home beyond!

T. S. R.

The following resolutions were passed by the M. E. Sunday-school at Jackson, La.:

Whereas, It seemed best to our Father in heaven, who in his great love does all things for our good, to remove from our midst our little friend, Richard Holcombe, a member of this Sunday-school; And, whereas, We have known and admired the purity of his short life, and had learned to love little Dick; And, whereas, We deeply feel the absence of his bright face, even though we feel that beyond the "dark valley of the shadow of death" he has entered into the shining portals; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the death of our little Sunday-school scholar. That we have lost, in his death, one of the most promising pupils of this Sunday-school; and that a copy of these resolutions be preserved in the archives of the school, and that a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and the Feliciana for publication.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The New Orleans Delta, after nearly three years journalistic life, has suspended publication.

An artesian excavation to the depth of 3,000 feet was made in Galveston without striking rock or water. The contractors were paid $76,000 and further work abandoned.

The Chinese in San Francisco are acting very sullenly about the Chinese Exclusion law. They have refused to register, and seem to think no actual steps can be taken to remove them. In fact, they laugh at the idea of the law going into effect.

Visitors in Chicago this week have been having a hard time to get anything to eat. The waiters have been all on a big strike for $20 a week, and many of the big restaurants, after vainly offering $15, have closed their doors. On the Fair grounds the waiters have been working for $15.

The rule to close the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday was rigidly enforced on May 7, at least, so far as the ticket-purchasing public was concerned. The fortunate hundreds who held passes were admitted, however, and allowed to wander about the grounds at their will.

A rear end collision between two freight trains on the Dayton and Michigan Road took place, on May 6, near Tadmore, north of Dayton. The first train had stopped for water and the succeeding one ran into the rear end of it. Six tramps had hidden themselves among some railroad ties on one of the cars, and when the shock came five of them were killed outright and one was injured. The trainmen escaped without injury, and the damage to the trains was slight.

The Mississippi River Commission left St. Louis, on May 6, on the steamer General Barnard, on their semi-annual tour of inspection. The tour will last about ten days, and that part of the river extending from Cairo to the head of the passes below New Orleans will be visited. The commission will also take in the mouth of Red river and the head of the Atchafalaya, both of which are under their jurisdiction. The chief object of their inspection is to carefully look over the improvements of the river and to report the condition of levees, landings, wharves, etc., to the department at Washington.

The corporation of the city of London has voted the sum of £2,500 as a present to the Duke of York and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, in recognition of their bethrothal.

The army bill was rejected in the German Reichstag, on May 6, by a vote of 210 to 162. The resolution signed by the Emperor dissolving the Reichstag was immediately promulgated, and the assembly is now dissolved.

A stir has been created in medical circles throughout Southern Mexico over the announcement of a noted physician of the City of Mexico, that he has discovered the typhus fever microbe, and that he has deducted a positive cure for the disease. The new cure is being investigated.

The repression of the Cuban rebellion has been followed by manifestations of satisfaction and relief throughout the kingdom. The government will take steps to render the troops in Cuba more effective and to strengthen the coast guard. The administrative reforms contemplated by the royal government are such as will be likely to conciliate the Cubans.

Three important cities of Nicaragua have fallen into the hands of the revolutionists. The followers of Gen. Savaria, who is the real leader of the insurgents, have captured Granada and Masaya, south from the capital, and Matagalpa, which is east of Managua. All the country adjacent to these cities is controlled by the revolutionists, who appear to be confident of driving President Sacasa from power.

The town of Kowal, in Poland, about eighty miles south of Warsaw, has been visited by a destructive conflagration, resulting in the loss of many lives. The town has a population of between 3,000 and 4,000. Fire broke out and spread rapidly, consuming 116 houses, including the infirmary and the asylum. Not less than eighty persons perished in the calamitous visitation and 300 families were made homeless.

It is stated that the Siamese have resumed the offensive against the French on the Annam frontier. It is stated that 3,000 Siamese have been sent to the Mekong valley, and that the French consul declares the French position to be untenable. It is alleged that the Siamese government has ordered warships in England, in which country it is striving to negotiate a loan. It is further said that Siam has applied to Austria for 10,000 rifles.

"Brace up" is a tantalizing admonition to those who feel all tired out, without appetite and discouraged. But the way in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the tired frame and gives a good appetite, is wonderful.

The union dock laborers of Bristol, England, who struck, on May 4, against the employment of non-union laborers, have returned to work unconditionally.

A great teacher has said that the one best fitted to teach a child its alphabet was another child who had just learned it. The necessary enthusiasm and the assurance that another such child could do it, were present. A new convert's stammering speech, punctuated with exclamations of rapture, surpasses in attractiveness and effectiveness most irrefragable chains of logic uttered with ornate oratory. Did Dr. South's model sermons convert anybody? A single woman in a city I know has had the joy of leading a hundred Catholics to see Jesus and feel his converting power.—Bishop Warren.

HOW IT CAN BE DONE BEFORE THE FIRST OF JUNE.

Rev. D. L. Mitchel, publisher of the ADVOCATE, agreed with the agent that if the preachers and people of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conference would get 1,000 new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, he would turn over $1,000 to the endowment fund. Brother, how easy is this! You wanted to do something, but had not seen what you could do. Let every preacher send to the agent, J. W. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., five new subscribers. You will have blessed five homes. You will have strengthened our paper. You will have added $1,000 to our endowment. Now, brother, will you help? Let every preacher from the fifth Sunday in April to the fourth Sunday in May, both publicly and privately, urge upon our people the necessity of taking our church paper. If we do not reach the 1,000, Bro. Mitchel will still divide. Now altogether. Let me hear from you early and often. How many laymen will join us in this work? How many preachers and laymen will join our Gideon Band? Be sure and send your names and money to J. W. Chambers, agent, Jackson, Miss. This will prevent mistakes.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty sixth. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

The Great Exposition.

The continued bad weather is cause of much vexatious delay in the installation of exhibits. As a result of the quiet, the city papers and the public have had time and improved it, criticising the management, the World's Fair hotels and Boarding-house Bureaus. The first assault against the Exposition seems to have been made by the commissioner of the State of Washington telegraphing to a Tacoma paper that the people of the State had better stay away until "insolence and extortion ceased to be the order of the day." This was followed by a review in which the Times covered the honorable gentleman who is in charge of Washington's display all over with epithets of liar, fool, etc. In the same issue the paper took the management to task for extravagance and an intent to win glory at other people's expense. The controversy set people and pencil pushers to thinking and scribbling, and the next day brought forth a partial display of outrages. The following day the Tribune set out the hotels, etc., in a vigorous style, and it is now freely admitted that in the vicinity of the grounds and in various hotels and lodging-houses in the city the prices charged guests, not under contract, is exorbitant and intolerable. The City Council is now looking into the charges of restaurants, and is formulating an ordinance which requires every proprietor to place before the guest a complete price of everything charged for, and hence the seat at the table, the dish and the spoon will soon be expunged from the check given after the dinner is consumed. It must not be inferred, however, that one is required to submit to extortion in the city of Chicago, as there are thousands of places where one can sleep in a room by himself at a one-dollar-a-night rate, and an abundance of places where good meals can be had at from thirty-five to seventy-five cents per person. Before we have advised our readers to consult the commissioners of the States at the Headquarter State organizations, who are operating with a view to protecting rather than tooting the visitor's purse.

May-day, with its opening, has passed into history, and since there has been a very small attendance at Jackson Park, nor is it likely there will be until about the first of June. The management, through their friendly papers, lauded themselves and Chicago highly on the promptness with which the opening exercises were held, and it was under vast head-lines attention was called to the fact that the Columbian was the only Exposition opening its doors on the day promised. It is now beginning to dawn upon the citizens who have dollars at stake on the enterprise that had New Orleans, Philadelphia, Paris or any other place desired to toot horns and make speeches on the appointed day, and afterwards played to houses empty of people and devoid of exhibits, they could easily have done so. This too previous sagacity will likely result in harm in two ways: First, the expenses are augmented and the receipts not increased, and, secondly, the people may not come as soon as the exhibits are in place. It is the old cry of "wolf;" yet few men who run an exposition believe they can learn anything from a second reader. The work of placing exhibits is progressing nicely, and there is little probability that the Fair will not be in excellent shape by the first day of June. The railroads are getting a little worried over their traffic, for which they had made many expensive outlays, and the rush that didn't come is having the effect of causing them to reconsider the wisdom of their high tariffs, and it is likely a reduction in round-trip tickets will soon be made, or if not, that extensive outting will take place and the tickets will have premiums attached. The people are the masters. It is not a question of so much wheat or bacon to ship or spoil; it is now human beings, and they can ride or stay at home as they please. But the questions of rates, of sleeping and eating places are but the flies buzzing about the mastodon.

The Fair will be a great success. It is infinitely greater than one can imagine it, and is full of exhibits which will afford pleasure, profit and enlightenment to the vast throng which will have things their way, and will see it. Don't give up the idea of visiting Chicago, but wait until the favorable opportunity arrives. Make your arrangements in advance, and prepare to stay a couple of weeks at moderate cost.

Fifty-four carloads of art works and materials have arrived at Jackson Park from Italy. This is the first installment of goods for the Fair from there. The goods came by steamer to Portland, Maine, and were put on the Grand Trunk Line and shipped to Chicago. Twenty cars contained the wood carvings and materials, and represent the works of such carvers as Mariana, Boseral, Toso and Lanetti. The exhibit contains many pieces of antique furniture and wood carvings from the Industrial Museum of Naples. There were five cars devoted to laces, brocades, silks, tapestry and velvets. Four cars contained marble statuary from Florence. This will be used as models from which to work during the Exposition. Ten cars were taken up by paintings, works of art and statuary by some of the most noted painters and sculptors of Italy. Rare old vases, antique urns, quaint dishes from Florence, Leghorn, Nove and Pesaio are among the pottery and glass exhibits. The Venice-Murano Company has begun the establishment of a glass manufacture on Midway Plaisance. Three carloads of the goods that came last Friday were to be used by them as models, and also they received a lot of material from which to work. In the lot were beautiful vases, Mosaics and works of art in glass in Greek and Roman patterns. This carload also contained three specimens of cameo glass which are imitations of Roman cut glass. The process of making these had become a lost art until this company succeeded in making them again. This one company received exhibits valued at $80,000. Joseph Guetta, of Venice, who represents nearly half of the Italian exhibitors, superintended the placing and grouping of exhibits. One could spend weeks in this exhibit alone, as every piece assumes new beauties the longer you examine it. Among this collection are many pieces which have the greatest interest from a historic point of view.

Brazil's exhibit is not less interesting, though it differs somewhat in character from the Italian exhibit. Brazil made a very generous appropriation to the exhibit, and it reaches in the neighborhood of $60,000. There were 2,220 bags of coffee, and there will be enough in the exhibit to give every visitor at the Fair a taste of coffee as it is brewed in the New Republic. The exhibit also contains 128 cases of the choicest wines. There were twenty-one cases of minerals, and inasmuch as they mine diamonds in Brazil, they have an exhibit of diamonds. They also contribute a large amount of paintings and art exhibits to the Art Department. Among this lot is a grand statue of Christ, which is the only one received at the Fair. Brazil has a magnificent wood exhibit. Chief Robinson has fifty-eight packages of machinery from Brazil in his department. Aquarollo, in Spanish, means a water-color painting; but a New York customhouse officer, who undertook to translate this announcement, as it appeared in the Brazilian invoice, sent a statement to Collector Clark's men at Jackson Park that there was a painting in the display produced by Artist Aquarollo. The recent revolutionary troubles in Honduras will prevent them having an exhibit at the Fair. They have relinquished the space which was assigned to them.

"High Steeple and Its Official Staff," by Bishop A. G. Haygood, D. D., in April number of the Review for 1893, and "Episcopal Methodism at the Forks of the Road," by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, D. D., in the Methodist press generally, are suggestive and thought-provoking papers. Some are ready to ask, "What is the matter, that two such papers appear about the same time by two such men?" Bishop Haygood's paper is broader, longer, and more comprehensive, and Bishop Fitzgerald's is confined to one point, one particular thing. Have these men sighted the breakers? and is there really any danger ahead? Are we slowly, but surely, drifting towards Congregationalism? Some things indicate that the trend, particularly in the "High Steeple" strata, is in this direction. Some of our churches have already taken that road, and they are now several miles from the "forks of the road." The "High Steeples" are on one road, and the low steeples and the rural charges are still on the old road. Time increases the distance between the two. Bishop Fitzgerald says, "It is not too late to mend." I seriously doubt the correctness of this statement. I think the disposition, the desire to mend, is wanting. In all our charges we are Episcopal in form, and in some of them Congregational in fact. No one knows this better than our Bishops. They are in the place where two seas meet; where Episcopacy and Congregationalism come together. They stand in the "forks of the road," and see the "High Steeples" file to the left and the low steeples move straight forward. They exercise the episcopal office in appointing the pastors of the low steeple and rural charges, and they sign the contracts the "High Steeple" churches have made, or understood, with their pastors. In the one case they are superintendents of the churches, and in the other the signers of contracts. We are one in form, but double in administration—Episcopal in some and Congregational in other churches, or charges. This drift towards Congregationalism first began in the Methodist Churches in the North, and later it began in the South. Each succeeding year adds to the number of churches that file off into the road that leads towards Congregationalism. The signs are that the number of these will continue to grow, and to increase in power and influence. It is needless to say this "ought not so to be." Perhaps, from your standpoint and mine, it ought not. We believe in Episcopal Methodism, but our Congregational Methodist brethren do not, and so they have gone into that road, and claim that it is the better road of the two. Indeed, they say that Episcopal Methodism will do for the frontier, for the smaller towns and for the country charges, but that the cities and larger churches find Congregationalism better suited to them. No one now, at least not among us, will say that this or that form of church government was ordained and appointed of God. An assertion of this kind, either for Episcopalianism or Congregationalism, tends toward exclusiveness and High-Churchism. When one comes to think that he has a divine right in matters of government, he expects everybody else to acknowledge it and bow down to it. It always has been so, and always will be so, while men are men. Men, equally honest, read the blessed book, and one finds the Episcopal and the other the Congregational form of government intimated, if not clearly set forth. God left this matter to men, to times, seasons, conditions, circumstances, nationalities, and the like. A change of conditions may call for a modification of the administration, if not for a change in the form of government. Have we made the "forks in the road," or have "the forks" grown out of conditions over which we had no control? Shall we go back and begin over, or shall we accommodate our economy to the changed conditions?

After all, the trouble we have in "High Steeple" and with "its official staff" may lie deeper than we, at first, might suppose. Certain it is that the whole responsibility for the lack of discipline does not lie with the pastor. The power once committed to the pastor in our Episcopal Methodism is a thing of the past in the Congregational Methodism of the present. The power of the Bishop is a thing of the past in these churches, too. With this change of power—by concession, assumption, elimination, or transfer—there comes also a change of responsibility. The episcopacy confers the power on the pastor, and holds him responsible for the administration of discipline. Congregationalism confers the power on the church, and holds it responsible for the discipline of its members. In the one case the pastor is the shepherd over the flock; in the other he is the servant of the flock. In the first he calls the sheep and they follow him, and in the second the sheep call him and he follows them.

The questions outlined, if not first raised, in the two communications above referred to, are worthy of profound study by our Methodist preachers and people everywhere. It is sad, but true, that an effort of the pastor to exercise discipline in "High Steeple" church nearly always results in an appeal from the "official staff" to have him moved. The Bishop generally hears the staff, and finds a call for that preacher in some other charge. Congregationalism has its way even with the episcopos or episcopoi.

GILDEROY.

Columbus District Conference.

The Columbus District Conference convened at Mayhew, Miss., Thursday, April 27; Dr. T. C. Wier, P. E., in the chair. W. V. Connell was elected secretary. All the preachers of the charges answered to their names. Seventeen lay delegates were present.

Thursday was devoted to the discussion of Sunday-school topics. Nearly all of the members took part in the discussion. Suggestions were made that, if acted upon, will benefit all of the schools in the district.

Revs. J. M. Barnes, W. L. Graves and F. A. Whitson, of the Aberdeen district, favored us with their presence. Rev. G. W. Baohman, colporter for the North Mississippi Conference, was with us; also Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent for Millsaps College, was on hand to represent "our college," and emphasized the idea that it is our college.

The preaching was of a high order. Revs. Babb, Allen, Chambers, Kendall, Mitchell, Newsom, Jones and Dorman preached with spiritual power, to the edification and improvement of the people.

Dabney Lipscomb, A. J. Erwin, W. L. Lipscomb, and W. V. Connell elected delegates, and G. D. Harris and J. M. Archer alternates to the Annual Conference.

Next District Conference will be held at Crawford.

By the direction of the Conference, I send you for publication resolutions on "Woman's Work in the Church," and (No. 2) on "Church Literature."

Respectfully,

W. V. CONNELL, Sec'y.

Mayhew Station, Miss., May 10, 1893.

WOMAN'S WORK IN THE CHURCH.

Whereas, Women constitute the majority of our church membership, and do so large and necessary a part of its work, being in many places its life, spiritually and otherwise; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, as a District Conference, we look not upon the Christian work of our women in a patronizing way; but, on the contrary, do most cordially endorse, commend and encourage them in their noble efforts to help their brethren in the gospel.

Resolved, That in the performance of this work we believe they are rightly fulfilling their mission as set forth by both precept and example in the history of the early Christian Church, according to the New Testament record.

Resolved, That we bid them God-speed in their missionary, parsonage aid, Christian temperance and other work for the church, and pledge them our earnest co-operation as far as possible.

DABNEY LIPSCOMB,
R. M. STANDIFER,
J. T. MURRAH.

CHURCH LITERATURE.

Whereas, The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is the Conference organ for the North Mississippi Conference; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are satisfied with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as a religious journal, and recommend it to the consideration of all our people as a paper that ought to be in every family, and we heartily recommend its circulation among our people.

Resolved, That the Nashville Advocate is the organ of our church at large, and is worthy to be circulated and read by our people.

Resolved, That we are pleased to have with us Rev. G. W. Baohman, our Conference colporter, and we bid him God-speed in his excellent work, and that our prayers follow him in his labor of love, and that Mr. Baohman is hereby invited to visit our works as in his wisdom he may deem necessary.

K. A. JONES,
D. LIPSCOMB.

Archæology and the Bible.

The work of archæologists in the far East is bringing to light evidence as to progress made in the arts of life, in what may be termed patriarchal times even, which it has been the fashion hitherto with skeptical writers to dispute. As we recall the passage, Renan in his "History of Israel" questions if the art of writing, for example, was known, at least in Palestine, as early as the time of Abraham. Only a very few years since such a doubt might seem to be justified by lack of evidence, although it must always be hazardous to found theories upon what we do not know. In various particulars Bible study, especially study of the oldest books of the Bible, was at a disadvantage, in view of the fact that so little was known of the conditions of human life at a date so early. Recent discoveries are becoming so helpful that way, in their significance, and so pertinent to matters now in agitation, as to make them of remarkable interest.

It is now made certain by the discoveries at Tell el Amarna, in Egypt, and Tell el Hesy, the ancient Lachish, in Southern Palestine, that the art of writing was known all through those eastern countries, and correspondence carried on by letters as a common thing, even before the time of the exodus. The work just published in London by Major Conder, containing translations of letters found upon the sites we have named, has no less than 176 of such letters, written to the King of Egypt and to various official persons about 1480 B. C. They include letters from Jabin, King of Hazor, Adonizedek, King of Jerusalem, and Japhia, King of Gezer, all of them contemporaries of Joshua, and all of them named in the biblical account of the conquest of Canaan. The letters refer to this invasion by the Hebrews under Joshua, and are, accordingly, documents contemporary with those events which the Book of Joshua describes. They are, of course, exceedingly suggestive as to the date of that book itself; inasmuch as they indicate in it a degree of accuracy in matters of detail little likely to be found in writings made centuries later.

A writer in the April number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, referring, in general, to inferences justified by these recent discoveries, of which we note only one or two examples, says: "The inferences from these facts, taken also in connection with the abundance of literature on almost every variety of subject which has been unearthed in the Euphrates Valley, and going back into the third millenium B. C., are far-reaching, and touch at many points the questions in Old Testament criticism which are so rife at present. If Abraham did not understand the art of writing and bring literature with him into Palestine, it certainly was his own fault and not that of his time."

Bearing less directly upon the same subject, is a fact reported from the excavations now in progress at Tell el Hesy, under auspices of the Palestine Exploration Fund. The monthly magazine published in London by the Fund, reports in its April number the discovery of "a smelting furnace for iron, attributed by Mr. Bliss (the gentleman in charge of the excavations) to 1400 B. C." In Judges i, 18, mention is made of "chariots of iron," made use of in war by "inhabitants of the valley," in Canaan. This discovery, quite incidental in its bearing upon Scripture history, is nevertheless significant as belonging to a class of such now frequently made public.

Prof. Sayce, so well-known as an archæologist and as an oriental scholar, has said: "The day of the destructive critic has passed, and it is time for the archæologist to begin to rebuild." All signs, indeed, indicate a time not far distant when it will be as manifestly impossible to bring, by any process of critical ledgerdemain, the date of the earliest Old Testament books down to a period centuries later than the events of which they are the history, as it is to discredit in a like way the history of Herodotus or the Commentaries of Julius Cæsar.—Standard.

Convention of the Mississippi W. C. T. U.

There is a God who hears and answers prayer. The W. C. T. U. Convention, held in Greenville, May 5-9, was a signal instance of answered prayer.

The Delta has been the stronghold of the liquor traffic in Mississippi, and Greenville the citadel of that stronghold. With fear and trembling, yet with our hearts fixed on God, we of the local union invited the convention to meet in Greenville. As the time of meeting drew near we leaned upon our Father more and more, and asked his help in all our preparations. Today there is praise in our hearts, thanksgiving upon our lips, for our faith has been abundantly rewarded.

The convention opened on Friday, May 5, at 9.30 A. M., and adjourned Monday, the eighth, at 1:30 P. M. The attendance was fine. Meetings were held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Every service was opened and closed with devotions, and at mid-day business was suspended for an hour of worship, as is the custom of all W. C. T. U. Conventions.

Much attention was given to the consideration of the plan of work for the coming year, and the plans adopted will result in closer organization and more aggressive work. The corresponding secretary will be paid, and will give her entire time to the work. Mrs. Spencer, State president of Alabama, was with us, and by her sweet spirit and fine executive ability assisted greatly in the business of the conventions.

On Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, the convention sermon was preached in the Y. M. C. A. Hall by Rev. John Knox Montgomery, of Illinois. As a preacher of gospel temperance, Mr. Montgomery has no superior. We wish he could canvass the State. Four services were held on Sunday, and the house was crowded at every service.

The meetings on Friday and Saturday nights were a revelation to the people of Greenville. Speeches were made by Miss Frances Grillin, of Alabama; Miss Belle Kearney, the pride of the Mississippi W. C. T. U., and by others not so well known. Miss Baer, of the Sophie Newcomb College, New Orleans, was one of the chief attractions of the occasion. Her recitation and lecture on physical culture elicited warmest applause.

So great was the interest excited that the Y. M. C. A. building could not accommodate the crowds who wished to attend, and, by special request, the closing service was held in the new court-house, and every foot of space was occupied. Our resolutions (our platform) were read, and a fine lecture delivered by Miss Griffin.

The convention was a grand success, and our prayer now is that the effect produced may be lasting.

The next convention will be held in Canton, Miss.

The principal officers elected are as follows: President, Mrs. L. S. Mount; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary Inge Hoskins; treasurer, Mrs. Pentecost.

N. N. S.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. F. N. Parker, Crowley, La., May 12: "Our meeting is steadily growing in interest and power. Congregations are large and increasing. Twelve professions of conversion up to last night; several accessions. We have much to praise God for. Pray for us."

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Como, Miss., May 8: "We have truly had 'refreshing times from the presence of the Lord' at Como. Bro. J. A. Whitehurst, of Gunnison, was with us except two services. His preaching was strong, his work generally effective, his sweet spirit taking and winning. The meeting was precious and fruitful 'all the way.' Thirty-five persons came rejoicingly into our church. These are true, kind, noble people."

Rev. W. W. Williams, Cockrum circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "This is my second year on Cockrum circuit. Since the last Annual Conference we have been trying to make an advance move. Every inch of the ground has been strongly contested, but we have had some success. The lines are more clearly drawn, the individuality of the church is better understood. We have better Sunday-schools, better prayer meetings, better congregations, better spiritual life, and more power in the body of Christ."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Lishon, La., May 10: "The Lishon circuit is well organized, with Lishon, Arizona, Mt. Zion and Salem as the several appointments. A most excellent people—generally religious, and much real consecration. We have Sunday-schools and prayer meetings at Lishon and Arizona; also the Epworth League in lively operation. At Mt. Zion and Salem our people are not so situated as to make it convenient for social meetings and Sunday-schools. We are having conversions and accessions."

Rev. M. L. White, Mt. Carmel, Miss.: "Mt. Carmel circuit is getting on finely. Second Quarterly Conference just closed. Every church was represented; every steward made good report. Presiding elder made good impressions. The presiding elder's and pastor's salary larger than last year. Prayer meetings, class meeting, Sunday-schools more interesting. Attendance upon public worship good. Four new subscribers to ADVOCATE; nearly all old ones paid up. Three Ladies' Aid Societies doing good work. Ten accessions to date. People very kind."

Rev. J. C. Mimms, P. C., Arcola and Hollandale, North Mississippi Conference, May 8: "Nearly five months have passed since we began work in this part of the moral vineyard. This is, indeed, a kind, hospitable people. They have manifested their appreciation of our services in many ways. Our congregations are large and attentive. The Master is blessing the labors of our hands. We have received eleven members, baptized thirteen infants, organized one Sunday-school. We now have one prayer meeting, two Sunday-schools, one Woman's Missionary Society, one Juvenile Society, one Ladies' Home Mission Society. All are doing well. Conference collections all in cash and subscription. Preacher's and presiding elder's salary all paid up to date. Pray for us."

IT IS TIME.

It is time to be brave. It is time to be true.
It is time to be finding the thing you can do.
It is time to put by the dream and the sigh,
And work for the cause that is holy and high.

It is time to be kind. It is time to be sweet,
To be scattering roses for somebody's feet.
It is time to be sowing. It is time to be growing
It is time for the flowers of life to be blowing.

It is time to be lowly and humble of heart.
It is time for the lilies of meekness to start;
For the heart to be white, and the steps to be right,
And the hands to be weaving a garment of light.

Constitutional Principle of Methodist Itineranoy as It Relates to the Pastor.

When a preacher becomes a member of the Conference he, by that act, surrenders the right to select his field of labor, and obligates himself to go where he is sent. He is not to be consulted in the matter further than to ascertain any peculiar facts governing his case. When this is done the appointment is made in the light of all the facts without his knowledge as to its location or character. When made and announced he has but one thing to do, and that is to go where he is sent, however averse to it he may be, or take the consequence of disobedience, unless he can give a good reason why he did not go. It may be poor pay and hard work, involving much sacrifice—the place where in advance of going, he knows he will not receive a hearty welcome; but, like Paul, he must say: "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus to testify the gospel of the grace of God." (Acts xx, 24.) The preacher who in the light of this truth becomes "a place seeker" displays a spirit of selfishness, and shows himself to be unworthy of the ministry in that he is willing to secure the best for himself at the expense of his brethren. He violates a solemn obligation inherent in his position, and proves himself capable of compromising principle to secure favor with a sin-loving public, and to secure himself in such places as he likes. I know nothing connected with the itinerancy more destructive of manhood than the spirit of place seeking.

The Church. This fundamental principle which debars the preacher from choosing his pastoral charge must, if it be equal in its burdens, debar the church from selecting its pastors. Otherwise it can not be worked. The church must surrender the right to select a pastor if the preacher is debarred from selecting his pastoral charge. The church, like the preacher, may through the proper channel make known the peculiarities with which it is surrounded. This may be done by either party under very peculiar circumstances, but it must be cautiously done that the principle be not infringed upon. This is not necessary very often, but when it is it is easily understood. Some are not willing to admit that this principle is equally binding on pastor and church.

A prominent layman charged that a certain preacher was wanting in modesty, for the reason that he was working to have himself sent to the church to which the layman belonged; but at the same time the layman was seeking another preacher for his church with far more zeal than the preacher had shown. To say the least of it, the layman was as immodest as the preacher; both violated a solemn compact. Another layman was heard to say that the rule is a good one in its relation to the preacher, but ought not to be so rigidly construed in its relation to the church. It must be as binding on one as on the other, otherwise you will drive from the itinerancy the best men in it—men who have a conscience and love fair dealing. In addition to this, if the preacher must go to the work to which he is sent, the church must receive the man that goes in obedience to "the powers that be." He may be the man they think they do not need or want, but he must go, and the church must receive him. Any preacher who is a willing party to a plan that looks to a trial sermon to secure for himself a given place, or other preacher, presiding elder or church, or representative of a church who joins in such a plan to aid a preacher in getting a given place or a church in securing a given preacher, is seriously infringing upon the principle under consideration. Petitions are only hurtful and out of order.

The Episcopacy. It is right for the Bishops to receive information from any reliable source and give it due consideration; but if he is going to act on it in making the appointments, he ought first to submit it to his council and secure their judgment in the matter. If he does not, he discredits the men whom he has appointed to represent him, and dishonors the office of presiding elder, and from this point of view makes an encroachment on this vital truth. The presiding elders have rights and grave responsibilities which must be respected if our itinerancy is a success. The Bishop who first had the characters of his presiding elders passed, and then announced to the Conference that they were worthy of credit, and were, therefore, the representatives of the preachers and the church, and his advisers, gave a logical obedience to every phase of this constitutional principle of the itinerancy. It met the approval of all who wished to respect it. The safest plan is for all information to go through this channel; but if not, it should be submitted to the presiding elders. This would do away with a habit, more or less indulged in by both preachers and laymen, of going to the Bishop secretly and making ex-parte statements, which gives rise to a suspicion of design and unfair dealing. Let the men in this office be trusted implicitly. If they be not worthy of confidence, put them out of office, and put in men that can be trusted. This is necessary to the successful working of the itinerancy. If in violation of this great truth, one layman is permitted to step in and represent his church and select his preacher, then consistency would demand that all members be admitted; and if this be done, then the right must be extended to the preachers, and they be allowed to represent themselves and select their own pastoral charges. But this would put the presiding elder, where no man could fill the office and retain his self-respect. It is not here sought to restrict the powers of the Bishop, but to so follow this inherent law that the rights of all will be equally protected. After all, the Bishop is the power that can save constitutional Methodist itinerancy. If it goes to pieces, the blame will lie largely at the door of our episcopacy. This fundamental truth in our working system must be protected at all hazards. Encroachments upon it from whatever quarter ought to be vigorously opposed by all who love and desire the success of the Methodist Church, who desire the salvation of the poor as well as the rich; for it is the only system that gives to every church a preacher, and to every preacher a church. Our unparalleled success as a church owes more to it than to any other one thing. Break it down, and we are done as a church; for whatever others have done, we can not live and grow under a congregational form of government. Adherence to it upon the part of all concerned will reduce friction to a minimum, do away with most of the complaint, and will well nigh hush the cry about "a one-man power." In view of the system there is not too much power lodged at any one place. It is only in view of the fact that the principle has not been too rigidly observed there seems to be too much power at some points.

Power, properly regulated by law as we have it, is a part of the system as a working factor.

The Remedy for the Church.

If Mr. Wesley was not inspired just as those of old were, he must have "asked wisdom of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it was given to him" abundantly. Perhaps no wiser or more successful "method" ever was, or ever will be devised for saving souls from sin, and building up the church in the most holy faith and godly life, than his system of "probation" and "class meetings," evidently prompted by the Holy Spirit; and, perhaps, the greatest mistake the Methodist Church ever made was in dropping those God-approved and Spirit-blessed means of grace. For now, instead of thus "training up the young and others in the way in which they should go," as expressly commanded, the church rather imitates an unwise and careless stock raiser who simply marks the younglings, and turns them out on the large to take the many chances of being devoured or dying, and the most of them either perish for lack of proper food and shelter, or stray off and are lost, or become worthless runts. For since the fold of safety and nurture has been demolished and so much of the vital pith has been taken out of original Methodism, lifeless, cold formality has taken the place of vital and joyous spirituality, and the observant and good people are lamenting the spiritually dead state of the church, and the anxious inquiry is, What is the remedy to revive and build it up again? Simply and purely, Wesley's Methodism is the remedy.

Some have suggested that the entrance be more sternly guarded; others, that discipline be more severely enforced; others, that "amusements be provided for the young," and "entertainments" to toll them and others into the church, etc. But "to quench smoking flax, or break a bruised reed" would hardly seem compliant with the expressed views of the Savior. And until the spiritual purity of the church be restored, it might prove about as difficult to have discipline rigidly enforced in the church, as it is to get people of the world to vote for moral reform, and get the officials to enforce reformatory laws, while they—the people and the officials—are themselves badly demoralized. And to expect worldly "amusements" and non-spiritual "entertainments" to convict the impenitent or cure the sin-sick souls and make genuine Christians out of sinners, would be about as big a mistake as for stock raisers to try to raise young animals and expect them to do well, with no other shelter from the severe storms of bleak Winter than the open canopy of heaven, and no other food to live and grow on but the cold frosts. For the class-room, which was the Methodist fold, wherein the young and feeble were kindly cared for and "brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and encouraged on in the way of life by kind and attentive sympathy and godly instruction, has been torn down, and nothing half as good has been (if it can be) substituted. Various other doubtful expedients have been resorted to; but is not formality fast increasing at the expense of spirituality? And a great "many have been added unto the church;" but have they been "such as shall be saved?" Much more money has been raised; but has it been as consecrated and well spent, and accomplished as much good proportionately. A great deal more show generally has been made; but has that not promoted more vainglory than genuine spirituality?

When the attention of Christ was called to the costly grandeur of the Temple, instead of expressing approbation of the colossal extravaganco, he rather reprovingly declared that "not one stone should be left upon another that should not be thrown down." Let us take warning. If a great deal less vain show had been made, and the money more widely distributed with more consecrated wisdom and economy? how much more good might have been accomplished! How many missionaries might be sent out and how many chapels might be built with the money wasted on costly edifices etc., for vain show? Is not more vainglory than spirituality promoted by this mistaken policy? It is a painfully obvious fact that the church has become very alarmingly "conformed to the world," with the deluded idea, it seems, of thus saving it! While the fact is, both the church and the world are being lost by the awful mistake. "Nothing but Christ, and him crucified," can save either. And this mistaken and fatal conformity of the church to the world is increasing alarmingly with correspondingly disastrous results. And that, notwithstanding the emphatic command stands positive, "Be not conformed to the world." Instead of "being conformed to the world," which knows but little of God, and less of his wonderful plan of salvation, we must "be transformed by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God," or we can not be saved, nor the church either. Mr. Wesley's terms of admission to the class meetings and membership in the church were merciful and encouraging as well as helpful and successful—simply "a desire to flee the wrath to come, and be saved from sin." But equally wise, just and safe was the promised condition, that those admitted on trial should "continue to manifest their desire to be saved from their sins," until they had proven, by their manner of life, that they were worthy to be members of the church, before they were admitted into full membership; and how can they be better trained and their fitness be better ascertained than by his plan of gathering them into classes, and watching over them in love and encouraging them by kind sympathy and godly instruction in regular meetings for that special and very important purpose? Everybody is expected by everybody else to be instructed in everything else but religion, which, while it is the most important thing in all the world, is the most neglected of all other things! Some opponents to Mr. Wesley's "methods" contended that the people would not attend the class meetings; therefore, it became expedient to drop them. That only proves that they had not been kept up as they should have been, or they should have attended, as when they were properly conducted. If that be not true, the argument against class meetings proves too much. For the same could be urged with equal propriety and force against all the other true means of grace, including even the church itself.

When the Holy Spirit convicts an individual of sin, he may "desire to flee the wrath to come," but not know how to "be saved from his sins." He then needs instruction and encouragement to help him on to God; for the enemy of souls is diligent in "seeking whom he may devour." To whom should those "desiring to be saved from their sins" most naturally look for the needed help and sympathetic encouragement? They used to resort to the class-room and seek light and guidance of the experienced and godly members. And wonderfully were they blessed and saved by those wise and helpful means of grace. They were cordially received and kindly encouraged to seek, and were successfully pointed to the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," and they were "built up in the most holy faith" until they became "strong in the Lord." And thus bright and shining lights were made in the church, which was then "as a city set upon a hill; it could not be hid," sure enough. But, alas! how is it now? It requires a magnifying glass of strong powers now to distinguish the church from the world, so "conformed" have they become. And there being now no class-rooms for regular meetings in which to instruct and encourage and build up those "desiring to be saved from their sins," as there used to be in our church, they are neglected and have to grope in the dark, and the most of them soon become discouraged; and if they don't give up in despair, and become worse than before, they remain miserable themselves and stumbling-blocks in the way of others.

Then, by all means, let us reinstate the Methodist Church just as Mr. Wesley, evidently guided by the Holy Spirit, established it and left it—without altering it one jot or title.

The Lord is unalterable; "he is the same yesterday, to-day and forever." He will not change his plan of salvation to suit the times and the people; they must always come to his terms to be saved. Let nobody be deceived. "God is not mocked; for what a man soweth, that shall he also reap, for he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

May the good Lord guide us all into the right way, and help us pursue it unto the end; for we all need his guidance and help—"every hour we need him." D. W. FOSTER.

Annual Meeting of the Board of Church Extension.

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension was held at Louisville, Ky., April 27-30, 1893. Present: Presley Meguiar, president; Rev. David Morton, D. D., corresponding secretary; John W. Proctor, treasurer; and Bishops J. C. Keener, A. W. Wilson, R. K. Hargrove, W. W. Duncan, C. B. Galloway, E. R. Hendrix, J. S. Key, A. G. Haygood, and O. P. Fitzgerald; and Rev. W. T. Harris, D. D., Rev. F. B. Carroll, D. D., Rev. H. C. Settle, D. D., Rev. C. I. Vandeventer, Rev. M. H. Neely, D. D., John Overbacker, John L. Wheat, R. B. Gilbert, M. D., Rev. B. W. Bond, D. D., Rev. S. M. Hosmer.

The business coming before the Board was considered with painstaking care and in great harmony of feeling. The report of Secretary Morton made the following exhibit of the work of the year:

RECEIPTS.

WORK.

The General and Conference Boards helped this year 431 churches, paying them	$85,276 10
The General and Conference Boards helped last year 427 churches, paying them	87,089 46
Showing increase of four churches and decreased payments of		$ 1,813 36

The General Board was ready to pay $4,700 to three other churches, but was prevented from doing so by the failure of these churches to return mortgages sent them for execution. Had these been returned we would have reported an increase of seven churches helped and increased payments of $2,886.64. Besides this we could have paid $900 to three other churches, but were notified that they were not ready to receive the money.

A resolution was adopted expressing the sympathy of the Board for Bishop Granbery, whose bodily affliction prevented his attendance.

The assessments for the year 1893-4 are as follows:

Alabama Conference	$ 4,700
Arkansas Conference	1,730
Baltimore Conference	3,600
Central Mexico Conference	290
Columbia Conference	150
Denver Conference	311
East Columbia Conference	150
